

The Reagan Myth Exposed

Witches and Rabbis

The Legacy of the Reagan White House

Michael A. Hoffman II

"Ronald Reagan was one of us...His mission was simple and clear: Defend the country he loved...His refusal to compromise principle converted America to conservatism...Ronald Reagan let the American eagle soar...A British statesman once said all political lives end in failure. As always, Ronald Reagan is the exception. We shall not see his like again."

Patrick J. Buchanan

Witches and Rabbis

The

Legacy of the

Reagan White House

Copyright©2004 by Michael A. Hoffman II
All Rights Reserved

Front cover illustration:
Joan Quigley and Menachem Mendel Schneerson

Published by Independent History & Research
Box 849 • Coeur d'Alene • Idaho • 83816

www.revisionisthistory.org

Annals of the Carnival Funhouse

Witches and Rabbis: The Legacy of the Reagan White House

In every generation an archetype of Antichrist appears. Mr. 666 himself, R-o-n-a-l-d W-i-l-l-s-o-n R-e-a-g-a-n, was one such archetype. Perhaps it was a coincidence that the address of the retirement residence he purchased for $6 million in Bel-Air, California was 666 St. Cloud Drive. Eventually, second wife Nancy, the Hollywood B-girl who is alleged to have conducted a brazen affair with Frank Sinatra in the White House, had the number changed to 668.

Hoffman, how dare you impugn the integrity of the statesman Peggy Noonan has rightfully dubbed, 'the King of Character'? Ronald Reagan was a hero of Western Civilization!

Surely you jest. What passes for Western Civilization these days is a vertiginous carnival funhouse, and the panegyric for Bonzo is a symptom of the double-minded mentality that is epidemic in this, the terminal phase of Western Syphilization.

Americans pride themselves on being part of a "free country" that has a "free media," but in fact Americans are highly susceptible to hypnosis and hype generated by mind-numbing pageantry and glamor, as dispensed by "authorities" and "experts" as well as politicians, clergymen, and the media. The adulation for Reagan, a betrayer of the American people and the executioner of the American dream, illustrates this process. Let the record speak for itself.

Reagan's Kosher Cash Cow

The financial power behind Reagan from the 1970s onward was billionaire Walter H. Annenberg, America's first multi-media mogul who controlled dozens of newspapers, magazines, radio and TV stations and TV Guide. With help from the Mafia, Annenberg's father, Moe, a Judaic from East Prussia, had built the Daily Racing Form into a monopoly gambling publication. In 1939 father and son were indicted for racketeering but only Annenberg's father was convicted and imprisoned.

Annenberg junior financed both the Israeli government and Republicans such as Richard Nixon. In return, in 1969 Nixon named him US Ambassador to Britain despite Annenberg's having had no foreign affairs experience. Annenberg was knighted by Queen Elizabeth. It was during his tenure as ambassador that Annenberg introduced Reagan to Margaret Thatcher. Reagan bestowed the Medal of Freedom on Annenberg in 1986. In 1988, at age 80, Annenberg arranged the sale of most of his media empire to Israeli partisan Rupert Murdoch, founder of Fox News. Annenberg died in 2002. (Source: Legacy: A Biography of Moses and Walter Annenberg by Christopher Ogden).

From left to right: Nancy Reagan, Barbara Marx, Walter Annenberg and Ronald Reagan, Palm Springs, 1976.

"Greatest Presidential Friend of the Israelis"

Reagan was named "the greatest friend in the White House that Israel ever had" by the arch Stern gang terrorist, Yitzhak Shamir. The memorandum of understanding which Reagan reached with Shamir is cited in our time as a basis for George W. Bush's "more Likudnik than thou" foreign policy disasters in the Middle East, which have exacerbated, not stemmed, terrorism and untold suffering.

After the 1982 Israeli holocaust against Lebanon, led by Menchaem Begin and Ariel Sharon, US Marines were positioned in the Beirut region, ostensibly to keep the peace, but actually to serve as sitting ducks in the hopes the Lebanese would perpetrate an atrocity and cement U.S.-Israeli ties. However, the plan went awry when the Marines were generally treated fairly by the Lebanese and a rapport gradually developed between Muslims in Beirut and the U.S. Marines on the ground which deeply troubled the Israelis. Following Israeli orders, Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, persuaded Reagan to order the battleship U.S.S. New Jersey to launch a massive artillery barrage of Shiite villages in the Shouf mountains above Beirut. When the shells started falling on the Shiites, they assumed the American "referee" had taken sides against them. Since they could not reach the battleship, they found a more vulnerable target, the exposed Marines. On Oct. 23, 1983, a few days after McFarlane's bombardment of the villages, 241 Marines in Beirut died in a retaliatory truck bombing.

Patron Saint of the Holohoax Lobby

Reagan Establishes the Cathedral of America's First State Religion and Enacts the Genocide Treaty

In October, 1988, President Reagan, accompanied by numerous cabinet secretaries including Secretary of State George Schultz and Interior Secretary Donald Hodel, as well as members of Congress, laid the cornerstone and broke ground for the first cathedral of a state religion ever established in the United States, the synagogue disguised as the "U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum" in our nation's capital. Like Reagan's holiday for Martin Luther King, Reagan's Holocaust Museum daily indoctrinates youth--not in the authentic history of World War II-- but in the anti-German racism and anti-Christian libels of the pathological, rabbinic "Holocaust" cult.

Reagan's speech at the groundbreaking, written by John Podhoretz, son of the Zionist lunatic Norman Podhoretz, is one of the most ominous and macabre anti-Western statements ever pronounced by any American leader. In his speech, Reagan describes a world in which Judaic supremacy prevails even as our civilization crumbles to dust: "We must make sure that when the tall towers of our greatest cities have crumbled to dust in the turnings of time, the Jewish people will still be on this earth to cast their blessings..."

In the following month, November, 1988, Reagan signed into law the United Nation's Genocide Convention Implementation Act, in the company of Rabbis Marvin Hier and Abraham Cooper of the Simon Wiesenthal Center; Stanley Treitel of the Agudath Israel organization and Morris Abram of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations.

President Harry S. Truman had ratified the accord in 1949 but Congress repeatedly rejected it, with conservative lawmakers arguing that the pact undermined the Constitutional rights of Americans and infringed on U.S. sovereignty. The Reagan administration successfully lobbied the House and Senate for passage. "I remember what the Holocaust meant to me...I am delighted to fulfill a promise made by Harry Truman and to all the peoples of the world--and especially the Jewish people," Reagan told the assembled rabbis and Zionists in Chicago as he signed away America's sovereignty.

Sources: Washington Jewish Week, Oct. 13, 1988; B'nai B'rith Messenger, Nov. 11, 1988.

Reagan the Liar

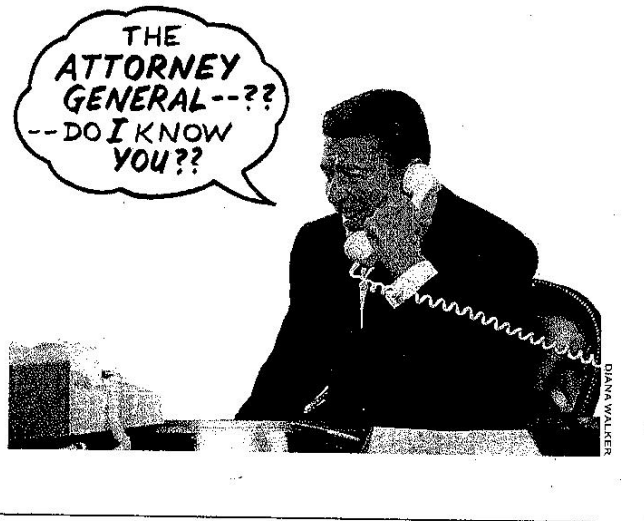

While on the lecture-circuit, Reagan would sometimes regale his audience with the tale of a heroic World War II bomber pilot who refused to bail out of his crippled B-17 on his way back from a mission, because his wounded gunner couldn't make the jump. Reagan said the pilot comforted the lad: "Never mind, son. We'll ride it down together." Reagan asserted that the pilot was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously.

But military author-historian Lawrence H. Suid relates that he could not verify Reagan's story, either through the White House or the Air Force history office. Suid eventually located the source. A World War II veteran recognized that Reagan's tale was too-perfectly similar to a scene in a popular 1944 Hollywood movie about the Battle of Midway, "A Wing and a Prayer," starring Don Ameche and Dana Andrews. In a climatic scene, the radio operator tells his pilot that the plane is afire but he can't move. The pilot returns, "I haven't got the altitude, Mike. We'll take this ride together."

Reagan was also accustomed to lying about his own alleged exploits. Reagan told his biographer Edmund Morris, "I was there at the liberation of the camps. I was there with Eisenhower's army. I saw the Jews being liberated. I saw the dead bodies." Actually, Reagan was not there. In 1945, Reagan was an adjutant in an Army movie unit in Hollywood, supervising editing of propaganda films about the concentration camps.

Questioned in February, 1990, about the illegal diversion of funds to the "Contras," and other crimes related to preliminary hearings in the prosecution of Admiral John Poindexter for lying to Congress, Reagan told his interrogators that he had no recollection of many of the key events. He said that he had forgotten the names of several key players in Iran-Contra affair. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General John W. Vessey, Jr. is a case in point. Reagan appointed Vessey the nation's top military officer in March, 1982. Three and a half years later, when Vessey retired, Reagan stood beside him at a flag-bedecked airplane hangar at Andrews Air Force Base and hailed him "for his years of service and devotion to America." Reagan said at the time that Vessey "presided over the restoration of American military strength and power at a moment critical to the fate of freedom." Reagan was asked about Vessey under oath. He did not remember him: "Oh dear," Reagan testified, "the name is very familiar."

The words "I don't remember" or their equivalents, occurred 124 times in his eight hours of testimony. Other "lapses in memory" included the identity of Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, chairman of the House Intelligence Committee during Reagan's presidency, the conclusions of the Tower Commission which Reagan himself had appointed, the conviction of his National Security Adviser, Robert C. MacFarlane for withholding information, and the identity of the Intelligence Oversight Board which advised him on matters of covert intelligence.

This was at age 79, long before the onset of Alzheimer's disease and a few months after Reagan had completed extensive speaking engagements in Japan, for which he was paid $2 million. A few weeks before his feigned bout of amnesia at the Poindexter hearings, Reagan had appeared on "Larry King Live," was the keynote speaker at a sales convention of Prudential Realty held at the Mirage Hotel in Las Vegas, and served as luncheon speaker in the Bahamas for the Sara Lee corporation. In every instance, Reagan demonstrated excellent powers of recall, defending his controversial Japanese speaking tour to Larry King and recounting intricate details of meetings with Mikhail Gorbachev at the Prudential convention. More than a year after the Poindexter testimony, Reagan gave a long lecture at George Washington University, in the course of which he betrayed the NRA and the Second Amendment and endorsed the Brady bill, mandating a seven day waiting period for the purchase of handguns.

According to the Los Angeles Times, Reagan was regarded as "highly believable" by only 16% of the American people in an August, 1989 poll.

Moreover, during his Poindexter testimony, Reagan's "memory lapses" never occurred on answers that bolstered his long-standing position that he himself had done nothing wrong.

Sources: Lawrence H. Suid, Guts & Glory: The Making of the American Military Image in Film. Edmund Morris, author of the Reagan biography Dutch, as recounted in "Reagan an actor at heart," Hollywood Reporter, June 8, 2004. "Reagan Denies Diverting Funds" and "Reagan Retains Charm but Not His Memory" in Los Angeles Times, Feb. 23, 1990, pp. 1, 20 & 23; "Reagan's Fall from Grace," Los Angeles Times Magazine, March 4, 1990. "A Surprise for the N.R.A.," New York Times, March 31, 1991.

The Witch of the White House

Reagan is a hero to "Christian" conservatives in particular, who have willfully ignored Reagan's demonic streak. For example, while Governor of California, Reagan instituted the most radical abortion-on-demand legislation in American history, in 1967, years before the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade ruling. As President, the schedule of his "pro-Christian" White House was set by a San Francisco witch, Joan Quigley, whose "psychic powers" were obsessively consulted by both the President and the First Lady for seven years. For instance, "Reagan wished in early December 1983 to announce that he would be seeking reelection, but Quigley judged the timing to be terrible. She forced the announcement to wait until January 29, a move that frustrated Reagan. What's more, she had him deliver the speech at 10:55 p.m., a late hour that had political commentators scratching their heads."

In another case, Reagan met with Mikhail Gorbachev for a document signing in Helsinki just after dawn, leaving everyone but soothsayer Joan and her familiar Nancy, shaking their heads in befuddlement, (the weird timing had been set by Quigley). It has even been said that in times of national crisis, Reagan would frantically ask Nancy, "What does Joan say?"

For non-Christians, soothsaying and astrology may not be an issue of concern. But what of the hijacking of the presidency by an unelected, secret personality who was unknown to the world until the publication of a book by one of Reagan's top officials? Reagan's former White House Chief of Staff, Donald T. Regan, was the first to expose the Quigley influence over the Reagan White House: "I wrote about astrology because it was an essential truth about the way the Reagans operated. It was a daily, sometimes hourly factor in every decision affecting the President's schedule...she who controls the President's schedule controls the workings of the presidency."

Quigley "was responsible for timing all press conferences, most speeches, the State of the Union addresses and landings of Air Force One." (The full impact of Quigley's counsel on Reagan's foreign and domestic policies has yet to be revealed).

For true Christians, the role of Quigley's occult arts in governing the Reagan presidency are grounds for alarm, revulsion and the gravest possible concern. Evil practices like these were the reason God drove the Canaanites out of the land. In Deuteronomy 18 the command is clearly given against "a soothsayer, or one who interprets omens, or a sorcerer, or a medium...For all who do these things are an abomination to the Lord." God prophesied that those who use these things will be dispossessed: "Yahweh your God drives them out...For these nations ...listened to soothsayers and diviners; but as for you, Yahweh your God has not appointed such for you."

Can one imagine the depth of depravity to which "Christians" have sunk when they embrace and uphold as a role model the very President who allowed these abominations to set the course of his presidency? Words cannot describe the shattering schizophrenia that is manifested by such insanity, blindness and hypocrisy on the part of split-personality "Christians" today. Is it any wonder that Americans have become, in the words of Wilmot Robertson, "the dispossessed majority" in their own land? We blame demonic forces for this dispossession but it is God who has dispossessed us due to the antichrists who rule in our name and to whom we continue to give honor.

"Let now the astrologers, the stargazers and the monthly prognosticators stand up and save you from what shall come upon you. Behold, they shall be as stubble. The fire shall burn them. They shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flame."

Isaiah 47: 13-14

Sources: Donald T. Regan, For the Record; also: Los Angeles Times, Nov. 21, 1989, p. A22; Orange County Register, March 15, 1990, p. A14.

Rabbi Menachem Mendel Schneerson Reagan's False Messiah

Reagan's closest religious crony was not a priest or pastor, but Menachem Mendel Schneerson, Grand Rabbi of the Chabad-Lubavitch wing of Orthodox Judaism: "Chabad's closest presidential relationship, (Avraham) Shemtov says, was with Ronald Reagan, who corresponded personally with Schneerson...Chabad delegations were both the first visitors to the White House when Reagan was elected and his last visitors on his final day in office."

The founder of Chabad-Lubavitch was Rabbi Shneur Zalman of Lyady, whose somewhat uncharitable doctrine that all gentiles are "completely evil," sub-human garbage ("supernal refuse"), who possess "no redeeming characteristics," is still imparted to students in Chabad-Lubavitch schools (many of these children are named "Zalman" in his honor).

In his old age, Rabbi Schneerson, did nothing to discourage the delusion that he was the Messiah. Even after Schneerson's death in 1994, many of his followers continue to claim that either he will rise from the dead or that he is in fact, still alive: "We believe that he is alive and well, and has only 'disappeared' temporarily, and that he will reveal himself at any moment." --Rabbi Zimroni Tzik.

According to Prof. David Berger, a lecturer in Jewish studies at Brooklyn College and at the Graduate Center of the City University of New York, "the messianists are no longer satisfied with identifying the rebbe (Schneerson) as the Messiah, but identify him as God himself."

By proclamation, in 1983, President Reagan established the birthday of this false messiah and "god", Schneerson, (March 28), as "Education Day USA" (it has been observed on various days in the spring, including March 26, April 2 and once on Hitler's birthday, April 20).

The ominous law which grew out of Reagan's repeated proclamations in Schneerson's name, Public Law 102-14, establishes a statutory obligation on Americans to obey the Talmudic interpretation of the "Noahide Laws" (a counterfeit name, since rabbinic tradition disparages Noah), which stipulate the death penalty for "avoda zara" (idol worship), of which, according to the halachic authority Maimonides, all who worship Jesus Christ, are guilty. So we have, thanks to Mr. Reagan, a law on the Federal statute books, which can be invoked at any time to establish legal grounds for executing those who worship Jesus as the second person of the Holy Trinity.

While Jimmy Carter was the first American president to officially flirt with Chabad-Lubavitch Judaism, it was Reagan who massively collaborated with them, formally creating the legal grounds for the subsequent 1991 Public Law 102-14, with his Proclamations 5317 and 5463. All subsequent presidents have reconfirmed Reagan's proclamations, and the former Press Secretary who gave George W. Bush his hypnotic cues from the audience (watch the videotape), during Bush's Purim 2003 "we're going to war in Iraq" news conference, was the Chabad-Lubavitch agent, Ari Fleischer.

Messiah Schneerson's cult continues to command influence and remains incumbent on all top government officials, whether of the Right or the Left. For instance, Rabbi Schneerson was collectively adored on June 17, 2004 in a civic ceremony at the prestigious John F. Kennedy Library in Massachusetts. Hundreds gathered for this seance, billed as "One People, One Soul." Co-sponsored by 22 Chabad Centers from greater Boston, it featured a keynote address by Talmud expert Rabbi Adin Steinsaltz of Jerusalem, and was attended by top US lawmakers and federal officials and who knows -- perhaps even the spectre of the late rabbi himself!

Sources: Sue Fishkoff, The Rebbe's Army (NY: Schocken Books, 2003), pp. 192-193; Yair Sheleg, "Waiting for a Revelation," Haaretz (Israeli newspaper), May 26, 2004.

Also see: <http://www.ukar.org/gore10.html>

Reagan's King Checkmates Americans' Rights

On November 3, 1983, Reagan signed the law establishing the third Monday of every January as the Martin Luther King, Jr. National Holiday. This law has nothing to do with the advancement of the civil rights of black people, who were saddled with a paralyzing welfare entitlement mentality commensurate with the rise of King, and who had been far better served by the empowering self-reliance creed of the now largely forgotten black educator, Booker T. Washington.

"An Image, Not Reality"

Reagan knew fully well, as he affirmed to New Hampshire Governor Meldrim Thompson, that Martin Luther King was a serial adulterer, plagiarist (having cheated on his PhD. dissertation at Boston University) and Communist party affiliate. "I have the reservations you have," Reagan wrote Thompson, "but here the perception of too many people is based on an image, not reality."

With a monumental shrug of his broad shoulders, Reagan knowingly committed one of the most treacherous acts of compromise of any president in our nation's history, signing into law the King holiday. By so doing, Mr. Reagan sentenced American children in public schools across the land to an immersion every January in King's crippling philosophy of entitlement, with its undercurrent of contempt for poor whites, whose ancestors were themselves slaves in 17th and 18th century America (not just "indentured servants").

With the exception of Abraham Lincoln, no American is studied in our public schools with the fervor and to the extent accorded Martin Luther King, not even our nation's founder, George Washington, who has been relegated mostly to serving as an icon of February clearance sales in advertisements for used cars and furniture.

King dedicated himself to overthrowing our immemorial rights to free association (i.e. the right to choose your employees and the customers you will serve in your business), and the right of private property (the right to decide to whom you will sell or rent your property). He succeeded when these rights were derogated by the misnamed Civil Rights Act of 1964. Imposing, by Federal fiat, a national holiday honoring King, institutionalizes the moral, ethical and legal rectitude of the assault on these rights.

Due to King and his enabler Reagan, we have raised a generation of American judges, legislators and students with no grasp of the necessity of these vital rights, and no memory of their hallowed, thousand year legacy. Instead, we now have millions of Americans too terrified of Federal enforcement agents to dare to hire or rent to those whom they most desire to employ or house. This represents a grievous abridgment of the civil rights of all Americans.

Morning in Reagan's America The US as Cheap Labor Colony

Reagan's war, like that of all US Presidents since Kennedy, has been not upon Communism or "evil empires" but on those forces arrayed against the Federal Reserve, in opposition to interest banking and the International Trade Cartel. Sir James Goldsmith in his book The Trap, analyzed the Cartel's tendency to "view any rejection of the global monoculture as a sign of either dementia or evil." This is the "very same system that the neoconservatives' mentor, Ronald Reagan, thought the most revolutionary in human history; a global monoculture that demands that "the particular peoples and unique cultures they generate must be dissolved in the universal stew," a pottage whose only real morality is the dispensation of consumer goods to the "atomized mass of consumers."

The Cartel from whom Reagan took his orders is rooted in the ideology of Jeremy Bentham and David Ricardo, philosophers of super-capitalism. Bentham was the first economist to argue on behalf of the "benefits" of sodomy, while the Judaic Ricardo was the model for the character Scrooge in Dickens' A Christmas Carol. Bentham and Ricardo were both convinced that they had discovered "the only model of society which benefits humanity." Reaganites believe they have the moral duty to ensure that the world adopts that model.

This was Reagan's "western civilization," his religion and guiding principle, not anti-Communism or Christianity. When Communism in Red China was threatened not with containment (Truman's doctrine) but obliteration (by Douglas MacArthur), it was General MacArthur, not Chariman Mao, who was deposed by the Federal government. In the case of Christianity, the creed of Jesus Christ is not a lip service religion of anemic Sunday School bromides, but a complete rearrangement of society based on economic justice, where crooked judges, the defrauding of a worker of a just wage and an economic system based on usury are interdicted or abolished.

Not since the days of Father Charles Coughlin has this truth of the historic Christian Church been imparted to the masses. Hence for befuddled American Christians, shylock interest rates and a predatory banking empire based on usury, are not an issue. As a result, they fail to see that ideologies, religions and nations are only attacked by the US government when they resist the International Trade Cartel. All those who oppose--or even criticize--the globalist trinity (usury, consumerism and Zionism) are regarded as "de facto agents of the Evil One."

After his reelection in 1984, Reagan began to press for the acquisition of a vast pool of coolie labor on behalf of his corporate patrons, due to the fact that most native-born Americans in that era would not work that cheap, insisting instead on a living wage, according to the ancient standard of the Church (I Timothy 5:18).

In order to lay the groundwork for the transformation of yeoman America into a cheap labor colony, Reagan championed a massive amnesty scheme for millions of illegal aliens, most of whom were Mexican nationals. In 1986, Reagan triumphed, signing into law the Simpson-Mazzoli Act ("IRCA"), granting the amnesty which almost immediately led to an unprecedented immigration invasion which has not abated to this day, and which in turn created vast financial burdens on California's medical insurance program; and the inflation of housing costs to unbearable levels, causing many native-born Americans to be unable to afford a home in California. Among so-called conservative notables voting with Reagan in favor of the amnesty were Jack Kemp, Newt Gingrich, Bob Dornan, Robert Michel, John McCain and Vin Weber.

Reagan had "anti-discrimination" provisions inserted into the legislation that made it a federal crime to prefer U.S. citizens over aliens in employment. According to former US Senate staffer Palmer Stacy, "at least three million" illegal aliens obtained amnesty under the law. The American Southwest was subsequently transformed into a crime-ridden outpost of a resurgent "Aztlán." President George W. Bush has proposed another calamitous, Reagan-style amnesty for illegal aliens on the same grounds and for the benefit of the same traitorous, predatory capitalist interests.

Sources: The Great Betrayal: U.S. Immigration Policy, 1965-1993 by Palmer Stacy; "The Russian Demon" by Wayne Allensworth, Chronicles, January, 1997. Jihad vs. McWorld by Benjamin Barber; "Hanging Poor Whites: Predatory Capitalism in Theory and Practice" by Michael A. Hoffman II (unpublished, work-in-progress).

Reagan and the Drug Cartel

The Drug Cartel has been lurking behind the scenes of every American administration since Nixon launched the "war on drugs" which guarantees huge profits for drug traffickers who have government connections. During the mid-1980s, the Reagan administration "pulled the rug out from under 'Operation Trifecta,' a DEA operation that could have decimated La Corporacion -- an international narco-cabal" that had infiltrated governments in three countries. Trifecta was a threat to the Cartel and Reagan quickly obstructed it. Source: Michael Levine, Deep Cover.

Reagan: Saddam's Ally

Ronald Reagan's foreign policy supported and maintained in power many of the protagonists in the Muslim and Arab world who have lately been branded as planetary threats to world peace, including Usama bin Laden, who was armed and funded by Reagan's CIA, and Saddam Hussein, Reagan's ally in the Iraqi-precipitated Iran-Iraq war: "...the Reagan administration for five years provided military intelligence, economic aid and covert supplies of munitions to Iraq's armies in support of Saddam Hussein's war with Iran. The administration ignored Iraq's use of chemical weapons..." which resulted in the mass gassing of Iranians at the Faw peninsula. Source: Washington Post, June 9, 2004.

According to investigative journalist Aaron Glantz: "America and Saddam thought the same way... America wanted to destroy the revolution in Iran. Almost from the beginning of the conflict, U.S.-manned AWACS aircraft leased to Saudi Arabia were used to relay intelligence to the Iraqi military.... Reagan... in November 1983... removed Iraq from the U.S. government's official list of 'nations that support international terrorism.' That opened the door to full diplomatic and economic cooperation between Iraq and the United States.... Saddam's foreign minister Tariq Aziz met Ronald Reagan at the White House. Following that meeting, the United States made its intelligence in the Gulf available to Iraq on a regular basis, and set up direct links between the CIA and the U.S. embassy in Baghdad... the Reagan administration largely ignored reports that Saddam Hussein was using chemical weapons against the Iranian army..."

In support of Saddam, Reagan had the US military fight on the side of Iraq in the Iran-Iraq war: "On October 8, 1987 U.S. warships destroyed two Iranian patrol boats in the Persian Gulf. Then, on April 18, 1988 U.S. warships blew up two Iranian oil rigs, sank a frigate and destroyed an Iranian missile boat." Source: Inter Press Service, June 13, 2004.

In terms of personnel, the George W. Bush administration is in many respects a repeat of the Reagan years, with Reagan operatives such as Alan Greenspan (nominated by Reagan to head the Federal Reserve in 1987), Dick Cheney, Paul Wolfowitz, Donald Rumsfeld, Colin Powell, John Poindexter, Elliot Abrams and John Negroponte sowing their tyranny and war-mongering under Bush, just as they did under Reagan.

The Commie Fighter Who Worked for the Commies

Reagan is alleged to be a redoubtable "Commie fighter." This PR spin overlooks the historic role the US government has played in ensuring the survival and expansion of the Communist slave system (in Russia by Henry Ford and Franklin D. Roosevelt; in Eastern Europe by Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman, and in China by George C. Marshall and Richard M. Nixon).

Communism only becomes vulnerable to destabilization by the US when it exhibits one of two defects: falling out of favor with the International Trade Cartel (Cuba) or falling out of favor with International Zionism (the USSR). Both Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson in the late 1960s and Republican Nixon in the early 1970s did ample business with the U.S.S.R. in ways that significantly bolstered the Soviet system.

It was only after a clear consensus emerged in New York, London and Jerusalem that the Judaics were scheduled to at long last terminate their world-historic Communist operations in Russia, and transform themselves into "victims of Communism," that Reagan was given the green light to play liberator. Yet at the same time our hero was acting this part, his Office of Special Investigations (OSI), a Federal agency which functions as an enforcement arm of international Zionism, was kidnapping elderly anti-Communist Christians and shamefully and disgracefully handing them over to the Communist butchers they had once fought. Most notorious in this regard was the Reagan administration's monstrous betrayal of the Catholic Croatian statesman Andrija Artukovic, an octogenarian who was keelhaunched on a hospital gurney back to Communist Yugoslavia in 1986, to the hideous glee of vengeful Judeo-Communists.

It is patent that on those occasions when his Judaic handlers sought to have him assist vicious Communist persecution, Reagan timidly obeyed his orders and collaborated. On the other hand, in those geo-political situations, such as in Russia, where, after 70 years on the road to nowhere, the Russian nation had been raped and drained to the point of collapse, and it was time for the "Holy People" to head for greener pastures in Brooklyn, Beverly Hills and Tel Aviv, Reagan was allowed to step in, on cue, and assume the mantle of "Liberator of The Evil Empire."

A Hero for Split-Personalities

Amid the sawdust of the American funhouse carnival, in the double-mind of the split-personalities who people that funhouse, Ronald Wilson Reagan is a paradigm of "the good and the true" in a "world of venal compromise." This hypnotic belief is similar to the mesmeric conviction that the occupant of the White House when Reagan died in June, 2004, George W. Bush, was capable of being a Skull and Bones secret society member and a good Christian; a papally-certified Right-to-Life campaigner and the politician who was instrumental in helping abortionist Alan Specter defeat the staunch anti-abortionist, Congressman Patrick Toomey, in the Republican primary battle for the US Senate in Pennsylvania in April of 2004.

It all makes sense, under the ensign of the grinning clown, in the funhouse chamber of thrills, chills and spills, in the words of the barker's spiel, "A hero, a giant, a knight, a prince, the king of character!" But when the klieg lights have all gone dark and the sawdust has been scattered on the wind, it is the rabbis and the witches who will write the final epitaph of the Reagan legacy, "an image, not reality."

