THE ANNIHILATION OF MAN

KENNETH R McKILLIAM

Preface

With the chaotic conditions in Africa and in Asia and the extensive strikes and riots in Britain and America it would seem that man is bent on self-destruction. The author, who has spent the greater part of his working life among the Afro-Asian people found that the Psychology and Sociology he had been taught at the London School of Economics did not tally up with what he found among the African tribal people. He discovered that certain politicians in Britain and America seemed to be working against what he and others were doing for the advancement of the people of Africa and Asia. When he returned to Britain he experienced the attack on the faith and the brainwashing of the public in press, cinema and TV. In this book he shows how Satan is using all his powers to destroy the Christian West and how as the Scriptures have shown the plot is deceiving the very elect. A forthright book which will open the eyes of many Christians and will bring comfort to those who are fighting the good fight.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI:

"No one must lightly dismiss the question of race. It is the key to world' history and it is precisely for this reason that written history so often lacks clarity. It is written by people who do not understand the race question and what belongs to it. Language and religion do not make race, only blood doth that."
From the novel Endymion.

"The political equality of a particular race is a matter of municipal arrangement and depends entirely on political circumstances; but the natural equality of man now in vogue, and taking the form of cosmopolitan fraternity, is a principal which, were it possible to act on it, would deteriorate the great races and destroy all genius of the world. What would be the consequence on the great Anglo-Saxon republic, for example, were its citizens to secede from their sound principles of reserve and intermingle with their negro and coloured populations? In the course of time they would become so deteriorated that their states would probably be re-conquered and regained by the aborigines whom they had expelled, and who would be their superiors. But though Nature will never ultimately permit this theory of natural equality to be practiced, the preaching of this dogma has already caused much mischief, and will cause much more. The native tendency of the Jewish race, who are justly proud of their blood, is against the doctrine of the Equality of Man."

From The Life of Lord George Bentinck.

THE CONSPIRACY FOR MAN'S DESTRUCTION

In any conspiracy there must be a person or a community and a conspirator. The meaning of the word "conspiracy" is derived from two Latin words "con" and "spirare" meaning to breath together and it is with this meaning that I commence my thesis to show that the person conspired against is the very same as the conspirator and that person is MAN, because he rejected Truth and believed a lie and by doing so he deceived himself. (2 Thess. 2.11)[1]

Man is a spiritual being in a material body, made for a purpose according to a plan by an Infinite Mind and Intelligence. This infinite mind and intelligence who created man must have the attributes of the highest form of creation, that is to say, he must have a personality.

The purpose of man's creation was that undifferentiated spiritual beings should develop through contact with the rest of creation by means of the organs of sense, the central nervous system and the finite mind to become individual spiritual personalities—Sons of God.

Man was created male and female in order that the Creator may bring into existence other developing individual spiritual personalities. Therefore it is written `Have ye not read that He which made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said for this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh. Therefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.[2]

Man was meant to develop in close spiritual contact with that power from which his spiritual nature springs, his Creator, symbolized by the Tree of Life, He was meant to gain his spiritual sustenance from this tree and grow to become a fully developed individual spiritual personality, a member of God's kingdom.

In order to develop his abilities, his powers, his aptitudes,[3] man was given a free will to choose for himself the course of his development. He was made a completely free creature by the Creator. But there was a danger that the desires to satisfy the physical cravings of man would take control, and that man would be influenced by these desires to seek sensual satisfaction and material well being to the detriment of his spiritual nature.[4] A material, worldly, self centred attitude would gain control of the spiritual nature of man.

In order for this to happen, however, of necessity man would have to cut the spiritual link between himself and the power from which his spiritual nature springs. Since such a course would be contrary to the Will of God and contrary to the plan for man's creation, man's conscience would normally prevent him from following its direction, and so man would have to deceive his own conscience.

Man was warned that he must not eat of the Tree of Knowledge of Good and Evil, that is, gain his spiritual sustenance from his own ideas of that which is good or bad for his development. The temptation of man to disregard this warning is recorded in Genesis 3:4-5, "Ye shall not surely die, for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof then your eyes shall be opened and. ye shall be as gods knowing good and evil." You shall be illuminated, "Illuminati".

By deceiving himself and following the dictates of his own desires, man cut himself off from that spiritual nourishment derived from his Creator and destroyed the link between his spiritual nature and the Infinite Mind and Intelligence. Man as an independent spiritual being withers away and his spiritual nature becomes part of a malevolent spiritual force bent on the destruction of all the works of the Creator. This powerful anti-creative spiritual force will be destroyed at the second death.

The material nature of man with its powerful senses and its nervous system in contact with the created order around him insinuates the idea into man's mind to follow his own desires and take his own counsel. This is symbolized by the serpent implanting the idea, "Ye shall not surely die, ye shall be as gods".

In later years the serpent was worshipped as Aish-Skhul-Apis, (Chaldee) the man instructing serpent.[5] In later years also Eve, the mother of all things living, was presented in the story as Pandora[6] who opened the box she was told not to open and allowed into the world all the horrible things which would destroy mankind. She was worshipped among the ancients as Cybele, the Goddess of wisdom, and as such held in her hand the pomegranate. The pomegranate contains many seeds and each seed represented an area of knowledge that came to man. In the ancient world the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil was also depicted as an orange or an apple. In Dymock's Classical Dictionary, Cybele is shown to be Idaia Mater, the mother of knowledge.

Infinite Mind and Intelligence, the Ancient of Days, had fore-knowledge of what would happen in His creation, and had prepared for it. Part of his plan was to come into his own creation in material form in the only way such a spiritual force could do so, that is to be born into it and to grow up in it as a man.[7] By these means God would show his great love for his creation and how he expected his creatures to live, and would draw into his kingdom all those who of their own free will accepted Him.

Thus we read in the fifteenth verse of the third chapter of Genesis "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman and between thy seed and her seed, it shall bruise thy head and thou shalt bruise his heel".

From this point came the spiritual division of mankind into those who followed the patriarchal faith and looked forward to the Zoro-Ashta (Chaldee), the Seed of the Woman, the promised Messiah, the Redeemer, and those who followed the serpent, the Aish-Skhul-Apis; the Sons of God and the sons of men.[8]

We must now discuss the promise of the Zoro-Ashta and the birthright. Since the Eternal Mind and Intelligence was to be born into his creation it was essential that proper preparation should be made; that at an appointed time there were human agencies available by means of which this great event could take place.

Cain was rejected and he slew his brother Abel in anger.[9] Eve then chose her son Seth.[10] The ante-diluvian patriarchal line ran through Seth, Enos, Cainaan, Mahalaleel, Jared, Enoch, Methusaleh, Lamek, Noah.[11] As recorded in chapter six of Genesis, a calamity occurred. The sons of God who worshipped in the patriarchal faith began to marry the daughters of men who worshipped the Aish-skhul-apis, the man instructing serpent. As a result, in their earlier years the children were brought up in the worship of the serpent and the patriarchal faith was destroyed. This brought upon mankind the destruction of the great flood.[12]

Noah the patriarch, who had been warned of the approaching calamity, was able to prepare for it with his sons and under God's guidance. We now have mounting scientific evidence that a world wide flood did occur due to an astral collision affecting our earth, and there are many other calamities recorded in ancient books and in the books of the Old Testament. The powers of evil have, through their human agencies been doing their utmost to destroy this information or to with-hold it from mankind.

Evil was carried through the flood by Ham (Khem, the burnt one[13]) who despised his father and, by implication, his father's faith.

THE GREAT REBELLION

After the Flood the patriarchal leadership, the promise and the birth-right fell to Shem.[1] This promise of the Zoro-Ashta, the seed of the woman, passed from Shem through Arphaxad, Salah, Eber, Peleg, Reu, Serug, Nahor and Terah, to Abram.[2]

The seasons were re-established[3] and controlled by Shamash (Chaldee: the servant), the sun. The children of the patriarchs now began building a huge tower in shinar (the bush land). Its chief purpose originally was to act as a beacon to prevent people becoming lost in the surrounding bush.[4] Cush, Khus or Chaos the son of Ham instigated among his people the desire to change the purpose for which the tower was being built.[5] He wished it to be built as a temple to Shamash, the sun god. This fact was known to St. Paul, who wrote in Romans 1:25, "Who changed the truth of God into a lie and worshipped and served the creature more than the creator who is blessed forever". The Aztecs and other peoples of central America built towers or pyramids on the top of which sacrifices were burnt to the sun god.

Cush is also known as Bel, the confounder or deceiver,[6] Merodach, the great rebel, and Nebo, the false prophet.[7] It was he who is reputed by ancient writers to have established the false religion of humanism, or the deification of man, and Satan worship, or black magic. He taught that as the serpent is the spiritual enlightener of mankind so also the sun is the physical enlightener of mankind.[8] Those who understood the hidden implications of these teachings were known as the 'illuminati', the enlightened ones, who rebelled against God and the patriarchal faith.

One of the sons of Cush was Nimrod. The name Nimrod comes from the Chaldee words `Nimr-Radhr,'[9] the tamer of the leopard. He is spoken of in mythology under the names of Osiris, Bacchus, and Tammuz, and is described either as a hideous Negro or as a handsome Caucasian wearing leopard skin. He was known as the mighty hunter because he organized and led out parties of men to destroy the wild beasts which had multiplied and were attacking and harassing the settlements of men.[10] Being a powerful leader it was easy for him to develop his organisation into an army. He conquered and subdued the early settlements and began building the city of Babylon[11] which his wife Semiramis completed.[12] From Babylon, Nimrod gathered strength and went out with his army and conquered the settlements and built the city of Nineveh with its suburbs (rehoboth).[13] Because of his building propensities he was later known as Ala Mahozim or the god of fortifications, and[14] likewise his wife Semiramis, was worshipped as Diana and Astarte, and wore the turreted crown on her statues, the crown of fortifications.[15]

Nimrod, depicted wearing the horns of a bull or a goat, spread terror throughout the settlements of mankind, but he did also organize them into communities.[16] Having freed them from the fear of wild animals he then set to work to free them from the fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom.[17] The calamity of the great flood was still fresh in men's minds and the fear of the Lord pressed down very hard on those who felt that the curtailment of their sensual desires was intolerable. Nimrod introduced to men a system by which they were led to believe that a real spiritual change of heart was quite unnecessary and that in so far as a change was needed this regeneration could be carried out purely by external means. He carried on the pagan worship,[18] which had been initiated by his father, of Baal, the Lord or sun. He taught that fire was the symbol of the sun and of the serpent and that man, by passing through fire, could be baptized and freed from his sins. He was given the name Atlas[19] because he pushed up the heavens when they were pressing down too hard on mankind and he was honoured with the titles of 'Emancipator' and `Deliverer'. Because of the rite of baptismal purification by fire he introduced, he was called Khan-i-Baal, from which is derived the name cannibal, and Bolkh-Khan, Priest of Baal.[20] The Romans called him Vulcan and he was depicted with a hammer. Among the Nordic people he is also known as Thor and is represented[21] with a hammer. The vestiges of Baal worship and fire worship are still carried out in Allendale in Northumberland on New Year's eve to celebrate the Winter solstice. In Ireland there are many place names such as Ballymore (great Baal) and Bally shannon. All over Europe there are sun symbols found on rocks and standing stones. Nimrod was known later as Zoro-Astar, the seed of Fire.[22]

Nimrod led mankind to seek their chief good in sensual enjoyment and showed them how they might enjoy the pleasures of sin without any fear of the Wrath of God. He took over his father's title of Merodach, the great rebel who had revolted against the patriarchal faith, and developed Satan worship and black magic. He created a disgustingly obscene[23] ceremonial in which one of the chief ceremonies was the deflowering of a virgin.

Cush and Nimrod were the originators of the Babylonian system[24] which was later developed by the Chaldean priestly cabal, and by which Nimrod was worshipped as Baphomet, the father of the temple of universal peace among men. Baphomet is a cabbalistic word for Tem. Oph. Ab or 'Templum omnium hominem pacis Abbas' meaning "Father of the temple of Universal Peace among men". He was pictured as a great horned goat with wings and a female body. On his head was a torch, the lumen or lux, a sign of the new religion with which he is illuminating the world, in place of the old patriarchal faith on his forehead is the five pointed star standing for energy or enlightenment, the morning star. You will find this star on all communist flags and on the great European banks. The Morning Star is a communist newspaper. He is referred to in Isaiah 14:12, "How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer (Light bearer) son of the morning! How art thou cut down to the ground which did weaken the nations. For thou hast said in thy heart, I will ascend into heaven. I will exalt my throne above the stars of God --- Is this the man that made the earth to tremble, that did shake kingdoms?"

Nimrod and his armies were conquered and destroyed by Shem and his people and ancient history records that he was cut in pieces.[25] The death of Nimrod is still celebrated to this day in the Greatham sword dance in County Durham.

After his death at the hands of Shem and his sons, Nimrod was worshipped by the Cushites and Canaanites as Moloch (Molkh Gheber, Chaldee, meaning the great king) the God of fire and as Baal, the Lord of the son.[26]

He was even worshipped by the Anglo-Saxons as an evil malevolent god, Zero-nebo-gus, which is almost pure Chaldee for the son of the prophet Cush,[27] and human sacrifices were offered to him. The Christian missionaries depicted him as an evil looking black man with horns, cloven hooves and a tail, and in this guise he can still be seen on Saxon church walls. Mothers used to frighten their children to make them behave by saying that the Bogeyman would get them. `Bogey' is a diminutive of Zeronebogus.

The great rebellion aimed at the destruction of the patriarchal faith by Satanism, which still lingers on among the devotees of Black Magic, whose disgusting ceremonial is aimed at the overthrow of the Christian Faith. The chief ceremony is still the deflowering of the virgin and its devotees use a wafer consecrated by a Christian priest, if they can get one, an inverted crucifix and bodies of Christian dead. It still attracts the carnally minded, for "The carnal mind is enmity against God for it is not subject to the laws of God, neither indeed can be".[28]

THE FAMILY OF THE PROMISE

After the great flood the human communities began to move away from the original centre. Many moved South into the grassy plains of Palestine and Arabia.[1] Others moved into the forests of Europe which had grown up after the ice retreated. The name Europe (Eporeu) has been said to be derived from Eber (Cabbalistic) from which the name Hebrew is also derived.

With the conquest of Nimrod and the Cushites the great apostasy went underground.[2] Terah and his two remaining sons, Abram and Nahor (Haran had died in Ur), left Ur of the Chaldees, with its worship of the moon god Sin (Shem, worshipped as the Lord of the Moon, the lesser light, by the pagans) and went to live in Haran.[3]

The patriarchs took very great care that the mothers of their children were of the patriarchal faith, to protect them from the beliefs and practices of the children of the serpent and to prepare the way for the promised Seed of the Woman, Abram married his half sister, Sarai, and Nahor, his brother, married Milkah, the daughter of the dead Haran.[4]

In Genesis 12:22 we read of the call of Abram, "Get thee out of thy country and from thy kindred and from thy father's house and I will make thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing, and I will bless them that bless thee and curse them that curse thee and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."
Abram, getting on in years and with no successor, lost his faith. At his wife's instigation he consorted with Hagar, her Egyptian handmaid, and to him was born a son, Ishmael.[5] Ishmael, the eldest son of Abram, is the father of the Arabs and the spiritual father of Islam. Abram was very fond of Ishmael but he was promised a son of a pure racial line through

Sarai, his wife. The three angels (from angehei—Greek for `messengers') who visited Abram on the plains of Mamre, and who showed anxiety about the birth of the son to Sarai, could have been Shem, Eber and Serug.[6] Shem is said to have lived for five hundred years after the flood.[7]

Climatic conditions in pre-flood years were different from those which followed. There was a water vapour canopy above the atmosphere around the earth[8] and this had the effect of filtering out the strong ultra violet rays of the sun and also of preventing the formation of deadly ozone gas close to the earth's surface. Therefore life survived much longer. Due to the climate of the earth being based on heat equilibrium, there was no rain, only a heavy dew in the evenings. This had an effect on the distribution of plant and mineral chemicals. Consequently there were numerous cases of Giganticism, Dwarfism and acromegaly (abnormal bone growth). This can be seen in the fossil animals being dug up by investigators. After the flood the gradual increase of ozone gas on the earth's surface and the increased strength of ultra violet rays caused a gradual decrease in the number of years lived by man.[9]

The two messengers who appeared to Lot in the Cushite city of Sodom as recorded in chapter nineteen of Genesis could have been Shem and Eber, Serug having died in the meantime.[10]

Abram's faith was tested in the call to offer Isaac as a sacrifice.[11] Ishmael was rejected as the bearer of the promise and the holder of the birthright and the line passed through Isaac.[12]

Extreme care was taken by Abraham to ensure that Isaac married into the patriarchal faith,[13] and a marriage was arranged with Rebekah, the daughter of Bethuel, who was the son of Abraham's brother, Nahor.

THE TWO PEOPLES

The forces of Satan were determined to destroy this family of the promise and to prevent the coming of the Messiah. At this stage the destruction could have come about by the infiltration into the family of the pagan philosophies and customs of the Cushites and Canaanites.[1] Their sexual aberrations, their worship of Moloch and their attitude to life were inimical to the development of a healthy personality and were contrary to God's purpose for man.[2]

Rebekkah was told, “Two nations are in thy womb and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels. The one shall be stronger than the other people, and the elder shall serve the younger."[3] The elder was covered in red hair at birth and was called Esau the Red.[4] Esau cared little about his birthright, and sold it to his brother Jacob for red soup.[5] As the elder son he displayed a completely irresponsible attitude towards the promise of the Zoro-Ashta when he married two Canaanite women, the Hittites Judith and Bashemath,[6] to the distress of his mother,[7] who called them the daughters of Heth. Jacob, on the other hand, showed his regard for the birthright when he bargained for it with his brother. Jacob married Leah and Rachael, the daughters of his mother's brother, Laban,[8] and with the connivance of his mother he succeeded in gaining the blessing as well.[9] The blessing, as recorded in Genesis 27:28-29, runs as follows: "Therefore God give thee of the dew of heaven and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine. Let people serve thee and nations bow down to thee: Be lord over thy brethren and let thy mother's sons bow down to thee: cursed be everyone that curseth thee and blessed be he that blesseth thee".

When Esau realized what he had done he was much distressed, and he married Ishmael's daughter, Mahalath, to try and make amends.[10] Satan's attempt to destroy the promise through Esau failed, Esau is Edom, the RED.[11]

The sons of Esau maintained that the birthright and the blessing given by Abraham and by Isaac had been stolen from their father by the fraud and deceit of Jacob, Israel, and this enmity persisted all down the ages.[12] The Israelites, the sons of Jacob, settled in Goshen in Lower Egypt, which was governed by the Hyksos, the Shepherd Kings of the same race as Abraham. Edom, the sons of Esau settled at Mount Seir between the Red Sea and the Dead Sea, under their dukes of the royal line of Esau.[13] They followed the religion of the Canaanites, with certain aspects of the patriarchal faith. Among the sons of Israel, the sceptre passed to the sons of Judah and the blessing to the sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh.[14]

When the Hyksos were driven out by the Hamite southerners Israel was enslaved.[15] They were delivered from their bonds by Moses, Aaron and Joshua, who led them towards the land of Canaan to settle there.[16] Edom refused to allow them to pass through their territory.[17] Israel was instructed to pass round the edges of Edom but not to meddle with the people.[18] They were exhorted not to hate their brothers the Edomites, and to allow them to enter the congregation of Israel after the third generation.[19] King David had to put a garrison in Edom,[20] but in the days of Kehoboam, King of Judah, Edom revolted and set up their own king.[21]

There was constant vigilance to maintain the faith, both during the captivity and throughout the Exodus. Although many Israelites failed to maintain their worship of the One True God and began to sacrifice to Moloch and Baal, there were always the faithful few who retained the faith.

The sceptre passed through Jesse to David. David failed his trust by marrying Bath-sheba, the Hittite, having sent her husband, an officer in his army, to his death in order to do so. He passed on the kingdom to their son, Solomon. Although he began his reign well he later fell away from the faith.[22] He was interested in building and instituted an organization based on the mystery religions of Isis and Osiris.[23] Solomon desired power more than the service of God and of his people. The promise of the Messiah passed through his half brother Nathan as well as through his own son.[24]

The sons of Solomon failed to maintain the kingdom in its entirety; Rehoboam wanted to be a tyrant like the gentile kings,[25] and the House of Israel rebelled against him and made Jeroboam their king. Israel now divided into two kingdoms, the Kingdom of Israel and the Kingdom of Judah.

THE MYSTERY OF INIQUITY

The forces of evil had come to realize that they would be unable to destroy or hinder the coming of the Zoro-Ashta and so they set to work to establish a counterfeit messiah. The Chaldean priestly cabal had deified Nimrod on his death. He had led the great apostasy, the rebellion of the mighty ones against heaven, and had set up a new order of things, a new world. He first gathered men into communities,[1] he was the first mortal to reign as king-dictator,[2] and he was the first to offer idolatrous sacrifice.[3] He set mankind free from the patriarchal faith. He was depicted as the stump of the tree that had been cut down but with a new shoot coming from the roots.[4] Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, was one of his worshippers and his dream of the stump of the tree that was hewn down was brought home to him by Daniel, (4:26) "That kingdom shall be sure unto thee, when thou hast known that the heavens do rule. The carnal mind is enmity against God and is not subject to His Law".

Nimrod had married a beautiful but foul woman, Semiramis, the wife of another man.[5] She had blue eyes and golden hair.[6] She was also deified and worshipped as Astarte, Athena, Venus, and also under many other names in different countries.[7] After the death of Nimrod, Semiramis was said to have had a son by the spirit of her departed husband,[8] and so it came about that the son was said to be the incarnation of his own father and that this son was also her own husband. Thus Nimrod was depicted as the stump of a tree that had been cut down and from the roots of which a shoot grew. It was customary among our pagan ancestors to burn the yule log on the last day of the old year, (Winter solstice) and to set up the young fir tree on the first day of the new year. The Christmas tree is a relic of this custom. It is interesting to note that the new paganism in Russia makes Christmas the festival of the fir tree. The priestly cabal of the Chaldees therefore began the Mystery of Iniquity, the mystery religions the cult of the counterfeit Messiah, which spread throughout the world from Chaldea:[9] Rhea and her son Tammuz or Adonis; to Egypt, Isis and Osiris or Horus; to India, Isi and Isiwara; to Greece, Irene and Plutus; to Rome, Fortune and Juppiter Puer. In Scandinavia Nimrod was known as Odin or Adon, Lord, and his son was Baldur, from the Chaldee Baal-Zer, the seed of Baal.[10] The cult of mother and son was found by Christian missionaries in China and also in central America.

Initiates into the mystery religions were made to drink a cup of drugged wine and under this influence became highly emotionally charged.[11] They were then shown the mysteries and taught their hidden meanings. The plan behind all this was to gain control of men and women in mind, body and soul and then to use them to further the aims of the cabal for world power.[12] Subversives are using the same technique today to gain control of the young. Recently in Scandinavia an issue of a communist journal enclosed a paper impregnated with the drug L.S.D. The reader was directed to soak this paper in water and drink the solution and was led to believe he would then have a pleasant experience. Initiates were led further into the mysteries by stages, passing through different grades, until they were completely enmeshed and could only be freed by death. In the mysteries men were taught to worship the unholy trinity of father, son and mother. The mother was sometimes signified by a dove and was called Juno.[13]

The people of Israel had been warned not to become involved in any way with the Canaanites and their religious practices, and they were forbidden to marry among them.[14] They were told that should they allow themselves to become corrupted by the Satan worship of the surrounding Cushites and their degrading practices they would receive the punishments of the seven times.[15]

However the majority of the people of Israel and Judah rebelled against their patriarchal faith and followed the pagan customs of the Canaanites which debauched their character, weakened their family life and destroyed their nation, and they were attacked and led into captivity by their enemies. Israel, the northern kingdom, was taken into captivity by the Assyrians in 719 B.C.[16] and was lost among the nations.[17] Jesus Christ refers to them as the lost sheep of the House of Israel.[18] The southern kingdom, Judah, was taken into captivity by the Babylonians in 588 B.C.[19]

THE JEWS AND EDOM

In 536 0.C. Cyrus or Khurush, king of the Persians, destroyed the Babylonian empire and the Chaldean priestly cabal fled from Babylon to Pergamos and set up their centre of operations there.[1] This centre is referred to by St. John the Divine in Revelations 2: 13 as Satan's seat where Satan dwelleth.

At the same time a remnant of Judah, with many Babylonian half-breeds together with the sons of Zadok, returned to Jerusalem with Ezra to rebuild the temple and the walls of the city in 536 B.C.[2]

The sons of Zadok, the Sadducees, were the descendants of Zadok the High Priest. They were the cultured elite of Judah. They were humanist men of letters who believed in the secularization of religion. They denied the immortality of the soul; the coming of the Messiah and the dependence of the free will of man on the divine will of God.[3]

In 113 B.C., John Hyrcanos forcibly incorporated the Idumeans (Edom), the sons of Esau, into Judah.[4] These Idumeans looked forward, like the Ishmaelites, to a powerful dictator-Messiah who would rule the world. The Idumeans intermarried with the Jews. The Sadducees became the ruling party amongst the Jews under John Hyrcanos and retained this role up to the time of the Idumean, Herod.[5] The Idumeans then gradually took over control of the Jews. Herod Antipater, the Idumean, was made pro-curator by the Romans in 47 B.C.[6]

The Jews had begun a proselytizing campaign[7] which had brought forth Our Lord's condemnation as recorded in Matthew 15, “Woe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when ye have made him ye make him two fold more the child of hell than yourselves”. With the conjunction of the Idumeans and the Sadducees the policy and principles of humanist materialism were joined to the expected promises made to Isaac and Jacob which were claimed by Esau.[8]

The Idumeans and Sadducees brought in Hellenistic philosophies which the Scribes and Pharisees attempted to counteract,[9] but the Sadducees dominated the Sanhedrin and built up a complete network of control of the various synagogues of the Diaspora.[10] They were in contact with these synagogues through officials called `Appostoloi', those who were sent. A great number of synagogues had managed to gain control over their own law courts from the gentile authority.[11]

THE TRUE MESSIAH

Seven hundred years before the Christian era the prophet Isaiah predicted the birth of the True Messiah. “Therefore they Lord himself will give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Emmanuel”.[1] “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Councillor, The Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace”.[2] “And there shall come forth a rod out of the stump or stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots, and the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of the knowledge and of the fear of the Lord”.[3] Other prophecies concerning this event are found throughout scripture.

When the Messiah was born in Bethlehem as predicted,[4] the ruling king was Herod the Great, an Idumean. Satan, working through Herod, made an attempt to destroy Christ. This is described in picturesque language by St. John the Divine in Revelations 12 where he depicts Israel as a woman clothed with the sun and with the moon at her feet and on her head a crown of twelve stars representing the twelve tribes of Israel. She is with child waiting to give birth. Before her is a great red dragon waiting to devour the child as soon as it is born. The red undoubtedly stands for Edom, and for Esau the red; while the dragon is the Aish-Skhul-apis: Satan.[5]

Herod the Idumean, a prince of the line of Esau, recognized in Jesus Christ, a Prince of the Royal House of David of the line of Judah and Jacob, a rival to his throne and power and he was therefore determined to kill him.[6] This attempt failed.

All through His ministry the Lord Jesus Christ was dogged continually by the persistent hatred of the Idumeans and Sadducees and by many of the Pharisees whom they dominated. The Lord called these men a generation of vipers,[7] and He also told them “Ye are of your father the devil”.[8] The Idumeans among them told Christ that they, unlike the sons of Israel—Jacob, had never been in bondage to any man.[9] Israel had been in slavery in Egypt and in captivity in Babylon. St. John called them “Those that say that they are Jews but are not Jews but are of the synagogue of Satan".[10]

We know that Jesus Christ is the Zoro-Ashta, the promised Seed of the Woman, the Immanuel—God with us, the Infinite Mind and Intelligence, incarnate in his own created universe. We see all around us the spiritual forces of evil seeking to gain world power over God's creation so that they can destroy it.

The Lord Jesus Christ, as a man, resisted the temptation to become a powerful earthly ruler and come under the power of the mystery of iniquity, which is the Babylonian system.[11] We read in Luke 4:5, "And the devil, taking him up into a high mountain, showed him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. And the devil said unto him, all this power will I give thee, and the glory of them; for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will I give it. If thou wilt therefore worship me all shall be thine. Jesus answered and said unto him, get thee behind me Satan, for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve".

Jesus deliberately played down His kingship...He entered Jerusalem on an ass and when the Jews would crown Him king in the temple he escaped from their midst.[12] He taught his disciples, as recorded in Matthew 20:25, "Ye know that the princes of the gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority over t h e m but it shall not be so among you, but whosoever would be great among you let him be your minister and whosoever would be chief among you let him be your servant even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister and to give his life for many".

He attired himself in the clothes of the lowest household slave, the washer of feet, and proceeded to wash his disciples' feet. "Ye call me Lord and Master and ye say well; for so I am. If, then, your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye ought also to wash one another's feet for I have given you an example that ye should do as I have done to you".[13]

Jesus affirmed that he was the Holy One of Israel before Annas, Caiaphas and the Sanhedrin.[14] To Caius Pontius Pilatus, the Governor of Judaea sitting in judgement on him, He affirmed that He was the promised King of Israel.[15] It was the Idumeans—Sadducees Annas and Caiaphas, nominated by King Herod and appointed by the Roman Authority, who were responsible for the arrest and crucifixion of the Lord Jesus Christ in the greatest miscarriage of justice in history.[16]

After the crucifixion and the dispersal of the followers of Christ the Sadducees and the Idumeans thought that there was an end to the matter. They had not bargained for the resurgence of The Church with such boldness after the resurrection.[17] The fact that Jesus Christ was the Messiah who had risen from the dead as the scriptures had foretold began to exert great influence on the synagogues. The Idumean controlled Sanhedrin were deter-mined to stamp out this defiance of their authority and spiritual control.[18] The person chosen for the task was Saul of Tarsus, an Israelite of the tribe of Benjamin, a member of the Sanhedrin and a man of great learning.[19] Saul was versed in Greek philosophy; ancient history and the temple intrigues. He was also well read in the ancient scriptures.[20] He began his task of rooting out Christ's followers with great severity, but again Satan's plan was forestalled. Saul became aware that he was persecuting the followers of the promised Messiah, the Son of the Blessed.[21] He became the greatest missionary the Church has ever known, and this was devastating for the enemy because he knew all the latter's plans and the devilish conspiracy behind it all. If one reads St. Paul's letters with a knowledge of ancient history and the sacred scriptures one can see the extent of his knowledge.

The hatred of the Sadducees and the Idumeans against Saul of Tarsus was tremendous and is still so today among certain sections of Jewry.' They did their utmost to destroy him, but unfortunately for them Saul of Tarsus, who after his conversion became Saint Paul, was a Roman Citizen and was therefore under Roman protection.[23] The Faith spread throughout the Roman Empire and Tertullian states that even parts beyond the control of Rome had accepted Christ as ruler.[24]

THE SECOND ATTACK ON THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The First attack on the Christian Church by the Sanhedrin failed. The second attack now came from another quarter. Rome had become the seat of Pontifex Maximus, the great Bridge Builder. His chief seat had originally been in Pergamos whence the Chaldean priestly cabal had fled from Cyrus.[1] The Pontifex Maximus was responsible for bridging the gap in the knowledge of the devotees who were initiated into the mysteries, and for divulging the hidden meaning of names and words, so that they could understand the double talk and the double think. A person who was initiated into the mysteries passed through various stages, being led deeper and deeper, passing from one grade to the next, a system adopted by Freemasonry from the mystery religion of Isis. Once the devotee was caught into the inner web the full truth was revealed to him and there was no way of escape except by natural or violent death. The devotees were used, in their various grades and capacities, to further the interests of the priestly cabal to gain world power.[2]

The Pontifex Maximus was assisted by numerous priests called Heirophants or interpreters. Julius Caesar secured the title of Pontifex Maximus and it became a title of the Roman Emperor.[3] When the Emperor Augustus was styled as a god, all citizens were required by law to offer incense to his statue.[4] We are reminded again of the passage in Genesis 3:4-5, "Ye shall not surely die, for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof then ye shall be as gods knowing good and evil", ye shall become the Illuminati, the knowing ones. The Christians refused to offer incense to the statues of the Caesars, or to eat food offered to idols. They kept themselves aloof from the worship and ceremonies of the mysteries and their attendant debaucheries. They were therefore accused of disloyalty to the emperor and of plotting to overthrow the state, and of other crimes. For this reason they suffered ten terrible persecutions, from the reign of the emperor Nero to that of Diocletian, who boasted that he had extinguished the name of Christian from the face of the earth. This was a period lasting for about one hundred and fifty years.[5]

After a period of rule by the Emperor Maximinus, Constantine the Great became emperor.[6] He was the son of a British princess of the Silures, Helen. Certain authorities state that this Helen was a slave woman from the East, but this is disputed. With his assumption of the imperial purple, Christianity became the state religion.[7] Satan, having failed to destroy the Christian faith by an outside attack, now attempted to destroy it from within. The forces of evil work through human agencies. Saint Paul knew this and wrote in his letter to the Church in Ephesus 6:12, "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against spiritual wickedness in high places".

As Christianity became the state religion, it was required by law of all officers of the state that they must be members of the Christian Church. Many state officials became Christians in name only, receiving Christian baptism but remaining devotees of their mystery cults.[8] Priests of the mysteries became Christian priests in name only, and the services of the church were so organized that Christians and devotees could worship side by side and place their own interpretation on the services and ceremonies.[9] With the disappearance of the Roman Emperor the title of Pontifex Maximus was adopted by the Roman Bishop.[10] In time pagan infiltration and faithlessness within the church caused the pure Christian Faith to be superseded by pagan image worship. Diana, Astarte, The Star of the Sea, known to the pagans as Mea Domina, or my Lady, became identified with the Virgin Mary; the false messiah took the place of the true one, and salvation was said to come by good works and strict ceremonial, instead of by Faith in the One Lord Jesus Christ.[11]

With the church there were, however, many whose faith remained intact, and although access to the bible had been proscribed to the laity, many of whom were illiterate and could not have read it anyway, many faithful pastors kept the faith alive. John Wycliffe and John Huss began to give the Faith back to the people. Wycliffe translated the Vulgate bible into English and trained his poor preachers. Huss was burnt alive at the stake after the Council of Constance in 1414, although he had been given a promise of safe conduct by the emperor.[12]

THE REFORMATION AND DEVELOPMENT OF HUMANISTIC PHILOSOPHY

At the Reformation the great teaching of justification by faith alone, as expounded by Saint Paul and Saint Augustine, ousted in many places the pagan dogma of justification by ceremonial and good works. One of the causes of the reformation had been the revival of learning. Greek scholars fleeing from the Turks, who had sacked Constantinople, brought with them to Italy their books and their learning. Men in the West began to study the Old and New Testaments in the original Hebrew and Greek. Along with the spread of fresh knowledge of the Christian Faith there arose also the spread of Humanism, the religion of Humanity, serving human rather than divine interests. The most fertile elements of humanistic mysticism were drawn froth the Kabala,[1] a compilation of Jewish oral tradition which gave a mystical interpretation of life and of man's existence. It was an esoteric doctrine that is, meant only for the initiated. Those who understood these teachings were known as the Illuminati. The Kabala was concerned with the mystical speculations about the hidden meanings of scripture, and indeed was derived from every religion and philosophical system known to the ancient world, including ideas from Plato, Aristotle and Philo.[2] The Universal Jewish Encyclopaedia defines it as `a secret doctrine . . . born in ancient Babylonia.[3] Its full development did not take place until the end of the first millennium of the Christian era.[4] The doctrine moved from the East to the West with the shifting position of the Jewish centre.

The Kabala consists of two parts, the Kabala Lyunith, which is speculative, and the Kabbala Massith, which is experimental and practical. The former deals with the sensual world and the latter with the talismanic use of the divine name, the chief purport of which is to hasten the coming of the Messiah, King David, King of all the world.[5] The Kabbala is closely connected with the occult and sets out to destroy both the basic doctrine and indeed the whole edifice of Christianity. It was the revival of learning that brought the Kabbala into modern thought. One of the philosophers who brought the Kabbala into prominence was Agrippa (1456-1533), a magician and dealer in the occult who taught Hebrew in Cologne, where he was born, and in Paris, Spain and England. Reuchlin, who died in 1422, compiled a Hebrew Lexicon and grammar. Others engaged in Cabbalistic teaching were Agrippa of Cardano (d. 1576), Paracelsus (d. 1540), Weigel (d. 1588), and Jacob Boehme (d. 1684), who influenced the philosophers Schelling, Hegel and Schiller.[6] It was Baruch Spinoza, (1632-1677), however, who laid the basis of modern humanistic philosophy and he drew his inspiration from the Kabbala. He influenced the writers and leaders of the new learning, particularly those of France before the French Revolution. Spinoza came to loggerheads with the Jewish religious authorities and was excommunicated in 1656. He remained in this state until his death and did not join any other organization. Spinoza wrote, “In so far as a miracle is supposed to destroy or interrupt the order of nature or her laws, it not only gives us no knowledge of God but contrariwise makes us doubt of God and everything else. What is meant in scripture by a miracle can only be a work of nature”.[7]

The Kabbala is now being studied in conjunction with the Christian Bible in Jerusalem and Germany with the purpose of solving nature's mysteries by the use of man's reason and Man's intelligence and powers of deduction from facts presented by the natural world.[8]

USURY AND THE DEVELOPMENT OF CAPITAL

The forces of evil work through human agencies to destroy God's plan for man. Throughout the ages, and especially in modern times, there have been many good, patient and kindly members of the Jewish community who have given great service to the host communities among whom they have lived. Their only fault has been that they have failed to recognize Emmanuel when he came amongst them. They look forward patiently to his coming as a good and just ruler of all mankind.

Because of the exclusive attitude of the Jewish community in the countries in which they settled they were ostracized by the Gentiles. They maintained the old rule that only children of the third generation of a mixed marriage with a gentile could be admitted into the congregation.[1] In many instances they were badly treated by the Gentiles among whom they settled and the only occupations open to them were money lending and usury, a practice forbidden to Christians. Consequently they financed commerce and trading enterprises, and lent money to kings for their wars and to noblemen to pay their gambling debts.

Complete power was in the hands of the elders who were able to excommunicate members from the congregation. This was a terrible thing to a Jew living in a hostile community. It put him at the mercy of the Gentile authority.[2]

The Jews had been expelled from Britain by King Edward I in 1290.[3] They were re-admitted by Oliver Cromwell.[4] In 1693 the National Debt was inaugurated which meant that there was a pool of ready money lent by creditors to the state at a fixed interest which could be drawn upon in time of need. In 1694 Patterson was instrumental in forming the Bank of England[5] and in 1695 the Bank of Scotland was formed.[6] Moneys placed in these banks consisted of gold and silver coin and bullion. It was the Scotsman, John Law, who created the idea of modern capital. Law termed the gold stored up in the bankers' vaults as “dead riches”. He saw that real wealth consisted of the natural resources of a country together with man's labour, knowledge, skill and intelligence, and that these five factors working in co-operation created wealth. He foresaw that the gold and silver lying idle in the bankers' vaults could be used to finance the creation of real wealth which would bring back future dividends from the profits of the future wealth created. These profits were based on the power of the country to produce consumer goods. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries European trade was expanding and money was borrowed for setting out trading expeditions. Part of the share in the profits went back to the bankers and the money lenders who lent the money. Money was borrowed on the security of property. Law's idea was that money could be borrowed, not on the security of gold and silver, nor on the promises to pay based on the security of property, but on the ability of men to make the earth bring forth her increase.

John Law founded the Royal Bank of France and then the Mississippi Stock Company. By promising handsome profits he managed to withdraw much of the gold and silver which had been hidden away in 'the homes of France. He issued shares and paper money with promises to pay and shares in the future profits in the development of the Mississippi valley. The company went bankrupt because Law lent the money to King Louis XV at 3 per cent interest and the people sent out to develop the Mississippi valley were entirely untrained and unable to make the area prosper. But the principle had been established, to realize as capital in the present the expectation of profit in the future, and this opened up the road to commercial and industrial expansion. Law's ideas fell into the hands of those specially trained to use it over the centuries, the money lenders. Because of their international character and connections they were able to develop the techniques of the trade-in-expectations on a world wide scale. Unfortunately the power fell into the hands of an international conspiracy which commenced with the French Revolution, a conspiracy to gain control of the world.[7]

SOCIALISM AND THE FREEMASONS

Modern Freemasonry began with the formation in Britain of the Grand Lodge in 1717. The idea was derived from the Kabbala with its occult law and esoteric doctrine. Like the old mystery religions, an initiate was taught the first steps and then proceeded to higher grades by learning further stages in the doctrine. Freemasonry borrows the name and the elements of its organization from the mediaeval craft guilds. Its first Grand Master was Phillip, Duke of Wharton, elected in 1722. In 1723 James Anderson, a Presbyterian minister, drew up the constitution and rituals. These have not changed much since that day. It became a philosophic association with a propagandist purpose. It was defined as “A peculiar system of morality veiled in allegory and illustrated by symbols”. It is defined in the manuals as `the activities of closely united men who employ symbolic forms borrowed principally from the builders' art and from architecture to bring about a universal league of mankind. Now if it had kept to its aim as a purely philosophic and philanthropic organization it would not be a threat to the Faith in Jesus Christ, but the faith of masonry is of that religion in which all men agree, “the universal religion of humanity”.[1]

The Jews had not achieved full emancipation in the Gentile society in which they had settled, but they found in Masonry, whose system is drawn from the Jewish Kabbala, the means of coming to terms with Gentile society. They became enthusiastic Freemasons and founded new lodges. The idea was carried to France, to Germany and to the New World. The founders of revolutionary socialism, Marx and Engels, were Freemasons.[2] In describing Freemasonry, the Universal Jewish Encyclopaedia states that it is "the acceptance of all men of all creeds on equal terms".[3]

Freemasonry would have been a harmless social organization if certain influential members of Jewry had not secretly turned its aim of bringing about the golden era of the Masonic Universal Republic into a plan to conquer the world.[4] The Grand Lodge of Freemasons of Great Britain refused to have anything to do with continental masonry and still does not recognize lodges of the Grand Orient.

The whole socialist movement is largely of Masonic origin.[5] It aims at a world brotherhood of men and equality for all. This is a wonderful and laudable aim but it depends on those in whose service it is to be used. It is known that many Bishops and clergy are Freemasons, but this is not so on the continent of Europe. On the surface Socialism can be said to aim at the socialization or collectivization of wealth and the abolition of private property, but in actual fact Socialism calls for a total change in society, a complete change in its structure, without compromise. It aims at the destruction of everything, monarchy, religion, the family, the home, and much in personal, private life.[6] The Jewish writer, Walter Brody, wrote in The New Masses, (p. 14, 1936 ed.) “The undeniable problem of the Jew can only be solved in a socialist society".

Socialism did not spring from the desires of the industrial workers. Lenin wrote, "The idea of Socialism sprang not so much from the physical distress of manual workers as from the moral distress of mental workers. The people who flock to Socialism are the inadequate and the frustrated, the wealthy and the proud, whose desire for power over others and whose ambitions have been frustrated. They are activated by personal ambition rather than by love for their fellow men. They are people who feel that the self discipline imposed by a God-directed society is an intolerable burden frustrating the free expression of their sensual desires."[7]

THE RENEWAL OF FAITH

In the early part of the eighteenth century, Britain had fallen to a very low level in moral apathy. This moral torpor abounded on a world wide scale, and it was due to John and Charles Wesley, and to Moravian missionaries based on Bohemia, that it was overcome. The missionary zeal of John and Charles Wesley and of Whitfield began to be felt. This resulted in a complete change in British life. There was an upsurge of Christian evangelism comparable to that of the early church. Social changes began to take place, the abolition of slavery, the control of child labour in mines and factories, the prohibition of women working down mines, educational programmes for the working people, prison reform, nursing reform, education acts and reform of corrupt local government, and so on. German and British missionaries began to work overseas in Africa and Asia, later to be joined by missionaries from Canada, the United States and Australia. Bible societies were established and began printing the bible in many other tongues. The whole scene was set for social change. The revival of the Christian Faith in the late eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, the reading and understanding of the bible, caused social changes which, if they had continued, could have led to the establishment of a reign of justice and peace.

However, the forces of evil, the tares sown among the wheat, now began to take over and turn this move for social change towards their own ends.[1]

THE NEW RELGION

"The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun".[1]

The New Faith is nothing but the old faith of Nimrod, the faith of Humanism restated. In its new form its apostles were Schiller, Schelling and Hegel. All were influenced by Jacob Boehme and the Kabbala.[2]

The New Religion teaches that man begins life in inorganic matter and develops to become an individual personality. The collective mind of man is the Absolute Mind or the mind of the universe. This Absolute Mind, or mind of the universe, is a perpetual process of development. The Absolute Mind is, however, greater than the sum total of all the individual minds and is not the creator of all things.[3]

Mankind has been striving to become the absolute throughout its whole existence. The highest realization of the individual ego and of the absolute is genius. Therefore genius is to be worshipped and venerated. Here again we see the ancient sin, "Ye shall not surely die, for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof ye shall become as gods knowing good and evil",[4] divinized man rather than transcendent God.
There are many faithful members of Jewry who devoutly await the coming of the Messiah as predicted by ancient literature, but the more radical Jewish philosophers, as well as many non-Jews, are in revolt, like Nimrod, against the restrictions on individual freedom imposed by religious faith. The modern atheistic Ashkenazim believe that they, as a group mind, are the Messiah. Maurice Samuel, writing in You Gentiles, (p. 73) states, "the whole day is saturated with God or with Jewishness. Our Jewishness is not a creed, it is ourselves, our totality". Henry Woton, writing in A Programme For The Jews and An Answer to All Anti-Semites, (p. 143) says "the communal soul is the soul of Judaism".

THE ATTACK UPON THE FAITH

As in Judah after the return from Babylon, so in Britain in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries there were the Sadducees, cultured men of letters, who wished to see a secular religion in a secular state.

Taking into account the influence of Baruch Spinoza, let us begin with Hutton (1726-1797). He was a physician and amateur geologist, and wrote A Theory of the Earth which influenced Charles Lyell.[1]

Charles Lyell (1787–1875) was a student of geology. He devised a time chart of the ages of the earth and wrote The Principles of Geology. He taught the doctrine of Geological Uniformitarianism, which shows that changes in the earth's structure have taken place in an orderly fashion throughout millions of years. On the other hand, the students of the Bible, the Classics and History taught Catashropism, which holds that much of the shaping of our planet has been caused by cosmic disasters. Lyell devised the 'Pleistocene' and 'Eocene' ages. The dates of these ages can not be verified but his ideas were accepted blindly by scholars of his day even though they were opposed by the Christian scholars Newton, Hailey and Whiston.

Lamarck produced a theory that as the environment in which an animal lives affects its sense organs and its nervous system this in turn has an effect on the glandular system, and that therefore changes in the animal's environment can alter its physical construction. This theory is unacceptable, since no man nor animal has shown any change for the past five thousand years. Such changes may have been the case in the ante-diluvian days when there was possibly a different climatic system, less ozone in the atmosphere, and no ultra violet rays reaching the earth's surface. Both Lyell and Lamarck had an influence on Charles Darwin.

The main anti-spiritual propagandists of the day were Voltaire and Immanuel Kant. Both were violently anti-Genesis and determined to destroy the Israelite-Christian philosophy.

Immanuel Kant (1724–1804) was a renegade Christian. He had been educated as a Lutheran priest but became one of the leading sceptics of his day. He founded the school of German Rationalists, among the members of which were Feuerbach, Hegel, Marx and Neitzsche.[2] They attempted to discredit Genesis and the rest of the Old Testament writers. They taught, among other things, that there had been no Hittites nor Jericho, that Moses could not have written the first five books of the Old Testament, since writing had not been invented in Moses' day, and that Jesus Christ was a figment of man's imagination, since no such person could have ever lived. All their criticism has been disproved by modem researchers in history and archaeology.[3]

Another man of the times was Jean Jacques Rousseau. He taught that there was no original sin, that the sufferings of man was caused by society, that civilization produced property, and that republican government would restore the lost heritage of man. He believed in the enthronement of man's reason.

Charles Darwin (1809-1882) was a biological uniformitarian, who believed in the orderly process of biological change taking place on earth over millions of years, culminating in the creature man. He was influenced by the writings of Lyell and Lamarck. Darwin taught that an animal can transmit to its progeny the characteristics that it has acquired due to the influence of its environment. He reduced man to the state of an animal. He put forward the theory that man had evolved from an ape. This theory was attacked by the Christian scholars Mendel and Pasteur and has been disproved by modern genetics and endocrinology. It has led men of science such as Dr. Leakey to dig in ocean laid silt to try and find the missing link between man and the animals. The nearest one so far found has been the Piltdown Skull, and this has been proved to be a forgery.

Another teaching of Charles Darwin was the survival of the fittest. But the mammoths and the sabre toothed tigers have been considered by biologists to have been the fittest animals that have ever lived. Where are they now? They have not survived.

The stage was now set for the arrival on the scene of the anti-religious revolutionary propagandists, of which Karl Marx was one. His book Das Kapital was directed against what he termed Capitalism, but he failed to attack the banks, particularly the International Bankers who supply the finance which is behind capitalism. This rather significant omission has been much overlooked. He also drafted the Communist Manifesto in 1848. His real name was Moses Mordecai Levi.

Marx was influenced by the works of Spinoza, the kabala and Immanuel Kant. But there is more behind Karl Marx than this. He was a Freemason and in close contact with Baron Lionel de Rothschild and Hertz and Heine.[4]

The theory of Charles Darwin that man had evolved from the lower animals, and the transmutations and trans-mission of acquired characteristics, suited his ideas perfectly. He asked Darwin's permission to dedicate Das Kapital to him. Darwin refused.[5]

Marx argued that as man is an animal which can be changed by environmental changes and since these changes can be passed on genetically to his progeny, then, if the right environment can be established, and man forced into this environment, evolution can be assisted and the ideal man, the ultimate communist, can be created.

Marx demanded not only the right to order the type of environment in which man would develop but also the total inclusion of all mankind. He stated that the situation could only be created by violent revolution and that all those who resisted should be exterminated. What Marx would carry out by force the Fabian Socialists would do by stealth, by re-education and propaganda. The early members of the Fabians, founded on 4th January 1884, were George Bernard Shaw, who joined in April 1884, Edward Carpenter (Poet Laureate of British Socialism), Havelock Ellis (Apostle of free love), Frank Podmore and Sydney Webb. Shaw, a self admitted Communist, wrote, "The working class wants to be bourgeois. It is people like myself, of the upper and middle classes, who are the revolutionary element in society. The proletariat is the conservative element." (An Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism and Capitalism.)

The idea that a social and mental mould could be established in which all mankind would develop could be expanded into a plan to exploit the "animal" man and to reduce "Homo Sapiens" into "Homo Stultum"—making mankind willing slaves of the masters who will control the world. This plan was put into operation. All ideas of nationhood, family and patriotism would be destroyed, and mankind would become a mixed mass without any roots or loyalty, dependent entirely on those who controlled them. All the middle class would be ruthlessly slaughtered and all national leadership destroyed. Fabian socialists however would bring this about by stealth rather than revolution. Rabbi Lewis Browne wrote in How odd of God, published in 1924, "We Jews must remake the Gentiles. That is what the communists are trying to do in Russia".[6]

Sigmund Freud denied that man had a spiritual nature. He reduced man's soul to the material "Ego" and "Id". He formed the dogma of "Psycho-sexology", based on his observations of low life in his native Vienna, and attempted to apply this to Anglo-Saxon and Celtic society with disastrous results. Freudian psychology aimed to cure mental stress, but more and more people in Anglo-Saxon the Celtic countries are in mental institutes than ever before. They are not suffering from mental disorders but from spiritual disorders and the Lord Jesus Christ would treat these disturbances as spiritual ones. They have mostly been caused by the acceptance of the teachings of Sigmund Freud. Under the heading "The Mind, Next Challenge for Biology" the Science Journal of November 1969 made the following observations about Sigmund Freud: "his ideas about the origin of mental disturbance seem often to be deliberately alienated from science, and sometimes from common sense."

Of the German school of Humanistic Rationalists, Marx influenced Lenin, and Neitzsche influenced Rosenberg and Hitler.

SPREADING THE FALSE DOCTRINES

During the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries many of the intelligentsia in Britain, for one purpose or another, wished to destroy the faith in Christian doctrine. Many lost their faith. A doubt had been cast upon the validity of the Christian Faith, and an opening was made for the acceptance of anti-Christian philosophies and propaganda.

The declared policy of the Fabian Society was to work for World Revolution, not through a worker's uprising but by means of what Webb called 'the Process of Gradualism'. To this end they embarked upon a policy of penetration of educational establishments and institutions and the indoctrination of young scholars, political parties and the Civil Service. In 1894, Sydney Webb, as Chairman of the Fabian Society, established the London School of Economics from the legacy of a member. Both Beatrice and Sydney Webb taught at the school and, though both were atheists, they were interred in Westminster Abbey by a grateful Socialist government.

The London School of Economics was endowed in 1920 by a millionaire Jewish banker, Sir Ernest Cassel, "to train the bureaucracy of our future socialist state." Its principal was Harold Lasky, a Marxist revolutionary.

New faculties were established in the universities in the fields of Economics, Politics, Psychology, Sociology, Anthropology and additions were made in the faculties of Philosophy.

Between the two world wars a great number of English speaking foreigners with odd sounding names, many with university degrees, came into Great Britain from East and Central Europe. They were Marxist atheists. They took up teaching posts in the new faculties and began indoctrinating the younger generation of the British people. They poured scorn on the Christian Faith, Christian Ethics, Patriotism and Culture, so that sound philosophy, Theology and History were supplanted by false teachings and endless experiments and researches.

Students entering universities between the war years and after World War Two were influenced by these men. If they could indoctrinate one generation they felt they would be able to succeed. These students are now lecturers in our universities, teaching training colleges and theological colleges; they are editors, reporters and journalists, they are script writers and stage authors, they are in the B.B.C. and Television, and indeed in every area of public instruction. Those who have been so indoctrinated are unwittingly doing the work set before them and continue the indoctrination of the young. So indoctrinated are they that they feel insecure in any other belief. This was intended.

The humanist attack has been especially directed against the Celto-Saxon Nations since these nations have been the source of the resurgence of evangelical Christianity. The whole trend is to destroy the Faith, Morals and Culture of Christian Society.

Christian S. Rakovsky, a top communist and a founder of the communist state, affirmed that Christianity is the major obstacle to their ambitions since all the political and economic phenomena of the bourgeois states are only its consequence, and Christianity controlling the individual is capable of annulling and choking the atheistic state[1] Berdyaev, a Russian Christian philosopher, said before he died that there were only two ideologies that really mattered, Christianity and Communism. The conflict between these two represents the ultimate issue for civilization.[2]

The basis of teaching in education, economics, politics, philosophy, sociology and anthropology has been transferred from the Christian Faith and the Prophets to that based on atheistic principles, in order to further the cause of world government, the world government of the Anti-Christ.

Attempts are now being made to rewrite biological and genetic text books in accordance with the false teachings of Franz Boas, who was a member of a communist front organization.[3]

BEHIND THE SCENES

Nimrod and the Babylonian kings were complete despots, having power of life and death over their subjects, whom they controlled in mind, body and soul. After the destruction of Nimrod the Chaldean priests organized a system to enable them to regain control—the Babylonian System of the Mystery cults,[1] which set up the Anti-God in the past, and which will set up the Anti-Christ in the near future. For make no mistake, a study of Daniel 7, 8, 9, 11; 2 Thess. 2:1–12; 1 John 2:22–23 and Rev. 11, 13, 17, 18, and 19 shows the character of the Anti-Christ and therefore of this age of which he will be the epitome.

"This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof—ever learning and never able to come to the knowledge of the Truth".[2] "For false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect".[3]

In 1773 Professor Adam Weishaupt, who had probably been a Jesuit priest, became a Satanist and founded a secret society, the 'Illuminati'. Weishaupt had been initiated into an ancient esoteric order by one, Kolmer, who had come from the East. He adopted the ancient Chaldean sign O as the symbol of his organization. This symbol among the ancient Chaldeans was the Zoro-Ashta. (See Chapter Two.) The purpose of Weishaupt's secret movement was to bring about the complete destruction of Western Christian Society. He intended to destroy social authority; nationality and religion, to abolish the holding of private property, to plan social and political reform and to reorganize society as subordinate to a Master Race. The Abbe Barruel wrote in 1797, "In the desires of a terrible and formidable sect, you have only reached the first stages of the plans it has formed for that general revolution which is to overthrow all thrones, all altars, annihilate all property, efface all law and end by dissolving all society." (History of Jacobinism.)

Weishaupt's organization set out to steer the French Revolution further than its stated political objectives in order to establish the pure communist state. He organized the Communist League which gained control of the Masonic clubs and their slogans of Liberty, Equality and Fraternity.[4] These Masonic clubs were based, as we have said, on the ancient esoteric religions and its adherents were only allowed to know enough to carry out their immediate tasks. As an adherent became initiated into the higher grades and learnt further secrets he became more and more under the control of the power behind the scenes. When the time comes the Freemasons of the Grand Orient will be the first to be slaughtered, as occurred during the French Revolution, since it is through these Masonic orders that men are advanced to higher places of responsibility of the government, civil service, police force and commerce and trade, they will be the first to go because they have learned too much.[5]

During the French Revolution a small group of mysterious and careful people led by Meyer Amschel gained from the State of France the privilege of making and issuing the currency.[6] The revolutionaries were quite unaware of the power of this sovereign right of the crown or else they would have retained it for the Republican state. The paper money thus issued consisted of promises to pay in gold or silver the amounts stated on the notes. As these became legal tender it was possible to issue, if necessary, as much as fifty times the real wealth held in gold and silver and securities in paper tokens, and thus to increase the holding of real wealth from the repayment and interest on loans. The innermost power, the 'Illuminati', appropriated to themselves the treasures of the nation and distributed it to friends and associates.

The arrival of Napoleon Bonaparte put an end to the terror and Napoleon set out on the conquest of Europe. Meyer Amschel, knowing the movements of Napoleon, was able to buy up properties and securities very cheaply before Napoleon attacked a country and then to sell at great profit when the country settled down under French rule. By securing shares in the armaments and other industries supplying the sinews of war the banker gained untold wealth and the banks of the five Rothschild Brothers, his sons, were established in all the capitals of Europe. Baron Lionel de Rothschild once said, "Give-me the right to issue and control the nation's currency and I do not care who governs that country."[7] They created inter-national credit money in the form of cheques, endorsements, promises to pay and discounts. They were able to lend many times more than the amount of real wealth that they actually held, and as they were established in different countries they were able to lend one country money in the currency of another. It is admitted that this was beneficial for the conduct of trade, but by intrigue and arranging wars and discord between nations they could increase their holdings of real wealth from the interest paid on loans or from the rise in the value of shares, particularly in the armaments industry. Governments borrowed money to buy arms and equipment and repaid their loans in gold and securities or in the currency of the nation, together with the interest.

The Communist League, which developed into the First Communist International, came under the control of Baron Lionel de Rothschild and had amongst its chiefs the revolutionaries Marx, Herzen and Heine.[8]

In 1840 the poet Heine wrote, `Communism, though little discussed now and loitering in hidden garrets on miserable straw pallets, is the dark hero destined for a great, if temporary, role in the modern tragedy . . . it would be war, the ghastliest war of destruction. . . . The second act is the European and the World Revolution, the great duel between the destitute and the aristocracy of wealth; and in that there will be no mention of either nationality or religion; there will be only one fatherland, the globe and only one faith, that in happiness on earth. . . . How could the dream end?

"... I do not know; but I think that eventually the great sea serpent (Britain) will have it's head crushed and the skin of the Northern bear (Russia) will be pulled over its ears. There may be only one flock and one shepherd—one free shepherd with an iron staff, and shorn alike, bleating alike human herd. The future smells of Russian leather, blood, godlessness and many whippings. I should advise our grandchildren to be born with-very thick skins on their backs."[9]

It was possible that the Rothschilds were the chiefs of the first secret communism.

Marxism, like masonry, is also based on the system of the ancient mystery religions. The initiates in Marxian Revolutionary Communism joined a cell and knew only their immediate cell leader. He was an activist. Each cell was given a particular task to do, such as to infiltrate a benevolent society, a professional body or a government department. The cell leaders knew only their immediate contacts. Both Marxian Communism and Masonry on the continent are conspiracies for revolution, but the communist is the active revolutionary while the continental Freemason is being used by the conspiracy and does not know the main purpose behind it. The aim of the conspiracy is to break down the Christian Faith and Social Order and to set up an Atheist world state in its place.[10]

John Law's discovery that expected future profit could be realized as capital in the present, brought production in industry under the control of the financiers and the money-lenders, for the capitalist system of production is determined by finance.[11] Finance is controlled by those who lend money to gain a profit on the proceeds and profits of future production.

Finance is controlled by a clique of world bankers and these world bankers are controlled by the power that is planning world revolution and a bid for world power.

With the national currency and securities gained in re-payment of debts and the interest accruing the International Financiers bought up shares in industry, commerce and trade. Money was lent to their own people to expand their own businesses in the consumer industries or to set up businesses in another country.[12]

When they had bought up the majority of shares in a company they were able to take over control and to place one of their own men in charge. This is happening in the vital industries of Electrics, electronics and armament, where in Britain today American big business is taking over.[13]

By this means they gained control of the stock exchanges.

By this means they gained control of the agencies of mass information media, the newspapers, journals, wire-less broadcasting and television, and were enabled to get their own nominees appointed. These nominees were in a position to control the selection of employees. The recent appointment of four out of six applicants to the B.B.C. who had been left wing activists in their colleges and universities looks very suspicious.

By setting up colleges and educational foundations they were able to get their nominees into the fields of education and public instruction. The international financial clique therefore founded the Finance, international and the Revolutionary international, the first being monopoly capitalism, the second Communism,[14]

Theeodore Herzl, the World Zionist leader wrote in The Jewish State, "When we [Jews] sink we become a revolutionary proletariat, the subordinate officers of the revolutionary party; when we rise, there rises also our terrible power of the purse".

With the help of capital the Zionists created an enormous accumulation of wealth with which to take over control of national industries, organizations of public instruction and public information, so as to be able to mould the minds of those people they consider to be Gentiles. With their political arm they push the proletariat, the 'proles' of George Orwell, into a series of strikes which sow the seeds of an attitude of hopelessness. At the same time they create an organization to unite the proletariat and drive them to revolution. Where there are no social problems they cause them to be fabricated—such as coloured immigration into Britain. One must ask who made the suggestion that numbers of people from Barbados should be invited into Britain to run the bus services, and that they should be provided with houses and all facilities?

Where there are social problems they inflame and aggravate them. In Ulster there has always been friction between the Roman Catholics and the Protestants but the Civil Rights movement is a Communist front organization directed from London. This movement is not Irish but internationalist, and aims at setting up one Commune throughout Ireland.[15]

In Kenya just after the war the relationship between all races was extremely good, but with the return of people indoctrinated by the London School of Economics and directed from overseas, a wedge was driven between the different racial groups and the rise of Mau Mau forced the African people to follow the party line.

The government, in order to maintain stability and keep up the social services, are loath to increase taxes and have to borrow at a high rate of interest. This money is paid back with interest out of the real wealth of the nation, and so the future prosperity of the nation is placed in pawn to international usurers.

Owing to their control of money, the international financiers and inter-national bankers can create a scarcity in one country and cause an economic disaster in another. This fact can be used to blackmail governments to follow a policy in the interests of the financiers but detrimental to the nation. Such a case occurred in the United States in June 1962,[16] with far reaching results, when the Kennedy administration intervened in the dispute over fixing of the price of steel. This power can be used to force Britain into the Common Market against the wishes of the people.

We have witnessed the take-over of the Pergamon Press, which had a rapid rise to financial success, by an 'American' organization, also in the multi-million bracket, an affair in which the Rothschilds were interested. Who finances these organizations? We have seen the appointment of an 'American' director in one of our main electronic industries and attempts made to take over our armaments manufacturing industries.

The powers behind international finance and the inter-national banks are out for world revolution and world power.[17]

THE SECRET PLAN IN ACTION

The ancient prophets (Ezekiel 37) foretell that Israel and Judah will once more be united under their Messiah-King who will rule from Jerusalem. We have already shown that today we are witnessing a spiritual war between the forces of Good and the Forces of Evil, and that the powers of Satan have presented to mankind a substitute in an attempt to forestall the Messiah. Anti-Christ must come before the Lord Jesus Christ comes in all his glory and destroys the impostor and his followers. And so we find satanic powers working through men to prepare for the anti-Christ, following the same time table laid down by the ancient prophets of Israel.[1]

Israel had been told that if the people mixed with the Canaanites or became contaminated by their religion they would come under the discipline of the 'seven times'. A 'time' in Hebrew prophecy was 360 years, and therefore seven 'times' is equal to 2520 years.[2]

In 719 B.C. the northern kingdom of Israel was over-thrown by the Assyrians. If one adds 2520 years to this date one arrives at A.D. 1802. At this time Britain was united with Ireland and the Napoleonic wars began.

In 588 B.C. the southern kingdom of Judah was over-thrown by the Babylonians. 2520 years added to this date brings one to A.D. 1917. In 1917 General Allenby marched into Jerusalem and freed the city from the Turks.[3]

In 537 B.C. a caravan of 42,360 members of the Tribe of Judah and Benjamin, together with Babylonian wives and 7,337 slaves of both sexes, left Babylon for Jerusalem under the leadership of Zerubbabel. They were later joined by 1,500 families under the scribe Ezra.[4] If one adds 2,520 years to this date one reaches the year A.D. 1984. George Orwell, a one time Communist, has written a book entitled 1984. This year will also be the 70th Jubilee of the arrival of the Israelites in the promised land under Joshua; and in 1984 Halley's Comet will be closest to the Earth's orbit on its way around the Sun.

By attempting rigidly to maintain the purity of their race and religion the Jews had remained apart from the nations among whom they dwelt. They were a nation without a home. The ancient prophecies had stated that Israel would go back and possess the land of Philistia, Palestine.

In 1837 Benjamin Disraeli became the first Jew to become a Member of Parliament in England. He was a friend of Baron Lionel de Rothschild, a leading member of the Communist Syndicate. In those days the idea of setting up a national home for the Jews in Palestine was very remote. Palestine formed part of the dominions of the Sultan of Turkey and was peopled by Arabs. The problem was to get Jewish settlers into the country.[5]

In 1851 Sir Moses Montefiore, a British Jew, bought a number of orange orchards in Palestine. He was one of the originators of modern Zionism.[6] In order to effect a settlement in Palestine it was necessary to gain the friendship and approval of the Sultan of Turkey who ruled over the territory. The Sultan of Turkey was also ruler over the Christians in the Balkan Peninsula and in Armenia. These Christians were members of the Eastern Orthodox Church. Russia had designs on the territories of Turkey and believed that the Sultanate was disintegrating. The Zionists feared Russian control of Palestine. It was essential to isolate Russia from the Christian West, and to this end, in 1854, the Crimean War began. Russia was the natural protector of the Christians in the Balkans, where the people were beginning to demand "home rule" from Turkey. The world was then confronted with the incredible spectacle of the Christian nations, Britain and France, being instigated to go to war on the side of Moslem Turkey against Christian Russia.

By the terms of the Treaty of Paris, 1856, the integrity of the Ottoman Empire was guaranteed from Russian attack. The Sultan, on his part, promised reforms and self government for his Christian subjects. Wallachia and Moldava became self-governing.

In 1875 the Khedive of Egypt, a regular spendthrift, must have attempted to borrow more money from the Rothschilds and was possibly told to sell his shares in the Suez Canal. The information that the Khedive wanted to sell his shares was passed on to Disraeli, now Prime Minister of Great Britain. Disraeli then borrowed £4,000,000 from the Rothschilds at an interest which Cecil Roth, in The Magnificent Rothschilds, estimated to be about £80,000. It was found subsequently that this money could have been advanced by the Treasury in the normal way and thus have saved the British Taxpayer. £80,000.[7]

Disraeli announced that the purpose of buying the shares was to give Britain control of the Suez Canal as a shorter sea route to India, and so in the long term the purchase aided the erection of the Zionist state. Now the Canal was controlled by Britain and France.[8]

Meanwhile the Sultan of Turkey failed to carry out the terms of the Treaty of Paris under which he had promised reforms to his Christian subjects. The province of Herzegovina revolted in 1875, followed by Serbia, Bulgaria and Monte-Negro. These revolts were put down with massacres and appalling cruelty by the Turks.

The Czar of Russia, claiming to be the champion of the Christians, invaded Turkish territories in Europe and declared war in 1877. The Russians began a siege of Constantinople. The Turks were forced to sue for peace.

The Zionists contacted the Sultan of Turkey and stated that they would take his side in the dispute and influence Western governments in his favour if he would allow Jewish settlement in Palestine under his suzerainty. This was agreed.

Disraeli, now Lord Beaconsfield and Prime Minister of Britain, stated that the atrocity stories were untrue and favoured action against the Czar. Gladstone came out of retirement and summoned the nation to support the Bulgarian Christians against the Turks. The British nation, as usual, were divided against their own interests.

When Britain intervened there was a danger of war between Britain and Russia. Disraeli and Lord Salisbury met the Russians and the Turks in Berlin under the presidency of Bismark, the German chancellor, and the Treaty of Berlin was signed in 1878. By this treaty one million Bulgars were given a form of self-government and then thrown once more on the mercy of the Turks. For these services the Sultan agreed that Jewish settlers could enter Palestine. A little later the authority of the Sultan himself was threatened by the Young Turk movement, which was itself directed by the hidden hand.[9]

In 1882 Baron Edmund de Rothschild started the Jewish colonization of Palestine under the charter of the Sultan. The orange orchards of Moses Montefiore were taken over and became the Mikveh Israel Colony.[10] By 1900 the Zionist movement had become extremely militant. Their leader, Dr. Theodore Herzl, formulated the policy of the National Jewish State and wrote, “the return is a matter of political moment to the powers that have an interest in Asia,”[11]—it was the shortest route to Asia through the Middle East. The statements of Herzl give us an insight into his thoughts. Communism is to be used to break down the Gentile world, particularly the Western nations, and International Money power is the move to build up the World State. Harry Woton states “the Jews have a right to subordinate to themselves the rest of mankind and to be masters over the whole earth . . . this is the historic destiny of the Jew".[12] On 8th February 1919 there appeared in the Paris Jewish newspaper, Peuple Juif, the following sentence: "The world revolution which we will experience will be exclusively our affair and will rest in our hands. This revolution will tighten the Jewish domination over all the other people."

The Middle East has long been regarded as the geopolitical centre of the Euro-Asian-African land mass and also as its geographical-religious centre. Dr. Nahum Goldmann, President of the World Jewish Congress, stated "The Jews might have had Uganda, Madagascar and other places for the establishment of a Jewish 'fatherland', but they want absolutely nothing except Palestine: not because the Dead Sea water by evaporation can produce five trillion dollars worth of metalloids and powdered metal; not because the sub-soil of Palestine contains twenty times more petroleum than all the combined reserves of the two Americas; but because Palestine is the crossroads of Europe, Asia and Africa, because Palestine constitutes the veritable centre of world political power, the strategic centre for world control."

Czarist Russia, however, would be a threat to any Jewish National State in Palestine, if ever this area should fall under its control. Britain was sensitive to Russia's possible expansion into India and the bordering countries. The control of the canal by a nation hostile to Britain would cut the Empire in two, for after the Crimean War Britain's attitude to Russia had isolated that country very effectively.[13]

In 1881, Alexander II, a liberal-minded Czar, who had freed some six million serfs and sanctioned the relaxation of restrictions on Jewish activities, was killed by a bomb made in the home of a Jewess, Hesia Helfman. Alexander III, who succeeded him, introduced much tighter controls, and the Ashkenazim began moving out to Britain and the United States.[14]

Jacob Schiff, head of the Bank of Kuhn Loeb and Co., of New York, the successor to the House of Rothschild in the United States, financed Japan in the Russo-Japanese War. Russia lost the war and from the prisoner of war camps the toughest fighters were trained as revolutionary agents and sent to Petrograd via New York. This organized defeat of the Czar's army together with organized sub-version in Petrograd brought about the revolution of 1905. It was very nearly successful but it was premature. How-ever the required political conditions had been created for the revolution of 1917.

In 1914, the Freemasons organized the assassination of The Archduke of Austria at Sarajevo by a member of the Pan-Slav movement, although the Archduke himself had been in favour of the objectives of the Pan-Slav movement. This murder started the Great War. The Serbs, being Slays, were supported by Russia, while the Germans sided with the Austro-Hungarians.

When the Russian Army, dispirited by organized defeats from behind the lines, gave up the fight, Lenin, who had been sent there for the purpose, arranged the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk, and Kerensky, as had been planned, surrendered the state with its elected assembly to the Bolsheviks and the October Revolution. The October Revolution was financed by the bankers Jacob Schiff and the Warburg brothers through the Bank of Kuhn Loeb and Co., of New York.[15]

The following telegram was published on the morning of 24th March 1917 on page two of the New York Times, "Will you say for me to those present at tonight's meeting how deeply I regret my inability to celebrate with the friends of Russia's freedom the actual rewards of what we have hoped for and striven for these long years." Jacob H. Schiff. This telegram had been read out to a big Communist meeting in the Carnegie Hall, New York, the night before. Cholly Knickerbocker, society columnist, wrote in the New York American Journal, 3rd February 1949: "Today it is estimated, even by Jacob's grandson, John Schiff, a prominent member of New York's Society, that the old man sank about $20,000,000 for the final triumph of Bolshevism in Russia."[16]

In a monthly review of the progress of revolutionary movements abroad, issued by the Directorate of Intelligence of the Home Office, Great Britain, circulated by the Home Secretary, and dated 16th of July 1919, there appears this paragraph, "There is now definite evidence that Bolshevism is an international movement controlled by Jews; communications are passing between the leaders in America, France, Russia and England, with a view to concerted action. Buda Pesth is merely an outpost of the Soviet Government."

In 1916 the Arabs, led by the Sheriff of Mecca, Hussein, revolted. The British began negotiating with the Sheriff and promised self-government to the Arab states when they were freed from Turkish rule. They were also promised material aid. The Sheriff of Mecca was led to believe that the Arabs of Palestine would be given self-government after the war. Lt. Col. T. E. Lawrence was sent out to join them and he led the forces that destroyed the Turkish supply routes behind the lines. With the assistance of the Arabs the Turks were defeated. Britain also made an agreement with France, the Sykes-Picot Agreement, regarding French interests in Syria.

The Zionists now began to get worried. Their leader in Britain was Chaim Weizmann. The then Home Secretary, Herbert Samuel, was a Jew. He drew up a declaration setting out Palestine as a National Home for the Jews, which was agreed by the British Government, and issued as the Balfour Declaration.

Britain was now committed to two opposing policies and placed in an embarrassing position. After the war the League of Nations was set up and the mandate for Syria was given to France and the Mandate for Palestine to Britain. Jewish settlers began arriving in Palestine in great numbers from Europe and the Arab citizens of the country began to get worried and appealed to Britain to honour her agreement made with the Sheriff of Mecca. Because of the dilatory action of the British government the Arabs began guerrilla activity against the Jews. British troops and police were sent in to keep the peace.

Anglo-Jewry began clamouring that Britain should honour the Balfour Declaration, and the British Government began to wriggle and wrangle. Kenya and then Uganda were proposed as a National Home for the Jews, and all sorts of other places. The Zionists knew what they wanted and what they had worked for. Only Palestine was acceptable to them. In 1939 Britain put a stop to the flow of immigrants and further trouble was averted by the outbreak of World War II.

As a result of World War I:

1. The Mandate for Palestine came into the hands of Great Britain.The Sultanate of Turkey was overthrown by a revolution which established the Republic of Turkey in 1923.
2. The corrupt Weimar Republic was set up in Germany, destined to pave the way for another Communist State.
3. The internationalists were able to get control of Russia and to set up the first Communist State. Then the slaughter began. The nobility and the greater part of the middle classes were murdered or sent to concentration camps in Siberia. The Church was sup-pressed and the monks, priests and nuns tortured and and murdered; anybody considered to be- politically unreliable or holding an ideology dangerous to the spread of humanistic materialism was murdered.

Lenin became the leader of Communist Russia but Trotsky was secretly being prepared for the post. Unfortunately for the conspirators, on the death of Lenin, Trotsky became seriously ill. Stalin, a Georgian, came to power, but not being a member of the inner circle, he was only conversant with the militant Communist stage of the revolution, and had no idea of the real plan, nor of the planners. He developed Russia along the lines of a national Communist state. This defeated the ends of the planners, who were out for revolution on a world-wide scale. A plan had to be formulated to get rid of Stalin without destroying the Communist state. There was a danger that in so doing an opening would be made for the return of the Czars or of a democratic government, which is described in Marxist terminology as "the forces of reaction".[17]

It had been the intention of the plotters to overthrow the Weimar Republic with a Communist Revolution, but Hitler's National Socialist movement forestalled this aim. His most important achievement was to take over the sovereign right of a nation to issue and to regulate its own currency. His money was based, not on gold, but on the technical capacity of the German people to create real wealth. In other words, he took control of the machinery for issuing currency and made it work for the state. This brought about full employment. Thus a threat was created to the very existence of International Finance; for other nations, seeing that Hitler's method worked, would put it into effect themselves, and so both Hitler as well as Stalin had to be-destroyed.

Hitler detested Communism and Russia, and was an expansionist by nature. He had absorbed the philosophy of Rosenburg and was determined to unite the German people under one flag and one government. Then, without a declaration of war, Hitler attacked Poland. The British Communist Party dutifully did its part in an attempt to stop Great Britain from honouring its agreement to go to Poland's assistance. Russia attacked Poland from the East, but the Western world had been conditioned by propaganda only to show their abhorrence of the actions of Hitler and not those of Stalin. When, however, Germany attacked Russia, the Communists ,in Britain shrieked for all out war with Germany.[18]

The outcome of World War II was that the whole eastern half of Europe and half of Germany were handed over to the Communists and the powers behind Communism.

Great Britain, after floundering about wasting money on ground nut schemes and Mackinnon Roads, finally succumbed to Wall Street, to whom she was heavily in debt, and began, at the latter's insistence, to scuttle out of her well governed colonies and dependencies, handing them over to chaos and to the agitators who had been specially trained for that purpose in Britain and in Moscow. At the insistence of world finance and the Illuminati, the Empire was dismantled even though we had won the war.

After the war the United Nations was established. One of its founders was Alger Hiss, a top communist, who was tried and found guilty of treason in a United States court. David Ben Gurion wrote in Look Magazine, 16th January 1962, `The United Nations is a Jewish Ideal . . . with the exception of the U.S.S.R. as a federated Eurasian state, all other continents will become united in a world alliance, at whose disposal will be an international police force. All armies will be abolished, and there will be no more wars. In Jerusalem, the U.N. (a truly united nations) will build a shrine of the prophets to serve the federated union of all continents; this will be the seat of the Supreme Court of Mankind, to settle all controversies among the federated continents as prophesied by Isaiah."

The United Nations has proved to be an agency to further the attainment of world power and world government.

Britain was still committed to giving self-government to the Arabs in Palestine and also to hand over the country to the Jews as a national home. The Zionists began chartering ships and bringing in thousands of settlers from Europe. The Arabs again became alarmed and began terrorist activities. The British government then stopped immigration and sent in troops and police to put the policy into, effect. The Zionists continued landing immigrants illegally, and further action was taken by the British. The Zionists then organized the Irgun Zvai Leumi and the Stern Gang and the murdering of British troops. The King David Hotel was blown up with loss of life. Things became so bad that the British public began to complain and Britain handed over her mandate to the United Nations. The United Nations proclaimed Palestine the national state of Israel in 1948. The chief promoters of this resolution were the Soviet Union, the United States, France and Britain. The new state of Israel, however, only held a coastal strip with an enclave in which was the new city of Jerusalem. The old walled city, where the temple was located, still remained in Arab hands. It was necessary to prise this from the Arabs. The old prophecies stated that the children of Abraham would have the land from the River of Egypt (the Nile) to the River Euphrates. To gain these areas there would have to be a confrontation with the Arab States.

It became necessary to dislodge the British and the French from the Canal Zone. It also became necessary to prepare for the overthrow of the Egyptians and Syrians. The Arabs must not become too dependent upon the West for arms, materials and technical advice.

President Nasser, on Russian and United States advice (presidential advisers in the United States were in the plot) declared his intention of taking over the Suez Canal. Israel moved troops towards the area. The British and the French invaded the Canal Zone and took over control. The United States and Russia warned Britain and France to stop the invasion and to clear out. Britain and France complied under threat.

Russia began arming the Egyptians and sending in technical experts and military advisers. The Arabs were now stirred up to make war on Israel and had been given the arms to do it. In the six days war of 1967 the troops of the United Arab Republic were pushed back to the canal and to the line of the River Jordan. The canal was closed.

On Christmas Eve 1969 five small, fast, but extremely powerful ships fitted to take atomic weapons were smuggled out of Cherbourg Harbour on the pretext of being sold to the Norwegians. They were allowed to reach Haifa in Israel, even though the Egyptians and their sponsors, the Russians, had the equipment and the means of searching them out and destroying them. A most modern piece of Russian radar equipment was erected in Egypt in an area where Israeli commandos could easily seize it. What other means could be more effective for getting such modem equipment to Israel without arousing comment from other nations? It appeared that the Israelis knew the exact positions of Egyptian bases and arms and fuel dumps, and were thus able to knock them out accurately with shell fire and precision bombing.

It will possibly be deduced that the Russians are only giving sufficient military advice and aid to the United Arab Republic to keep up the pretence that they are supporting the Arabs, while at the same time passing on information to Moscow which could be transmitted to the Israelis.

The Russian fleet is in the Eastern Mediterranean to keep out other nations while the Israelis take over Arab territory, as well as to enhance Russian prestige in the area. The reason for the supply of Russian arms, equipment and technical advice to the Arabs seems to be to prevent the Arabs from obtaining this advice and equipment from the West, which might have proved harmful to Israel.

We are going to see further Israeli advance in the Middle East towards the River Euphrates, but at the moment they are seeking means of doing this without arousing the suspicions of the western nations. Agents are at work among the Arabs, attempting to cause dissention between Jordan and Iraqi and between Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Movement of Arafat. If King Hussein asks help from Israel, then the Israelis will move in. The Christian West is being made the victim of double-talk and double-think. Russia: is controlled by the Ashkenazim, Israel is con-trolled by the Zionists, and the advice being given to the administration of the United States comes from those powers who control big business and who also control the C.I.A. But all these groups are controlled by the Illuminati, who control world financial power and the world banking systems. Their aim is a bid for world power. Financial power is of little value without the ultimate power, political power.

This financial power of the International Monetary Fund and of the World Bank is most dangerous since it contains potential to destroy the nations of the Free World. When nations accept a world currency the powers that control that currency will be the world's paymaster. Armies, Navies, Civil Servants and the Secret Police will do the bidding of those who pay them their salaries.

We have witnessed the discredited action of the United Nations forces in the Congo. We have seen the United Nations being used by international finance based in New York to usurp the mineral wealth of Katanga from the Belgians, and we have seen the kidnapping of Moishe Tshombe organized by their agents.

We are witnessing the attempt to gain control of Rhodesia and South Africa, in order to secure the mineral wealth of southern Africa, and the control of the ports of Durban and Cape Town, and the Naval Base at Simons Town. We have watched the Soviet navy moving into Indian Ocean ports, the weakening of internal security in the United States by the aggravation of the racial problem, and we have seen a racial problem imported into Great Britain, where none before existed, and racial hatred fomented by the indoctrinated left. We have watched the gradual demoralization of our youth by deliberate sexual incitement in newspapers and journals, the lowering of moral values by facilitating divorce, legalizing homosexuality and the murder of unborn infants, and we have witnessed attempts to make the use of drugs legal.

Relentlessly the conspiracy goes on for the final overthrow of the Christian West and the setting up of a godless world dictatorship of wealth and power.

It is estimated that 90,000,000 western Europeans of the middle class are scheduled for destruction, since all leadership will be destroyed and all those whose ideologies will endanger the fulfilment of the plan.

In the Daily Telegraph of the 29th of August 1969 Mr. D. G. Stewart-Smith, Editor of the East West Digest, produced the following estimates of persons killed as a result of the application of Marxist-Leninist ideology:

In the Soviet Union

Russian Revolution and Civil War.	1,500,000
Civilian deaths caused by the Civil War fighting and famine.	13,000,000
Liquidation of class enemies and Minorities	3,000,000
Famine caused by first five year plan	7,000,000
Communist Purges	1,500,000
Deaths in slave labour camps 1921—60	19,000,000

In Europe

Revolutions and invasions	500,000
Liquidation of class enemies	2,000,000
Communist Purges	1,000,000
Deaths in slave labour camps since 1946	100,000

In Asia

The Chinese Civil War 1927–1949	20,000,000
China, liquidation of class enemies	9,500,000
China, famine caused by Great Leap Forward	13,000,000
China deaths in Slave Labour Camps since 1950	2,000,000
Tibet, invasions and revolts	200,000
The Korean War	1,500,000
	Grand Total
	94,800,000

To this figure we must add the deaths and murders throughout Africa, as well as the slaughter in Vietnam. The aim of the conspiracy is fourfold.

Politically, it seeks to establish a world government under a world dictator, the Anti-Christ, and a world political party submissive to its master.

Theologically, it desires a world religion, a conglomeration of all religions leading to atheism and Satanism.

Socially, it is working towards a world race, a mixture of all races, from which all national pride, all sense of history and culture, all variety, and all family life and of Christian marriage, will have been eradicated.

Finally, the conspiracy aims at a world economic order controlled by the world political party for the benefit of its master. Armies, navies, civil servants and police will carry out the orders of those who pay their wages.

Confronted with this situation, we must ask ourselves what we can do.

We have sinned as a nation. We have allowed the spiritual enemy to enter our ranks by our lack of faith. Only Faith can drive him out, for, says St. John (1 John 5:5–6), "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world, and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our Faith. Who is he that overcometh the world but he that believeth that Jesus Christ is the Son of God".

We must first accept the Lord Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour and our Leader, both for each one of us individually, and as a nation.

We must affirm our faith at all times and witness that Jesus Christ is the Incarnate Son of God.

We must read our Bible regularly, knowing that it is historical truth, for the forces of Satan are trying to deceive us into thinking it is falsehood and myth.

We must be at all times watchful, as St. Peter tells us: "Be sober, be vigilant for your adversary the devil goeth about seeking whom he may devour, whom resist steadfast in the Faith".[19]

We must not allow the mixing of people of different racial stocks.[20]

The creation and issue of all forms of money and currency must be the sovereign right of the nation, under the control of the Crown and the people's elected representatives. The creation of money, the means of exchange, must be related to the real wealth created by the people of the nation. It must not reside in the hands of private individuals or organizations who do not come under the nation's jurisdiction, for the power to create money can be used as a means of enslaving a nation.

THE FUTURE

It must be remembered that among the so called Gentile nations there is a great deal of Israelite blood, for the early Christians were all Hebrews. It is a historical fact that there are whole areas of Israelite people in Western Europe, particularly in Britain and on the Western sea-boards and in the U.S.A. and the White dominions. Israel was a white Caucasian race.[1] One never sees red hair among full blooded Negroes, only among the unfortunate half-castes.

From early times the Tribe of Dan were sailors and merchants and brought the tin of Cornwall to the coasts of Palestine (Philistum) to be mixed with the copper from Cyprus (Cupressos) and from Solomon's mines in the Gulf of Akaba to make bronze.[2]

Isaiah 60: 9, states, “Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring my sons from afar”. Tarshish was the name for ancient southern Spain—Tartessus. Hasting's Bible Dictionary states, “Tarshish stood for the commerce of the West as Sheba and Dedan stood for the commerce of the East”. Why is all this information being kept from the people? Protocols 12, 14 and 16 of the Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion explain why. The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion is a blueprint for the domination of the world compiled from the various secret objectives laid down by the Illuminati. They first came to notice after being published by Professor Sergyei A. Nilus, and were translated into English by Victor E. Marsden, a Russian correspondent of the Morning Post. A copy was placed in the British Museum in 1906.

Many of the Jews have accepted Christ and are among the host of Israel. We have many among us with the names of Joseph, Jacob, Isaac and so on, all since Christians. Many devout Jews are still honestly seeking t] coming of the Messiah. They will accept the true Messiah when he appears. Likewise many sincere seekers of Truth among the Arabs, the sons of Ishmael, who are taught the Koran that Jesus Christ is the spirit of God and w born of the Virgin Mary, will accept the Lord Jesus Christ when he comes.

The modern Babylonian system includes all those who have finally rejected the claims of the Lord Jesus Christ; for, says Jesus, "He that is not for me is against me; are he that gathereth not scattereth." (Matthew 12:30.) The modern spiritual sons of Esau and the Ashkenazim a: busily setting up the seat of their future world government in Jerusalem in modern Israel, and with the political force and money power at their disposal they resemble Bel, the confuser and confounder of Old Chaldea-Babylon, confusing and weakening the nations in order to destroy the and bring the people as slaves into their world system.

Then the spiritual forces of evil, through their human agencies, will set up the anti-Christ, who will be a great worldly, anti-spiritual despot, Ben-David .[4]

The installation of this foul being will be followed the great tribulation and the persecution of the Faithful. This has already begun in countries under their control. These days will be shortened to save the elect of God. Satan will make war against the Saints, the Holy People and his kingdom will be destroyed. For the Lord Jest Christ, the True Messiah will come. Immediately after the tribulation of those days, the Babylonian system will finally be destroyed. Edom-Esau will be judged because of the hatred and envy of Israel and because they sought to destroy Jacob. This destruction will be carried out by Israel. The kingdom will be given to the Saints of the Most High, the sanctified holy people

About The Late Author

Kenneth Roderick McKilliam was educated in Sydney, Australia and in 1934 went to the University of Queensland and two years later went to London University where he obtained an Honour's degree in Psychology and Sociology.

As a volunteer soldier from 1940 he saw service in the Somalia Military Administration and was later attached to the East Africa Command Headquarters. After the war he spent sixteen years in Africa as an Educational and Community Development Officer. He has always been interested in Church and Social work and has been a licensed Reader in the dioceses of Mombasa, Namiremba, Upper Nile and now Canterbury. He has made study tours extensively in Asia, Africa and Australasia.

Of recent years he has investigated the hidden forces which are bringing the destruction of mankind.

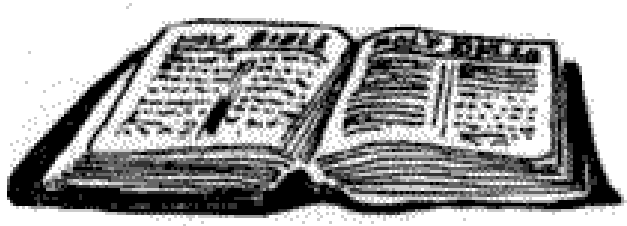
CALLING THE PEOPLE OF BRITAIN

At last the bible makes sense!

At last we know its meaning.

Its the book of the RACE



"For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem" (Isaiah 2:3).”
