INDEPENDENT MEDIA STANDS IN FACE OF FERGUSON GUNFIRE WHILE MAINSTREAM MEDIA FLEES

INFOWARS REPORTERS STAYED AND REPORTED WHILE MSNBC RAN IN FEAR

While mainstream reporters from MSNBC and others ran away from gunfire in Ferguson, Mo., Infowars reporters Jakari Jackson and Joe Biggs stood their ground instead and continued reporting.

MSNBC's Chris Hayes in particular stopped his broadcast and ran for cover after hearing gun shots last night, but in complete contrast, Biggs and Jackson reported on the scene near the gunfire and even counted the shots.

"At one point in a five minute span, I counted about 100 shots," Biggs reported.

In general, mainstream media reported on the protests from designated "media zones" in relative safety far away from the protests whereas independent journalists were livestreaming straight from the front lines.

MIKE BROWN PROTESTERS ATTACK CHRISTMAS, MAKE KIDS CRY

“WE WANT YOU TO BE UNCOMFORTABLE SHOPPING”

On the night of November 28th, a group of Mike Brown activists took their “Black Lives Matter” protest to a mall in Seattle and disrupted a Christmas tree lighting ceremony.

Marissa Johnson, a protest organizer, told a local television station the protest was designed to harass Christmas shoppers.

“America goes where their pocketbook goes, so today we’re blocking Black Friday,” she said. “We want you to be uncomfortable shopping.”

In addition to drowning out children singing Christmas carols with chants of “no justice, no peace,” the protesters staged a “die-in” at the Westlake Center mall. They also blocked streets and intersections near Westlake Park.

The protest resulted in the mall closing early and police turning away shoppers.

Protesters also tried to close down an upscale shopping center in downtown Seattle by chaining doors shut.

“While I understand the hurt and frustration that our city has experienced in the past days, this is a city that respects the rule of law. I support the First Amendment rights of protestors, but violence against property or police officers will not be tolerated in our city,” Mayor Ed Murray said in a statement.

FERGUSON RIOTERS LOOTED BLACK-OWNED BUSINESSES

As part of their efforts to obtain “justice” for Michael Brown, rioters responded to the announcement that Officer Darren Wilson would not face charges by looting black-owned businesses.

One of the dozen buildings set ablaze by rioters was Juanita’s Fashion R Boutique, which is located at 9844 West Florissant.

Video of the incident shows the building completely gutted by fire as a number of individuals stand around laughing.

As a promotional video revealed, Juanita’s Fashion R Boutique is (or was before it was burned to the ground), “the largest black-owned boutique in St. Louis.”

In a separate incident, Natalie DuBose was pictured in floods of tears after her cake store was also targeted by looters. KMOV-TV reported that “The majority of stores that were damaged or completely destroyed during Monday night’s violent riots in Ferguson were minority owned.”

Although National Guard soldiers were stationed outside a shopping mall, no cops or Guard troops were in place to defend private property against looters and arsonists on West Florissant.

BLACKS SCREAMED “KILL THE WHITE PEOPLE” BEFORE BRUTAL MURDER OF ZEMIR BEGIC

SHOCKING HAMMER ATTACK LINKED WITH FERGUSON RIOTS

Video shot in the immediate aftermath of the murder of Bosnian immigrant Zemir Begic in St. Louis features a local resident revealing how blacks had chanted “fuck the white people, kill the white people” before the brutal hammer attack which took Begic’s life.

With the mainstream media seemingly keen to keep a lid on whether or not the murder was racially motivated and linked to the Ferguson riots, this new eyewitness account is nothing less than explosive.

Begic was killed in the early hours of the morning when a gang armed with hammers attacked his vehicle and then set upon the Bosnian as he tried to confront them.

Police insisted the attack was not racially motivated, while Begic’s family and other Bosnian immigrants who turned up to protest the slaying asserted otherwise. Two suspects were taken into custody, while two others, a black teen and a Hispanic teen, are still on the loose.

The clip above shows a local resident filming the scene from a distance as emergency personnel attempt to give Begic CPR.

“Arrest them all, fuck this shit,” he states, adding, “And, of course, it’s a white kid, right after black people running up and down the street yelling, ‘Eff the white people, kill the white people.’ This is what we have.”

As we documented earlier, there are numerous other examples of Caucasians being verbally or physically assaulted by black Ferguson protesters for little more than being white.

It appears that the demonstrations have taken a tragic turn for the worse, with Ferguson protesters taking their lead from the likes of Time Magazine, who published an article justifying violent riots, with whites now apparently being targeted in retribution.

As we reported, innumerable Twitter users have also called for the murder of Darren Wilson and other white police officers.

Ferguson protesters have openly called for violence, with one telling USA Today, “It’s sad to say, but this is the new civil rights movement for our generation, and there will be casualties and there should be bloodshed.”

Will the mainstream media report on what almost certainly represents a brutal and unprovoked racial hate crime that led to the horrific murder of Zemir Begic, or will this incident be swept under the rug in order to maintain the phony narrative that Ferguson protesters are peaceful?

As Alex Jones explained in depth on his broadcast, the Ferguson protests have been hijacked and manipulated to turn blacks and whites against each other, neutralizing a potential unifying alliance between all races in facing up to corruption and tyranny emanating from the state.

THE TSA WILL BE UNWRAPPING YOUR GIFTS THIS CHRISTMAS

WRITTEN BY PAUL JOSEPH WATSON

With holiday season approaching, the TSA is gearing up to fight the deadly threat posed by wrapped Christmas gifts.

An Infowars reader out of San Francisco sent us this image showing how TSA agents had unwrapped a book about herbs during a baggage inspection.

“The TSA has really gone too far. Now they are unwrapping our Christmas gifts for us,” writes the irate traveler. However, the TSA’s policy of unwrapping gifts is nothing new and has been happening for years.

“We don’t enjoy unwrapping presents that aren’t for us, but if an anomaly is detected inside, we’ll have to unwrap it in order to determine what it is so we can clear it for travel,” states a blog entry on the TSA website, which goes on to justify the procedure by pointing out that one traveler complained about his knife set being unwrapped. However, why a book about herbs would set off an alarm remains a mystery.

“While you can bring wrapped gifts through the checkpoint, TSA officers may have to unwrap a gift to take a closer look inside,” states the TSA’s official guidelines.

An image posted on Reddit illustrated how TSA agents had attempted to “re-wrap” a traveler’s gifts after ripping them open for inspection. Their skills left a lot to be desired.

Meanwhile, speculation is mounting that airlines in Europe could be forced to ban all hand luggage during the Christmas season in order to combat a dubious Al-Qaeda plot to blow up five passenger jets in a terror “spectacular”.

DC SCHOOLS STRIP CHRISTMAS FROM CALENDAR AFTER MUSLIMS COMPLAIN

MOVE DOESN'T GO FAR ENOUGH, SAYS PRESSURE GROUP

The Montgomery County school district in suburban Washington, DC has voted to strip Christmas from the school calendar after complaints by Muslims, who say the move doesn't go far enough.

In a 7-1 vote, Montgomery's Board of Education removed references to Christmas, Easter, Yom Kippur and Rosh Hashanah from next year's school calendar, replacing them with ambiguous terms such as "winter break" and "student holidays."

The decision was made after complaints by Muslim parents that the Islamic holiday of Eid wasn't being recognized.

However, the school district's failure to allow students time off for Eid prompted Saqib Ali, co-chair of Equality for Eid, to accuse education authorities of fostering inequality.

"Equality is really what we're looking for," Ali told WTOP. "Simply saying we're not going to call this Christmas, and we're not going to call this Yom Kippur, and still closing the schools, that's not equality."

School district spokesman Dana Tofig responded by pointing out that holidays are determined by likely absenteeism, not by adherence to religious commemorations.

"The absentee rate on the Eid holidays, when they've fallen on a school day, haven't been considerably higher or lower than it is on any other given day," said Tofig.

School board member Michael Durso disagreed, asserting that schools were effectively closing for religious reasons, while suggesting it was politically incorrect not to also allow a day off for Eid.

"It comes off as insensitive, and I just think we cannot afford to be in that light," said Durso.

Montgomery schools do offer excused absences for students who miss class due to religious holidays, meaning Muslims are not punished for staying home during Eid.

"They would remove the Christian holidays and they would remove the Jewish holidays from the calendar before they would consider adding the Muslim holiday to the calendar," complained Zainab Chaudry, also a co-chair of the Equality for Eid Coalition.

According to the 2010 census, the ethnic makeup of Montgomery County is 49.3% non-Hispanic White, 17.0% Hispanic or Latino, 16.6% black and 13.9% Asian.

"It is unclear how many Muslim students attend Montgomery schools," reports the Washington Post.

LEFT HAS GONE INSANE: WHITE CHRISTMAS SONG NOW RACIST

IT IS NOW RACIST TO USE THE WORD WHITE IN ANY CONTEXT

During the Christmas tree lighting ceremony in Rockefeller Square, Hootie & the Blowfish lead singer Darius Rucker sang “White Christmas.”

Posts on Twitter criticized Rucker, who is black, for singing the song written by Irving Berlin, a Jew.

The Left has truly gone insane. The song is about snow, not race.

It is now racist to use the word white in any context. If allowed to spread, the irrational insanity of the Left will destroy America.

FOOD SCIENTISTS: NEW GMO POTATOES 'EXTREMELY WORRISOME'

WOULD YOU EAT THE NEWLY APPROVED GENETICALLY MODIFIED POTATO NOW SET FOR COMMERCIAL PLANTING IN THE US?

Would you eat the newly approved genetically modified potato now set for commercial planting in the US? Studies suggest that most would not (though you won't even be told thanks to the lack of GMO labeling), and now major food scientists are speaking out over the reality that the Franken potato may come with 'worrisome' and unknown consequences.

Upon breaking the news of the first GM potato approved by the U.S. Agriculture Department to hit your dinner table, it was quite clear that the last thing the safety commission within the department seems to care about is public health. We already have a host of genetically modified crops contaminating the food supply, such as corn (over 98%) and soy (over 94%). And with this genetic manipulation of our crops, we also have a host of studies demonstrating that Monsanto's GMOs and Roundup herbicide (an integral part of these 'Roundup ready' GMO crops) have been linked to:

Infertility

Cell toxicity

Birth defects

Superweeds (which have consumed over 120 million hectares of farmlands)

And much, much more.

GMO

I Yet the US government still thinks it's perfectly fine to leave Roundup-doused GMO crops unlabeled on the shelves of your local grocery stores, and even inside your child's baby formula. It's no wonder that scientists are now speaking out following the news. More and more, professionals in the medical and agricultural industry are beginning to take a stand against what has become the international issue of food contamination and manipulation — from Monsanto's GMOs to the host of synthetic additives that we are consuming on a daily basis.

That's why, according to both a decent understanding of the issue and food scientists alike, we are about to face yet another wave of biological attack under the new GM potato commercialization. Here's what Doug Gurian-Sherman, Ph.D., director of sustainable agriculture and senior scientist at the Center for Food Safety (CFS), had to say on the issue: "We simply don't know enough about RNA interference technology to determine whether GE crops developed with it are safe for people and the environment. If this is an attempt to give crop biotechnology a more benign face, all it has really done is expose the inadequacies of the U.S. regulation of GE crops. These approvals are riddled with holes and are extremely worrisome... We need answers to these questions before these potatoes are commercialized"

Gurian-Sherman's statements were further expanded upon by Elizabeth

Kucinich, policy director at CFS:

“In light of the obesity crisis, there has been an important national push to discourage children and adults from eating large quantities of fried foods like french fries or chips. In creating the false illusion that fried potatoes are now healthy, the Simplot potato sends the absolute opposite message... Claims of health benefits by USDA and Simplot are short sighted, misleading, and in the light of the science, could actually be potentially dangerous.”

The time is now to share this information with friends, family, strangers, activists, and the apathetic. As we approach the latest ‘genetic time bomb’ sitting within our fields, experts are warning that the time is now to get serious about regaining our food supply through legislation and the spreading of key news.

GMO-LOADED FOOD CORP TARGETS NATURAL FOODS FOR BEING 'UNFAIR COMPETITION'

FOOD GIANT PANICS AS CONSUMERS RUN TO ORGANIC COMPANIES

Perhaps you've heard of Unilever? The company sells products under 1,000 brands, including Hellmann's mayonnaise Suave, Klondike, and TRESemmé. In addition to donating hundreds of thousands of dollars to shut down GMO labeling, the mega-corp has also decided to file a lawsuit against an upstart vegan mayonnaise-making company, claiming "false advertising and unfair competition."

A Hellmann's ad says:

"At Hellmann's, we make our mayonnaise with real, simple ingredients like good eggs, delicious vinegar and oils rich in omega 3. So it's definitely a step in the right direction. Lean about the Real Food Project at hellmanns.com."

However, if you take a look at this ingredient list and do a little deductive reasoning, you'll see that they have a reason to be nervous about a company who makes a healthier version of mayo: it's full of soybean oil (mostly made from GMO soy), non-organic eggs, likely from chickens who are kept in cruel circumstances, and made to eat GMO feed), and vinegar.

Heinz was recently targeted for claiming its vinegar was "all natural," when GMOs are less than natural. Will Unilever, the parent company of Hellmann's, face similar issues?

The Anglo-Dutch mega-conglomerate

Unilever said the vegan company Just Mayo, ". . . already is stealing market share from Hellmann's."

Oh, that is a little frustrating isn't it – when people vote with their dollars and refuse toxic food?

Unilever, which has also swallowed Ben & Jerry's, Breyer's, Lipton, Mrs. Filbert's, Slimfast, Close-Up, Noxzema, Q-Tips, Vaseline, and hundreds of other brands into its multinational guzzler, argues that:

"Hampton Creek's materially false and misleading Just Mayo name, packaging, and advertising has caused and unless restrained will continue to cause great and irreparable injury to Unilever."

Unilever is seeking to reverse the newfound success that Hampton Creek is experiencing with their new mayo product. The company wants Hampton Creek to "remove all jars from shelves, and pay Unilever three times damages, plus attorney's fees." Hampton Creek is also being told to start calling their mayo something else because it, "damages the entire product category, which has strived for decades for a consistent definition of 'mayonnaise' that fits with consumer expectations."

The FDA, Unilever points out, defines mayonnaise as including an "egg-yolk containing ingredient."

Now Hampton Creek has had to prepare a countersuit, partly to determine ‘what makes mayo mayo.’

Part of the legal tussle may have instigated because Hampton Creek posted on Facebook that it was “Beating Hellmann’s in taste tests,” and also posted a cartoon of a jar of Just Mayo with boxing gloves standing over a KOed jar of Hellmann’s and being declared “The Winner!”

Unilever was not happy. “Hampton Creek’s superiority claims are false because they are not supported by reliable testing that reflects actual consumer preferences.”

It’s easy to control the market as a mega-corporation with deep pockets.

DYSTOPIAN MOVIE 'IDIOCRACY' PREDICTED AMERICA'S CULTURAL DOWNFALL

MIKE JUDGE'S 2006 CULT CLASSIC IDIOCRACY PREDICTED OUR CULTURAL DOWNFALL SO ACCURATELY THAT ELEMENTS OF THE DYSTOPIAN SOCIETY DEPICTED IN THE MOVIE ARE ALREADY MANIFESTING IN 2014 AMERICA.

The plot of the film revolves around a U.S. Army Corporal who is selected for a suspended animation experiment only to be forgotten for 500 years, at which point he re-emerges into a dystopian society where cultural and anti-intellectualism dominate as a dumbed-down, irresponsible and unthinking population live amongst their own trash. Right at the start of the film the narrator states that the most popular movie at this time is called "Ass" and consists of nothing more than video footage of a man's buttocks for 90 minutes. Given that an image of Kim Kardashian's buttocks has captured global attention and become a topic of international conversation, how far away are we from resembling a society which embraces the intellectual bankruptcy depicted in Idiocracy? Our new national obsession with butts isn't the only way in which contemporary America is mirroring Idiocracy. As Cory Dudak points out in his article, 10 Things Idiocracy Predicted Would Happen and Sadly Already Have, "Some of the film's notions of where we're to end up are already on the fast track to becoming reality." Dudak points to numerous examples in advertising, television, technology, the food industry, language and music which almost mirror some of the satirical elements seen in Idiocracy. During an interview conducted by Alex Jones last year, Mike Judge, the creator of King of the Hill and Beavis & Butt-Head, told Jones that many aspects of Idiocracy were already coming to pass. "I was thinking about the way evolution works, there's no predators now," said Judge. "So it started with that but then I was actually in line with my daughters in 2001 at Disneyland at the teacups ride....there was a woman behind me who had this altercation with another woman, they both have their kids in strollers and they just start going off 'I'm gonna kick your ass'....I'm thinking this isn't what Disney had in mind." "I was thinking so what if this movie 2001 instead of everything being monolith and pristine and advanced, what if it was just like the Jerry Springer show and giant Wal-Marts, so I was thinking just take that chart from when it was made now and project it out and see where that would go," said Judge, adding, "a lot of the stuff that's in there is maybe starting to happen now instead of 500 years from now." Where do you think humanity is heading? Are we going to make it to the stars or is our future going to be held back by social engineers who have brainwashed armies of morons to think that staring at Kim Kardashian's ass is a valuable way to spend their time?

DEFEAT OF USA FREEDOM ACT IS A VICTORY FOR FREEDOM

IT WILL NOT SHOCK READERS TO HEAR THAT QUITE OFTEN LEGISLATION ON CAPITOL HILL IS NOT AS ADVERTISED

WRITTEN BY RON PAUL

It will not shock readers to hear that quite often legislation on Capitol Hill is not as advertised. When Congress wants to do something particularly objectionable, they tend to give it a fine-sounding name. The PATRIOT Act is perhaps the best-known example. The legislation had been drafted well before 9/11 but was going nowhere. Then the 9/11 attacks gave it a new lease on life. Politicians exploited the surge in patriotism following the attack to reintroduce the bill and call it the PATRIOT Act. To oppose it at that time was, by design, to seem unpatriotic.

At the time, 62 Democrats voted against the Act. On the Republican side there were only three no votes: former Rep. Bob Ney (R-OH), former Rep. Butch Otter (R-ID), and myself.

The abuses of the Constitution in the PATRIOT Act do not need to be fully recounted here, but Presidents Bush and Obama both claimed authority based on it to gut the Fourth Amendment. The PATRIOT Act ushered in the era of warrantless wiretapping, monitoring of our Internet behavior, watering down of probable cause, and much more. After the revelations by whistleblower Edward Snowden, we know how the NSA viewed constitutional restraints on surveillance of American people during the PATRIOT Act period. After several re-authorizations of the PATRIOT Act, including some cosmetic reforms, Congress last October unveiled the USA FREEDOM Act. This was advertised as the first wholesale PATRIOT Act Reform bill. In fact, the House version was watered down to the point of meaninglessness and the Senate version was not much better. The final straw was the bill's extension of key elements of the PATRIOT Act until 2017.

Fortunately, last week the USA FREEDOM Act was blocked from further consideration in the US Senate. The procedural vote was significant and important, but it caused some confusion as well. While some well-meaning pro-privacy groups endorsed the FREEDOM Act as a first step to reform, some anti-liberty neoconservatives opposed the legislation because even its anemic reforms were unacceptable. The truth is, Americans should not accept one more extension of the PATRIOT Act and should not endorse its continued dismemberment of our constitutional liberties. If that means some Senators vote with anti-liberty colleagues to kill the extension, we should still consider it a victory.

As the PATRIOT Act first faced a sunset in 2005, I had this to say in the debate over whether it should be re-authorized:

“When Congress passed the Patriot Act in the emotional aftermath of the September 11th terrorist attacks, a sunset provision was inserted in the bill that causes certain sections to expire at the end of 2005. But this begs the question: If these provisions are critical tools in the fight against terrorism, why revoke them after five years? Conversely, if these provisions violate civil liberties, why is it acceptable to suspend the Constitution for any amount of time?” Reform is often meant to preserve, not repeal bad legislation. When the public is strongly opposed to a particular policy you will almost never hear politicians say “let’s repeal the law.” It is always a pledge to reform the policy or law. The USA FREEDOM Act was no different.

With the failure of the FREEDOM Act to move ahead in the Senate last week, several of the most egregious sections of the PATRIOT Act are set to sunset next June absent a new authorization. Congress will no doubt be under great pressure to extend these measures. We must do our very best to make sure they are unsuccessful!

GRUBER'S GOOBERS: OBAMACARE DECEPTION

Tax? Penalty? Tax? Penalty? Either way, Obamacare is an order, a command, from on high.

The whole debate hides the real fact: people are being coerced into a system that kill and maims at a staggeringly high level.

No one in Congress or the White House brought that up during the process of promoting and passing the bill. Too hot to handle. Much too hot.

If you have a system that is already killing a huge number of people, and you make that system bigger and bring millions more people under the same umbrella, the death toll will accelerate.

The key journal paper on medical destruction is: Dr. Barbara Starfield, Journal of the American Medical Association, July 26, 2000, "Is US Health Really the Best in the World?"

Every year in the US, the medical system kills 225,000 people. 106,000 die as a result of FDA-approved medical drugs. The other 119,000 die as a result of mistreatment in hospitals.

I use the Starfield report because it is right down the middle of mainstream medicine. Before her death, Starfield was a widely respected public health expert. For many years, she worked at the Johns Hopkins School of Public Health. The Journal of the American Medical Association is as mainstream and prestigious as you can get.

I'm fully aware that independent researchers have pegged the death toll from the US medical system at a much higher number. But I wanted to show that, even in "The Club," the statistics are known to be horrendous.

Think about it. The US medical system kills 225,000 Americans per year. That adds up to 2.25 MILLION deaths per decade.

Not long before her death, I interviewed Dr. Starfield. I asked her whether anyone from the federal government had ever asked her to consult, to help fix the medical system. Her answer was a stark No.

I asked her whether she was aware of any significant government program directed at fixing the system. Again, she answered: No.

Try this fictional analogy. You work for the government in auto safety. You know two things. Every tenth car in America contains a fatal flaw that will cause a crash at speeds in excess of 40mph. And, as a result of new legislation lowering the driving age, millions more Americans will be on the road. What would you do?

US politics lives and thrives on PR, and PR makes its money from empty generalizations and promises. In the medical arena, it's all about "better care for all," "humane concern for everyone," "breakthroughs coming soon," "money for more research," etc.

This has nothing to do with the actual effects of the system. It has nothing to do with reality.

Well, here is the reality. By the most conservative estimate, the US medical system kills 2,250,000 people per decade.

That's the system that's heading for massive expansion under Obamacare.

You have a choice. You can go with the empty PR, or you can face the facts and realize what's going to happen.

"Well," some people have told me, "the politicians in charge don't really understand what the medical system is doing to people. It's just ignorance. Their hearts are in the right place."

And that matters? That argument has nothing to do with ongoing death stemming from standard medical practice.

The death statistics I'm citing in this article aren't a state secret.

Doctors chopping off women's breasts for no reason. Medical drugs putting people into the grave. Vaccines causing neurological damage. Psychiatric drugs blasting brains and pushing people over into suicide and murder... no problem. The politicians' hearts are in the right place.

Walk through a cemetery and try that defense.

Tax? Penalty? Tax? Penalty?

I just did the math. The US medical system killed 25 people while I was writing this article.

“This bill was written in a tortured way to make sure CBO did not score the mandate as taxes. If CBO scored the mandate as taxes, the bill dies... [I]f you had a law which said that healthy people are going to pay in – you made explicit healthy people pay in and sick people get money, it would not have passed... Lack of transparency is a huge political advantage. And basically, call it the stupidity of the American voter or whatever, but basically that was really really critical for the thing to pass... Look, I wish Mark was right that we could make it all transparent, but I'd rather have this law than not.”

GRUBER OBAMA'S TOP EXPERT IN 2008 PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

GRUBER VISITED OBAMA'S OFFICE AS THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY'S "MOST INFLUENTIAL HEALTH-CARE EXPERT"

MIT professor Jonathan Gruber served as the key health care consultant to Obama's 2008 presidential campaign and even visited Obama's office to sell the idea of the "individual mandate," which Obama later championed, according to a 2007 news article.

Gruber, who said Obamacare passed due to the "stupidity of the American voters" and their "lack of economic understanding," was described by the Washington Post as the Democratic Party's "most influential health-care expert" who "consulted with the three leading Democratic campaigns about their health plans," including Barack Obama's.

He pressured the Obama campaign to support the "individual mandate" he helped developed for Massachusetts' state-run health care, which forced people to buy insurance or face a penalty.

"Gruber championed this idea in Massachusetts, and ... he did the same in Obama's office, on the phone with [John] Edwards and in conversations with Chris Jennings, Hillary Clinton's health policy guru," reporter Perry Bacon Jr. wrote, adding that Gruber had to warm up the Obama campaign to the idea of the mandate.

He told Obama's advisers that a mandate was necessary.

"[Gruber] said that without (sic) the mandate, Obama's plan would shrink the number of uninsured from 15 percent to 6 percent," Bacon reported. "Obama's aides said that they think they could achieve universal care without a mandate, but that they would add one if they did not."

Yet Obama has been attempting to downplay Gruber's role in Obamacare after Gruber was caught on video displaying his disdain for American voters.

The president even claimed that Gruber was "some adviser who never worked on our staff," but it's quite obvious that Gruber had undue influence in shaping not only Obamacare but also Obama's overall health care policies.

Obama even admitted this in 2006 when he mentioned Gruber as one of the "brightest minds from academia and policy circles" he had "stolen ideas from liberally."

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi also made reference to Gruber repeatedly while campaigning for Obamacare in late 2009, but she tried to claim she didn't know who he was in the aftermath of the Gruber videos.

Steven Rattner, a former Obama administration adviser, told MSNBC host Joe Scarborough that Gruber was "the guru on health care" and that he "was certainly viewed as an important figure in helping to put Obamacare together."

"I think if you go back and look at the Washington Post or the New York Times or anything from that period, you will find Jonathan Gruber's name all over it, as both someone who's the leading expert on health care quoted by everybody, and as someone who the White House was using," Rattner said.

And the Washington Post's 2007 article proves Rattner right.

OBAMA'S EXECUTIVE ACTION WILL FINISH OFF AMERICA

ECONOMIC CONSEQUENCES OF UNILATERAL AMNESTY WILL BE A DEATH BLOW

 Obama's unconstitutional executive action "to shield millions of undocumented immigrants," as The New York Times puts it, is a brazen effort to further impoverish the American middle class and convert the country into a third world wasteland.

This reality is ignored by the corporate media as it celebrates Obama's "landmark" betrayal of the Constitution.

The establishment media fails to point out the obvious: the federal government has merged a huge underclass into the system, specifically the tax system.

Details were spelled out by Neil Munro of The Daily Caller on Thursday. He noted that the legalization of illegals will impose further financial obligations on American taxpayers.

"Illegal immigrants will receive huge payments from American taxpayers under rules now being imposed by President Barack Obama's unilateral amnesty," Munro writes.

He points out statements by Cecilia Munoz, a former immigration lobbyist who is now a top Obama aide. Munoz admitted millions of impoverished and near impoverished Mexican immigrants will become part of the tax system.

Munro cites a study showing that 47 percent of legal and illegal immigrants and their children are classified as living in poverty or in near-poverty.

Once these immigrants are enrolled in the tax system, Munro notes, they will be entitled to Earned Income Tax Credit payments. "A family with two kids, and an income of $20,000, would receive $14,590 in taxpayer funds this year alone," he writes.

This huge transfer of wealth from productive Americans to a parasitical class of poverty-stricken immigrants will hasten the economic demise of the nation.

Prior to the legalization of illegal immigrants, 49% of Americans received some sort of transfer payment from the government: Social Security, food stamps, the Women, Infants and Children program, unemployment, subsidized housing, railroad retirement, veterans' benefits, etc.

Obamacare is further exacerbating the situation. "This law is going to financially cripple millions of American families. It truly is a death panel for the U.S. economy," writes Michael Snyder.

Add to this the $29 trillion given to "too big to fail" banks, and you have a situation that will soon result in economic collapse.

The situation is not happenstance or due to government bungling and ineptitude. It is part of a carefully orchestrated plan to loot the remaining wealth of the country and destroy the middle class.

Obama's unconstitutional executive action will import Mexico's political and economic system into the United States — a tiny financial elite lording over millions of desperately poor campesinos.

THIS HUGE TRANSFER OF WEALTH FROM PRODUCTIVE AMERICANS TO A PARASITICAL CLASS OF POVERTY-STRICKEN IMMIGRANTS WILL HASTEN THE ECONOMIC DEMISE OF THE NATION.

SURVEY: AMERICANS HAVE SMARTENED UP TO MASS GOVERNMENT SPYING

80% ARE CONCERNED ABOUT NSA SURVEILLANCE

A new survey from Pew finds that a huge majority of Americans are now extremely wary of government spying, with 80% saying they are concerned about the NSA actively monitoring their communications.

The poll found that the large majority either agreed or strongly agreed with the statement that “Americans should be concerned about the government’s monitoring of phone calls and Internet communications.”

In the survey of over 600 people, more than 43% said that they knew “a lot” about “the government collecting information about telephone calls, emails, and other online communications as part of efforts to monitor terrorist activity.” While a further 44% said that they had heard at least something about it. More Americans than ever are aware that their government has been and still is spying on them.

Respondents were most concerned about government monitoring their social media activities. Over 70% of social media users said they were at least somewhat concerned about the NSA having access to the social media content, while 37% said they were “very concerned” about this facet of government spying.

In addition, 91% of adults in the survey “agree” or “strongly agree” that consumers have lost control over how personal information is collected and used by companies such as Google and Facebook.

While a recent separate poll found that Americans seemed more wary of Google and Facebook than they were of the NSA, this latest Pew poll indicates that Americans are just as concerned about how their own government is taking advantage of such communications companies for surveillance.

In addition, a previous survey by Pew found that 86% of Americans said they were willing to discuss NSA spying in person, while less than half that figure, only 42%, were willing to make their opinions known online, for fear of being placed on some government watch list or worse.

“One of the most notable findings in the study is that those who have heard the most about government surveillance are more privacy-sensitive across an array of questions in the survey,” Mary Madden, senior researcher at the Pew Research Center said.

“Those who are more aware of the monitoring programs feel considerably less secure using any communications channel to share private information.” she added.

The legislation is being pushed by Senate intelligence committee head Dianne Feinstein, who has said there should be “privacy compromises” in order to get it passed. With the opening of the post-election “lame-duck” session this week, there are fears that the now GOP controlled Senate will attempt to sneak through a “cybersecurity” bill, already passed in the House, that would “create a massive loophole in our existing privacy laws,” according to the ACLU.

The Obama Administration has previously said that it intended to veto such legislation. However, the White House also recently stated that an “information sharing” cybersecurity bill, rather than reform of the NSA, was a priority.

The FBI is also currently lobbying to force the likes of Google and Facebook to insert backdoors into email and chat programs.

It seems that while Americans have become wary of government spying, it is not going away any time soon unless further action is demanded.

A new survey from Pew finds that a huge majority of Americans are now extremely wary of government spying, with 80% saying they are concerned about the NSA actively monitoring their communications.

ERIC GARNER: KILLED BY POLICE FOR TAX EVASION

COP CHOKED GARNER TO DEATH FOR SELLING UNTAXED CIGARETTES

The Grand Jury decision not to indict an NYPD officer for choking Eric Garner to death is a shocking travesty of justice, but why were police harassing Garner in the first place?

The answer; He violated New York City's ridiculous cigarette tax laws. Eric Garner was summarily executed for avoiding taxes.

Garner was tackled by several cops and put in an illegal chokehold by Officer Daniel Pantaleo during an incident in Staten Island earlier this summer. Video footage clearly shows that Garner was not resisting arrest and was not acting aggressively towards the officers. The 43-year-old father of six begged for his life, telling officers he couldn't breathe, before dying moments later in what the medical examiner's office ruled a homicide caused by the chokehold.

Garner was choked to death for the crime of selling untaxed cigarettes, so-called "loosies". His fatal encounter with the NYPD would not even have occurred if not for New York's punitively insane cigarette tax, which levies an additional state tax of $4.35 per pack in addition to a further city tax of $1.50 per pack, driving an underground economy which accounts for over half of all cigarettes consumed in New York State.

Cigarette smuggling has increased 59 per cent since 2006 in response to a 190 percent hike in cigarette tax during that same period.

"Garner chose to participate in the booming underground cigarette market as a smuggler. Since 2009, he had been arrested eight times for selling loosies, which are popular among people who can't afford a full pack because of the excessive taxes," writes Lawrence J. McQuillan, noting that NYPD chief Philip Banks issued an order to crack down on vendors of smuggled cigarettes just days before Garner died.

In November 2013, Mayor Michael Bloomberg signed a bill which increased "enforcement on vendors who attempt to evade taxes."

"These events confirm that police are ultimately the enforcers of the tax code, and every vote for higher taxes gives police increased authority to exert more force on citizens in more situations. Higher excise taxes inevitably lead to more violent clashes between police and smugglers," concludes McQuillan.

The responsibility for Garner's death should not be shifted away from Officer Daniel Pantaleo, who clearly should have been put on trial for manslaughter, but the entire situation would not have arose in the first place if not for New York's obsession with high taxes.

Many reacted to the non-indictment on Twitter by referring to the tax issue.

ERIC GARNER'S DAUGHTER: 'THIS IS NOT A BLACK AND WHITE ISSUE'

DAUGHTER OF BLACK MAN KILLED BY POLICE REFUTES NOTION THAT RACE HAD ANYTHING TO DO WITH FATHER'S DEATH

Speaking with CNN's Don Lemon following the grand jury decision not to indict the officer responsible for Garner's death, Erica Garner said she felt the issue was a microcosm of the larger problem of police brutality, which has come to affect virtually all walks of life equally.

"This is not a black and white issue," Garner told Lemon. "This is a national crisis. Like... I believe this is a crisis."

Garner added that she felt a sense of solidarity with people of different cultures after she saw the amount of support her family received from around the world:

"I mean for White people to come out and show how deeply they was hurt, and like Asians and, you know, different people from different nations and different parts of the world to come out and show that they felt the same way I felt on that video, I greatly appreciate it. It's like a sense of I'm not the only one that feels this way."

Garner even stood her ground after a determined Lemon attempted to have her play to the racial narrative.

"Are you saying this is not an issue of race? I'm sure... You think this is a racial issue?" Lemon again asked.

"I really doubt it. It was about the officer's pride. It was about my father being 6'4 and 350 pounds and he wants to be the top cop that brings a big man down," Garner answered.

Garner's opinion greatly differs from protesters who are actively embracing the push to conflate the issue of police brutality with racism.

The race issue was revived after a Missouri grand jury declined to indict a Ferguson police officer who shot and killed black teen Michael Brown.

Garner's case, however, was different from Brown's in that publicly available video footage clearly showed police strangle a non-violent illegal cigarette vendor to death.

"This young lady is absolutely right," writes the Young Cons' Michael Cantrell. "What transpired between NYPD and Eric Garner wasn't about the color of his skin. It's about whether or not a police officer was using excessive force when it wasn't necessary."

"Garner's daughter is right on the money about this being a critical issue facing the nation. There have been many stories in the news about law enforcement stepping over the line of appropriate action, and the victims have been folks of all races," Cantrell writes.

It certainly is refreshing to see that people on the inside of the issue aren't falling for the race-baiting tactics of Rev. Al Sharpton or the race war instigating corporate media.

THE DAUGHTER OF ERIC GARNER, THE MAN CHOKED TO DEATH LAST JULY IN NEW YORK CITY FOR THE CRIME OF SELLING LOOSE CIGARETTES, REVEALED TO CNN THAT SHE DID NOT CONSIDER RACE TO BE A FACTOR LEADING TO HER FATHER'S MURDER.

NATO AND RUSSIA MOVE CLOSER TO WAR

NATO ENCOURAGES RUSSIA'S NEIGHBORS TO ARM REGIME IN KIEV

The new NATO boss, Jens Stoltenberg, has announced the creation of an “interim spearhead” in response to recent Russian military activity following the crisis in Ukraine.

According to an Associated Press report, the move is in reaction to “Russia’s aggressive actions in neighboring Ukraine.”

“We are protecting our allies and supporting our partners,” Stoltenberg said.

Stoltenberg is the former prime minister of Norway. Following his appointment in March, he said the Russian “invasion” of Ukraine was a “brutal reminder of the necessity of NATO.”

The reaction force will consist of troops from Germany, the Netherlands and Norway and will be in a constant state of readiness, according to Stoltenberg. The interim force will become permanent in 2016.

In Early September NATO decided during a meeting in Wales to deploy troops in Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia. The countries share a common border with Russia and Belarus.

In addition to rotating troops out of states bordering Russia, NATO plans increased air patrols over the Baltic Sea.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry endorsed the provocative move. He urged NATO foreign ministers to contribute their “fair share” to the alliance and said “we can’t have 21st century security on the cheap.”

According to the German newspaper Deutsche Welle, Stoltenberg said that while NATO will not provide war material to the government in Ukraine, it will urge NATO member states to do so on a bilateral basis.

Tass, the Russian news agency, reports a NATO decision to provide funds intended to reform and modernize the Ukrainian army in logistics, command and control, cyber defense, military medicine and rehabilitation of the injured.

On Tuesday, the commander of U.S. Army Europe said he looks forward to adding 100 Abrams tanks and Bradley Fighting Vehicles to the forces in Poland and the Baltic states.

In response to the NATO announcement, Alexander Grushko, the Russian NATO ambassador, said the decision to exacerbate the situation in Ukraine is a change for the worse in the region. He said increasing military activity “will lead to serious risks of military incidents.”

“NATO is doing all this under the guise of the so-called ‘Russian threat.’ Our relation to these measures is well-known: this region of the world has seen no serious military and political changes and such steps don’t fit in the logics of building relations in the defense sphere on the new basis,” Grushko said.

10 SIGNS THAT RUSSIA IS PREPARING TO FIGHT (AND WIN) A NUCLEAR WAR WITH THE UNITED STATES

IF THE UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA FOUGHT A NUCLEAR WAR, WHO WOULD WIN? YOU MIGHT BE SURPRISED BY THE ANSWER

Under the Obama administration, the rapidly aging U.S. strategic nuclear arsenal has been shrinking. Meanwhile, the Russians have been developing an entirely new generation of bombers, submarines and missiles that have the capability of delivering an absolutely crippling first strike. At this point, most Americans consider a full-scale nuclear war to be inconceivable. But in Russia attitudes are completely different. To the Russians, the United States is enemy number one these days and the Russians are feverishly preparing for a potential military showdown. Of course the Russians don't actually want to have to resort to nuclear war. Such an event would be an unspeakable horror for the entire globe. But if one does happen, the Russians want to make sure that they are the ones that come out on top.

A lot of Americans are still operating under the faulty assumption that the doctrine of “mutually assured destruction” still applies. The thinking was that both sides had so many nuclear missiles that a launch by one side would guarantee the destruction of both parties.

But since that time, so much has changed. For one, the U.S. nuclear arsenal is far, far smaller than it was back then. Back in 1967, the U.S. military possessed more than 31,000 strategic nuclear warheads. Now, we only have 1,642 deployed, and that number is scheduled to be further reduced to about 1,500.

Sadly, reducing the size of our nuclear arsenal by close to 95 percent is not enough for anti-nuke crusader Barack Obama. He has spoken of unilaterally reducing the size of our strategic nuclear arsenal down to just 300 warheads.

During this same time period, the Russians have been developing some very impressive stealth delivery systems which have the capability of hitting targets inside the United States within just minutes of an order being issued. This is particularly true of their submarine-launched missiles. The newest Russian subs have the ability to approach our coastlines without us even knowing that they are there. If the Russians came to the conclusion that war with the United States was unavoidable, an overwhelming first strike using submarine-based missiles could potentially take out nearly our entire arsenal before we even knew what hit us. And if the Russians have an anti-ballistic missile system that can intercept the limited number of rockets that we can launch in return, they may be able to escape relatively unscathed.

In order for “mutually assured destruction” to work, we have to see the Russian missiles coming and have enough time to order a launch of our own. Thank to emerging technologies, the balance of power has fundamentally shifted. The old way of thinking simply does not apply anymore and the Russians understand this.

The following are 10 signs that Russia is preparing to fight (and win) a nuclear war with the United States...

Russia is spending an enormous amount of money to develop the PAK DA Strategic Bomber. Not a lot is known about this stealth bomber at this time. The following summary of what we do know comes from an Australian news source...

Russia's answer to the B-2 "Spirit", this next-generation strategic bomber is intended to be almost invisible to radar and capable of carrying a huge array of conventional and nuclear missiles. Little else is known other than its expected service date: 2025.

Russian nuclear bombers have been regularly buzzing areas in northern Europe and along the coast of Alaska. The Russians appear to be brazenly testing NATO defenses. Here is just one recent example...

Russian strategic nuclear bombers carried out air defense zone incursions near Alaska and across Northern Europe this week in the latest nuclear saber rattling by Moscow.

Six Russian aircraft, including two Bear H nuclear bombers, two MiG-31 fighter jets and two IL-78 refueling tankers were intercepted by F-22 fighters on Wednesday west and north of Alaska in air defense identification zones, said Navy Capt. Jeff A. Davis, a spokesman for the U.S. Northern Command and North American Aerospace Defense Command. Two other Bears were intercepted by Canadian jets on Thursday.

Russian Defense Minister Sergei Shoigu says that Russian nuclear bombers will now conduct regular patrols "in the western Atlantic and eastern Pacific, as well as the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico".

Russia is constructing an anti-ballistic missile system which will supposedly be superior to anything that the U.S. currently has...

Currently under development, the S-500 missile is intended to be capable of intercepting intercontinental ballistic missiles when combined with radar input from the likes of the new A-100 AWACS aircraft. It is supposed to be able to track and shoot at up to 10 supersonic targets at any one time at heights of up to 40km.

Russia recently successfully test launched a new submarine-based intercontinental ballistic missile...

A Russian Northern Fleet nuclear submarine on Wednesday fired a test intercontinental missile from the Barents Sea to the country's far eastern Kura Range on the Kamchatka Peninsula, the Russian Defense Ministry said in a statement Wednesday.

"Within the frameworks of testing the reliability of marine strategic nuclear forces, the Tula [nuclear submarine] launched a Sineva intercontinental ballistic missile from the Barents Sea to the Kura Range [in Kamchatka]," the statement says.

The RSM-54 intercontinental ballistic missile Sineva (NATO code name SS-N-23 Skiff) is part of the D-9RM launch system.

The D-9RM launch system equipped with RSM-54 missiles was put into service in 1986. The production of the RSM-54 was halted in 1996 but after three years, the Russian government resumed the production of a modernized version of the missile.

Russia already possesses super silent nuclear attack submarines that are virtually undetectable when submerged. In a previous article, I discussed how the U.S. Navy refers to these virtually undetectable subs as “black holes“...

Did you know that Russia is building submarines that are so quiet that the U.S. military cannot detect them? These “black hole” submarines can freely approach the coastlines of the United States without fear of being detected whenever they want. In fact, a “nuclear-powered attack submarine armed with long-range cruise missiles” sailed around in the Gulf of Mexico for several weeks without being detected back in 2012. And now Russia is launching a new class of subs that have “advanced stealth technology”. The U.S. Navy openly acknowledges that they cannot track these subs when they are submerged. That means that the Russians are able to sail right up to our coastlines and launch nukes whenever they want.

Russian media outlets are reporting that 60 percent of all Russian nuclear missiles will have radar-evading capability by 2016...

Russia’s Defense Ministry plans to complete the rearmament of Strategic Missile Forces within six years. “By 2016, the share of new missile systems will reach nearly 60%, and by 2021 their share will increase to 98%. At the same time the troop and weapon command systems, combat equipment will be qualitatively improved, first of all — their capabilities for the suppression of antimissile defense will be built up,” Defense Ministry’s RVSN spokesman Colonel Igor Yegorov told ITAR-TASS on Friday.

For the first time ever, Russia has more strategic nuclear warheads-deployed than the United States does...

For the first time, Russia, which is in the midst of a major strategic nuclear modernization, has more deployed nuclear warheads than the United States, according to the latest numbers released by the State Department.

Russia now has 1,643 warheads deployed on intercontinental ballistic missiles, submarine-launched ballistic missiles and heavy bombers. The United States has 1,642, said the fact sheet released Wednesday.

The warhead count for the Russians, based the Sept. 1 report required under the 2010 New Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty (START), shows an increase of 131 warheads since the last declaration on March 1. The U.S. reported a warhead increase of 57 during the same period. It is not clear why the warhead numbers increased.

Russia has a massive advantage over the United States and NATO when it comes to tactical nuclear weapons...

As for tactical nuclear weapons, the superiority of modern-day Russia over NATO is even stronger.

The Americans are well aware of this. They were convinced before that Russia would never rise again. Now it’s too late.

To date, NATO countries have only 260 tactical nuclear weapons in the ETO. The United States has 200 bombs with a total capacity of 18 megatons. They are located on six air bases in Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Turkey. France has 60 more atomic bombs. That is pretty much it. Russia, according to conservative estimates, has 5,000 pieces of different classes of TNW – from Iskander warheads to torpedo, aerial and artillery warheads! The US has 300 tactical B-61 bombs on its own territory, but this does not change the situation against the backdrop of such imbalance.

Russian President Vladimir Putin has initiated a huge “weapons modernization program” that is projected to cost the equivalent of 540 billion dollars...

Putin said Russia’s weapons modernization program for 2016-2025 should focus on building a new array of offensive weapons to provide a “guaranteed nuclear deterrent;” re-arming strategic and long-range aviation; creating an aerospace defense system and developing high-precision conventional weapons.

He would not elaborate on prospective weapons, but he and other officials have repeatedly boasted about new Russian nuclear missiles’ capability to penetrate any prospective missile shield.

The Kremlin has bolstered defense spending in the past few years under an ambitious weapons modernization program that runs through 2020 and costs the equivalent of $540 billion.

Meanwhile, the Chinese have been investing heavily in this kind of technology as well.

In fact, just the other day the Chinese successfully tested a new submarine-launched intercontinental ballistic missile...

China’s JL-2 second-generation intercontinental-range submarine-launched ballistic missile, which has the ability to reach the continental USA, is already believed to be deployable by the People’s Liberation Army, reports Huanqiu, the Chinese-language website of the nationalistic Global Times tabloid.

The Julang-2 — literally “Giant Wave 2” — has reached a preliminary level of proficiency, according to the US-China Economic and Security Review Commission in its report to US Congress on Nov. 20.

Most Americans do not believe that any of this is a concern whatsoever.

Most Americans just assume that a full-scale nuclear war is virtually impossible.

But the truth is that a successful first strike against the United States is more possible today than it ever has been before.

Hopefully the American people will wake up to this reality before it is too late.
