

Evidence to consider.....

Flat

Earth

by

Guy S. Stanton III

.....if you dare to.

FLAT EARTH

A handbook meant to help those in pursuit of the Truth

Guy S. Stanton, III

Words of Action

Copyright © 2018 by Guy S. Stanton, III.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, distributed or transmitted in any form or by any means, including photocopying, recording, or other electronic or mechanical methods, without the prior written permission of the publisher, except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical reviews and certain other noncommercial uses permitted by copyright law.

Publisher's Note: This is a work of fiction. Names, characters, places, and incidents are a product of the author's imagination. Locales and public names are sometimes used for atmospheric purposes. Any resemblance to actual people, living or dead, or to businesses, companies, events, institutions, or locales is completely coincidental.

Book Layout ©2013 BookDesignTemplates.com

Guy's books can be found in a variety of formats, both digital and print, at the following locations: A Warrior's Pen, Amazon, Barnes&Noble, Smashwords, Apple iBookstore, Kobo, Goodreads, and CreateSpace.

Book Cover Artist: Guy S. Stanton III

Author's Website: www.a-warriors-pen.com

Flat Earth: Evidence to consider if you dare to. / Guy S. Stanton, III. – First Edition.

Available Books

The Warrior Kind Series

Book 1: A Warrior's Redemption

Book 2: A Warrior's Journey

Book 3: A Warrior's Legacy

Book 4: A Warrior's Return

Book 5: A Warrior's Revenge

The Agents for Good Series

Book 1: Agent with a History

Book 2: Agent for a Cause

Book 3: Agent out of Time

Book 4: Agent in the Dark

Book 5: Agent on the Run

Book 6: Agent finds a Warrior

Water Wars Series

Book 1: Journey into the Deep

Book 2: The Proverbial War

Book 2: The Quest for Paradise

The Wind Drifters Series

Book 1: Fire Wind

Book 2: Ice Wind

Book 3: Hard Wind

Book 4: Rift Wind

Book 5: Drift Wind

Fire Prophets Series

Book 1: The Way

Book 2: The Truth, Coming Soon

Book 2: The Life, Coming Soon

Non-series Books

The Kingdom

Fallen Ambitions

Pharaoh's Slave

Nonfiction Books

A Guy's Thoughts

Flat Earth: Evidence to consider if you dare to.

Table of Contents

What to Expect

Planes: Eye in the Sky

Space: The Final Frontier Really???

Water – Ingredient for Life and Flat Earth Proof

Miscellaneous Hard Hitting Facts and Considerations

The Beginning of the End

The Bible – Ultimate Flat Earth Proof

Do You Believe?

My Personal Story

A Song

Dedicated to all the intrepid explorers before me who opened up the way for a late comer to grasp a truth never really considered before that now in realization has in its own way affected everything. Some may view the debate of whether the earth is flat or not to be a take it or leave it discourse and while that would be the socially acceptable response to agree to I'm afraid that I cannot. There are few things more fundamental than fully understanding the significance of what we stand on each day and that holds the air for our next breath of life. It's not a political argument that can be dialed out of because we're tired of it, because face it, we've all been elected to know where we stand on this issue by due point of the fact that we live on this rock. We need to know everything there is to know about the domain that we live in and more importantly for me as a Christian man I need to know whether or not I can trust God, because regardless of what anyone's opinion may be the Bible is quite simply a Flat Earth book. So for me to believe in a Flat Earth has now come to be a belief, and while it may not be the belief of many yet, it is for the brave ones that this book is dedicated to for their courage to ask the questions and pursue the facts that so many wish to either ignore or deny.

Forward

What to Expect

This is a handbook meant to help you find out what it is that you should believe, which is the truth. By no means should anything written on the pages of this book be simply believed at face value.

No, this book is meant to challenge you and make you ask questions, the questions that will arise about almost everything, because when you realize that you were lied to about one thing of such epic proportions as whether the earth is flat or not, then you immediately begin to question the paradoxical reality of just how much else is there that you haven't been told the real deal about.

For far too long we modern humans have been believing things with no comprehension of why we believe them other than for the fact that we were told to believe them and out of misguided trust and media rich subliminal programming, we did. Now upon soon reading the material of this book that will showcase questions and dilemmas of logic that mainstream entities like NASA simply can't refute or explain away, you, the reader will be left in an unenviable circumstance. You will have to choose between maintaining belief in something that can't prove its own positions of belief by issuing scientific rebuttals to questions raised or you will have to embark on a journey of personal discovery that could well have you become labeled a 'Flatard'.

To some the Flat Earth phenomena may seem to be the height of foolishness, but to me it is a much worse reality that someone would continue to believe in a system of governance worldwide that has been proven to be far less than honest with those who they were tasked to be the loyal servants of, which in any society should always be, 'We the People'.

Please do read this book with an open mind – visit the links I will include to other intrepid explorers of this modern exposure of what I believe to be one of the greatest cover-ups in all of human history.

The results of employing common sense and sound scientific procedures of method may just yield some surprising new possibilities for you to consider. You're certainly not going to lose brain cells because you chose to employ some deductive reasoning and revisit the basic principles of geometry, science, and history.

For me it is a maturing process and one that certainly requires discernment because there really are crazy people on both sides of the divide just as there are those who wish to continue manipulating the narrative to steer people off course and away from the true reality of their amazing existence on this hunk of rock formed and pulled out of the deep by just the vibrancy of God's spoken voice. Knee jerk reactions that limit you from turning the page and exploring the concepts of a differing perspective than the one you've always known is indeed a symptom of brain washing known as cognitive dissidence.

Life doesn't happen in a vacuum, but for many they have chosen to live out their existences without ever questioning the reality of the many inconsistencies there are with the official story that we've all been taught as if it were a religion. A religion wherein it is considered the height of blasphemy to question even one small part of it, because the people in the know are so well educated and respectable that it's just absurd to believe that so many of them could lie about something so big. As an author my answer to the question of the believability of such a grand cover-up scheme is to answer it with a story.

Once upon a time there was a World War and several decades later it was followed by another World War. In this later war there was to be a massive invasion of Axis Power controlled Europe by Allied forces based in Great Britain later to be known as operation D-Day.

It's a true story folks.

It is also a regrettably true story that five weeks before the big invasion there was a practice rehearsal done meant to simulate real battle conditions titled Operation Tiger. The rehearsal was set to take place on a British beach in a mock war game exercise meant to prepare US soldiers for storming ashore at Utah Beach in Axis controlled Normandy. It was an unmitigated disaster.

The British opened with live fire on the US landing craft and when the day was done almost a thousand US soldiers were dead on the beach. In a twist of raw irony more soldiers died in this rehearsal, then later died in the actual invasion of Utah Beach in Normandy. These events are tragic just left as they are, but the story continues. None of the wounded soldiers were allowed to talk about what happened. The bodies of the dead were thrown into a mass grave and left there to rot until after the D-Day invasion took place on June 6, 1944.

The bodies were then secretly exhumed between July and August of that year and put on coffin trains where the bodies were presumably shipped back to the US and passed off as D-Day operation casualties. The secret of what took place 5 weeks before D-Day was kept under wraps for almost 40 years after the war and indeed most people reading this have probably never heard of this event and truly I've listed down the official narrative as it currently exists, but some sources claim that over 2,000 soldiers were killed that day, which if true would make it comparable in terms of loss to Pearl Harbor.

My point in relaying this true story is that this tragic military blunder was covered up at the highest level by Dwight D. Eisenhower, himself, a future president, and not a word was breathed of it for nearly 40 years. This is the same government that yearly issues 40 billion dollars in funding to an agency whose employees are publicly on record as stating that we no longer have the ability to go to the moon because the advanced tinfoil technology of the 1960's has been mysteriously lost.

Lost?

Really???

Its errors in believable logic such as this that should really dictate to those out there undecided about turning the page that you really..... really need to turn the page. I dare you to. .

Chapter One

Planes: Eye in the Sky

Evidence for a Flat Earth = Planes.....yep. Some of the best Flat Earth proofs for a Flat Earth are found in the seat of an airplane. I especially like these proofs because not everyone is going to go out and try to recreate all the experiments there are to prove the many points brought up by this book, but most people in the modern swing of things at some point are going to sit in the seat of a plane or already have done so quite frequently.

Before we get to planes though, let's first ponder some of the officially accepted facts that NASA and other scientific sources say define the oblate spheroidal shape that they say the Earth resembles. These accepted 'facts' to define the substance of your daily existence of contact with terra firma are theirs and not mine.

Here they are:

- 1) Earth has a diameter of 7,918 miles
- 2) Earth has a circumference of 24,902 miles at the equator.
- 3) Earth is located 93 million miles from the sun
- 4) It takes light from the sun 8 minutes and 20 seconds to reach earth.

- 5) The earth spins approximately 1,000 miles per an hour at the equator.
- 6) The sun is 109 times larger in diameter than the earth.
- 7) The moon is only one quarter the size of the earth's diameter.
- 8) The moon's shine is light from the sun that is being reflected off of its surface, which in turn makes it visible on earth. It produces no light of its own.
- 9) The earth rotates around the sun at 67,000 miles per an hour, which breaks down to about 18.5 miles per a second.
- 10) An approximation of the weight of all the water in the earth's oceans/seas is 1.45 Quintillion tons (18 zeros).
- 11) Earth exists in a solar system with 8 or 9 other planets and is traveling through space around the Milky Way Galaxy at 515,000 miles per an hour.
- 12) Given the dimensions of earth as provided by NASA the following in terms of curvature to determine the fall off from a straight line of sight can be represented mathematically in the following distance comparisons.
 - 1 mile = .67 feet of fall over the horizon (otherwise known as the vanishing point)
 - 5 miles = 16.67 feet of fall over the horizon
 - 10 miles = 66.69 feet of fall over the horizon
 - 20 miles = 266.75 feet of fall over the horizon
 - 50 miles = 1,667.17 feet of fall over the horizon
 - 100 miles = 6,668.14 feet of fall over the horizon

- 1,000 miles = 663,337.65 feet of fall over the horizon.

13) The Milky Way Galaxy is traveling through the cosmos at 1.43 million miles per an hour.

I could go on, but let's keep it at these commonly recognized and current scientific community supported facts as taught in modern academia and which form the basis for the belief of what the majority of everyone in the current age is being told to believe as the quite literal body of facts that define their existence on earth.

I can't help but ask the potentially skeptical reader of this book this hypothetical question: If an individual was raised apart in modern society without any knowledge of NASA or space flight and so on and had this list defining the earth set before them what do you think their reaction would be?

For instance, how could they prove any of what they'd been told? In actuality how many items on the list are you able to personally prove? My guess is none.

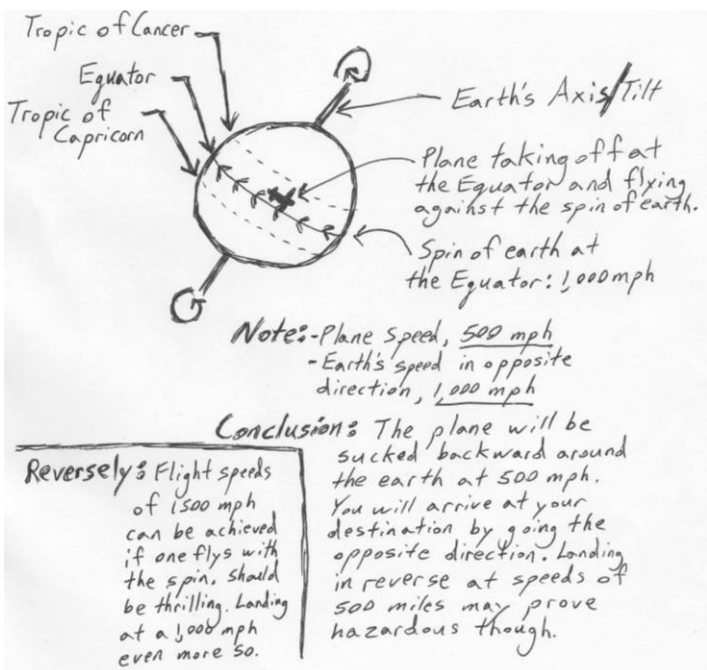

So if you're reading this book coming from a perspective of having always believed in a 'ball earth' then please take a moment and consider with some levity that you believe what you do about the earth being round (oblate spheroid) as a matter of faith. Having faith is perfectly fine, even commendable, but believing the earth is round based off what NASA and others have said is still just a belief, a belief, in that everything they've been telling you for the last 70 years or so is true.

The exception to this would be if you could personally prove that the earth is round. I cannot prove the earth is round.

I can, however prove that it is not. In truth, I do not have all the answers, but the ones I do tell me that a lot of people's faith has been placed entirely in the wrong place and it's high time that people pursued the truth as ardently as they once did and still can if they keep an open mind and apply some critical thinking skills.

Evidence to Consider #1

Plane: Ball Earth -Taking off at the Equator

Plane: Flat Earth -Taking off at the Equator

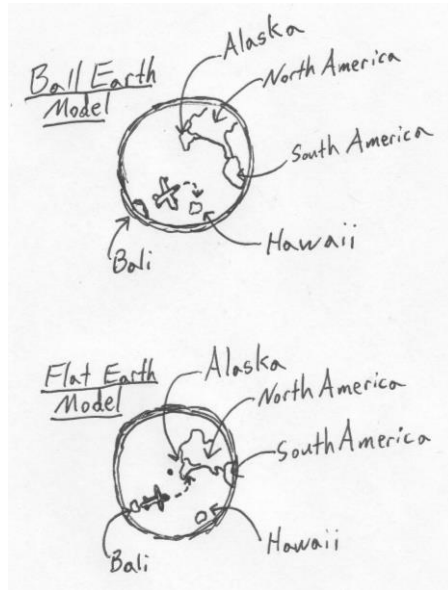

(Quick Reference Note: A Flat Earth does not move.)

- Plane travels at 500 mph in a forward direction and lands safely at destination.

Evidence to Consider #2

Plane: Ball Earth vs. Flat Earth – Baby on the way

Situation (True Story): An airplane flight takes off from Bali in route for Los Angeles, USA. A pregnant woman on board has her water break and the plane's pilot is directed to make an emergency landing at the closest airport, which, if you're flying over the Pacific coming from Bali would be Hawaii right? Think again. The plane landed in Alaska. A true occurrence that makes no sense on a ball earth, but a flat earth? Yeah, what do you know, Alaska is closer than Hawaii by a landslide on a flat earth map. Chances are you have a globe on hand to look at but if you're struggling to find a flat earth map for easy reference then just look up the UN flag. A bit simplistic, but an actual flat earth map indeed, with only one exclusion from it in that the continent of Antarctica is not shown on the UN Flag.

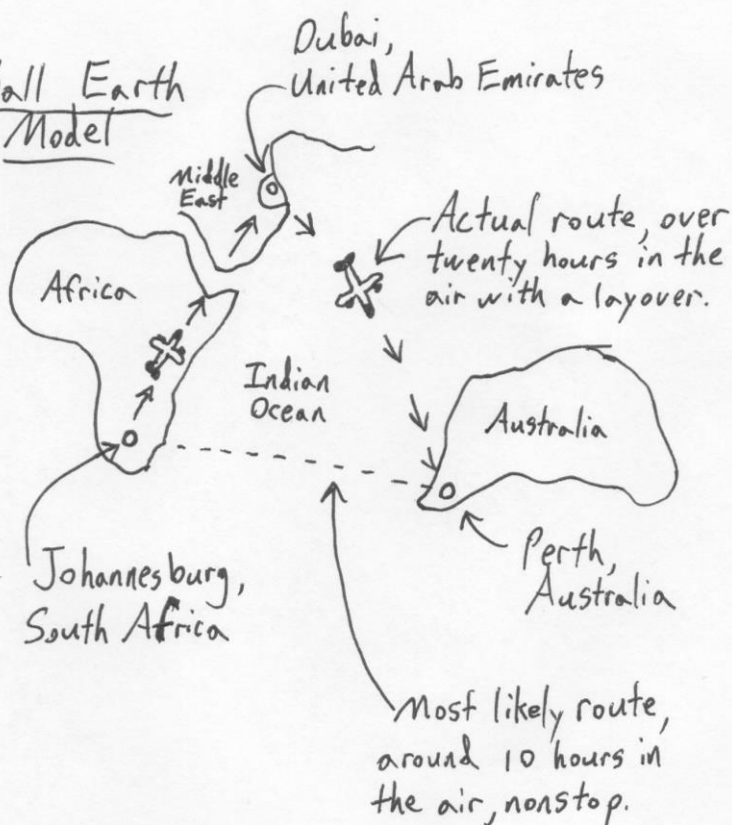

Evidence to Consider #3

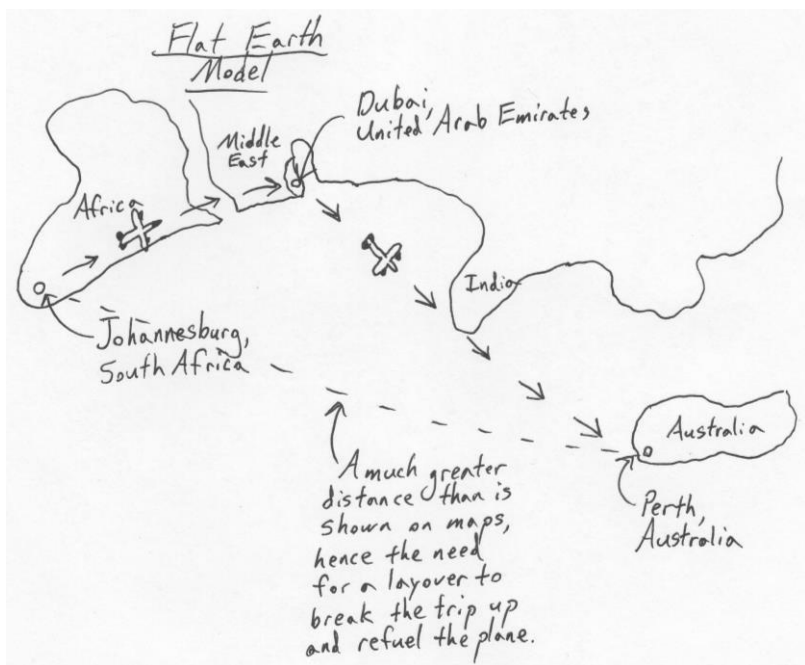

Plane: Absurd Plane Routes on a Ball Earth

Situation: There are many instances of flight paths that make absolutely no sense on a ball earth, but I will limit myself to just outlining one such occurrence, although I encourage you, the reader to explore the many inconsistencies of modern day flight planning in evident display on this earth. The flight plan in question: Johannesburg, South Africa to Perth, Australia. A no brainer really. It measures out to approximately 10 hours of flight time in a direct flight across the Indian Ocean. Just look at your science book approved map. The only problem is that in reality it is not a simple, direct flight over the Indian Ocean with no layovers. To get to Australia from South Africa you have to fly up the entire width of Africa to land in Dubai, United Arab Emirates in the Middle East. After a layover you then get to fly to Australia and when it's all said and done, you've been in the air for more than 20 hours. Say what???? Why on earth would they torture people like this and spend all that extra money on fuel? Literally makes no sense on a ball earth, but on a flat earth (see below)..... Oh, now that does make sense.

Ball Earth Model

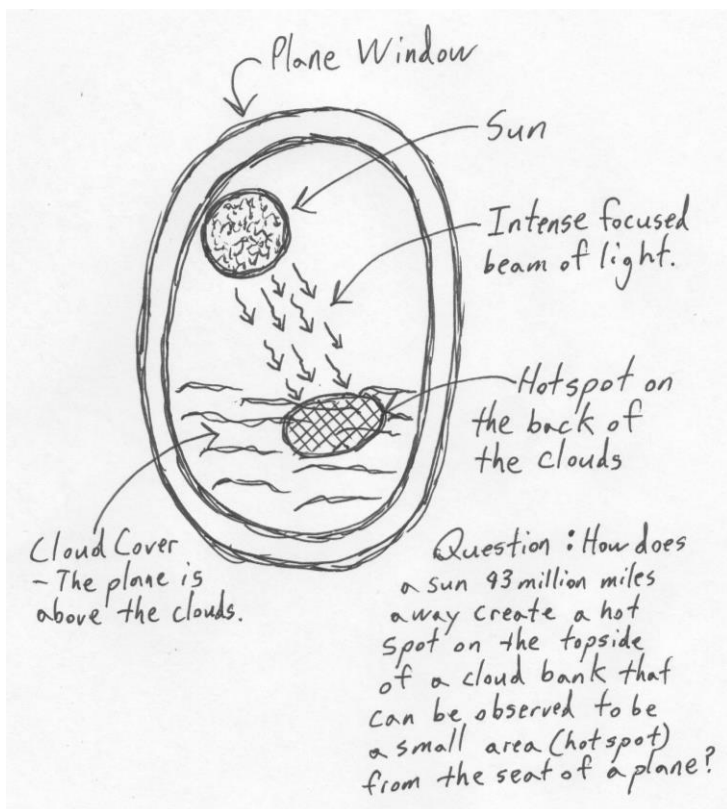

Evidence to Consider #4

Plane: Hot Spots

Situation: Flying in a plane up above a thick cloud bank you observe a hot spot of the sun's reflection being cast onto a small area (hot spot) of the cloud bank you're flying over. Why such a focused and densely tight parametered spot on the back of the clouds from a sun 93 million miles away? While you're looking out the window at the hotspot you might also ask why the horizon as far as you can see is perfectly flat versus the intensely curved imagery as exhibited in the Felix Baumgartner jump from space that was arrived at through a fish-eye camera lens (warps the imagery) that portrayed the state of New Mexico being the entirety of the whole earth in terms of its epic size. The proportions are almost as bad off as NASA's official photographs of earth from space through the years that show the United States ranging in size to be so large that there's no room left over for South America to a later mini-scaled down version. The photoshopped imagery of earth by NASA in their official photo releases is well documented and I invite you to take a look at the mountains of evidence along with the admissions by government hired individuals as having had a hand in photoshopping the imagery of the earth. Why can't they just take a picture of it from any old satellite any old day of the week? Why indeed. Quote by Robert Simon – Data Visualizer and Information Designer aka Mr. Blue Marble, employee of Goddard Space Flight Center, "It is photoshopped but it has to be."

Evidence to Consider #5

Plane: Google's Armada

Situation: Did you know that the imagery of Google Earth is derived at least partially from a flight squadron of planes that Google pays to film for them nonstop? You might ask why on earth would Google pay to do that, when there's how many thousands of supposed satellites up there bumping into each other? Well the reason they say is because they can get higher quality imagery of the earth in order to build 3D views of earth with planes than they can with satellites. Yep, that's right, apparently all the Hollywood movie programming over the past several decades about satellites being so accurate as to be able to tell what brand of cigarette you might be smoking was all a hoax. Satellites are so over the hill anyway. Just imagine them orbiting like clockwork, completely unmanned and not burning any fuel and you will see why we need a fleet of fuel burning piloted planes in the air at all times. It's the next step in evolution after all, at least that's what Google would like you to believe. Sounds to me like we've suffered a debilitating loss of technology as a culture that almost equals the official statements by members of NASA that state that we can no longer have manned flights to the moon because the advanced technology of the 1960's has been mysteriously lost. I kid you not. Don't believe me? Then look it up for yourself. Just know that your internet search via googling it will be monitored by the namesake company even as they are now apparently viewing you in your backyard sunbathing with the latest military grade equipment involving none else but the old, tried, and tested airplane now reinvented to be more accurate than a satellite.

Chapter Two

Space: The Final Frontier Really???

Evidence to Consider #6

Space: Star Charts

Situation: When I was first discovering the whole topic of a flat earth I will admit to a large extent of prejudicial bias where I doubted and discounted many perceivable proofs for a flat earth versus a round spheroid one. I had a great deal of faith in what I had always been told by... well, everyone.

The biggest chink in my defensive mindset of rejecting sound arguments in favor of dogmatic belief in the traditional and accepted view of the earth came when I watched a flat earth video on star charts. I was literally blown away by the simplicity of the truth to be realized that literally couldn't be explained away no matter how one wanted to stretch things in order to stay in a nice cozy cocoon of blissfully blind trustfulness of the authorities that be. To put it simply the profoundness of star charts/star movement is this. Every day, day after day, year after year, all the stars in the heavens rotate around Polaris, the North Star. If you set a slow time release camera up and focus it at the night sky, it will show you star trails that perfectly orbit the North Star. The rhythm never changes. It is a fact, this really happens and is available for analysis by every step of the scientific process. The problem for a ball earth enthusiast is that what takes places in the sky every day simply is impossible to be replicated on a spinning ball hurtling through space. Why? Because anyone on earth can look up and observe the circular path of the stars orbiting the North Star and indeed the earth itself. (Note: The reason different constellations are viewable in different areas of the earth has everything to do with the limitations of human eyesight and nothing to do with evidence for northern and southern hemispheres.) If the earth was spinning the only place on earth that you could get a look at the night sky and see what is to be seen night after night is if you were standing on the very top of the north pole and even then the perspective would be warped some and you would not see the perfect cylindrical paths the stars make each night as well as during the day. If the picture of the differing perspectives coming into play still isn't clear in your mind then by all means get out there and take a peek at the many graphics and videos that have been compiled on this one flat earth evidence alone. To investigate hurts no one, but to choose to remain ignorant after a question has been raised that you have no answer for is frankly dumb and I'm not dumb and I hope you aren't either. This undeniable symmetry of the stars in relation to an earth that my Bible told me flat out was fixed and immovable opened my eyes truly to the reality that at least some of what I had been told (indoctrinated with) could not be true. I love the truth. I can't live happily in a reality that I don't know the truth of. It's like being in a marriage relationship with an individual that you don't know the true identity of and have no desire to find out even though you have serious questions about them. Who does that? Unfortunately the answer is many of us, but it doesn't have to stay that way. We can stop at any time and ask, "Who the heck are you? Why have I always been told this when these star charts tell me of an entirely different reality that I can't refute with any basis of sound logic?" Ask questions, it's the only way to the truth. If you don't you may just keep spending the years of your life away with a partner full of deceptions that has no good will for you in mind. One last point of perspective, if I can, to help demonstrate the need for critical thinking when it comes to rapidly altering points of view. If you truly still do believe that the earth is what popular science has told you for the last 80 years or so imagine the inconsistencies of the Hubble Telescope. They routinely focus in on a star. They study it for hours supposedly, but in the meantime the earth is spinning a thousand miles per hour at the equator, earth itself is traveling 67,000 miles per an hour around the sun, while our galaxy travels at 515,000 miles an hour through space. With this all considered we're supposed to believe the Hubble Telescope can remain focused on any astral body for more than a split second let alone the time in its history that it was allowed to stare for 10 days into a "defined narrow sliver of the cosmos"? What! Did all of the mass of everything just come to a rolling stop for this epic photo stream? Really? Why aren't photos of space released to the public every day? The point I'm trying to make is that so much of what we are fed is entirely theoretical mumbo jumbo. The Hubble Telescope's technicians openly admit that they can't measure the depths of space their viewing through but there measuring it anyway. What??? An awakening of critical thinking is sorely needed in this day and age.

Evidence to Consider #7

Space: Satellites – Where are you?

Situation: The Goddard Space Flight Center says there are currently 2,271 satellites up there in space orbiting the earth. Popular culture has in the past really talked up the effectiveness of satellites, especially when it comes to the military's use of such an infrastructure. Three primary problems need to be answered.

1) If satellites orbit the earth, then why are their coverage dead zones over the oceans? Do the orbiting satellites that have to cross over the oceans anyway in their geocentric orbits just switch off as to conserve battery or something and then snap back on and begin broadcasting again when land-fall gets close again? It's a bit much to be believed isn't it, but how else does one describe the vast coverage dead zones over the oceans?

2) Did you know that in terms of the Internet conductivity between continents that most of it is done almost exclusively through undersea cables? This would explain why the country of Australia almost lost their entire connection to the Internet for a month in 2016 when one of only three undersea cables feeding information to the country got snapped in an underwater fault zone. Where are the satellites? How is an entire modern nation almost plunged into unconnected darkness by one little undersea cable getting snapped? Oh, that's right, undersea cables between countries/continents amount for 99.9 percent of data exchanged internationally. What exactly do satellites do again? I mean Google doesn't even seem to use them anymore as it focuses on flying planes and wrapping its undersea cables in an anti-shark metallic mesh because sharks are irresistibly drawn to bite their cables. Also, don't forget all those miles and miles of fiber optic cable strewn across the country buried deep in the median strips of major highways. Oh, and by the way, did you know that 'they' say it's easier, faster and less expensive to lay an underwater sea cable into the ocean depths greater than Mt. Everest in height always being mindful to avoid fault zones and uneven terrain than it is to launch one satellite into orbit? Satellites are so outdated. We should just keep watching TV and not think about it too much as to how exactly signals get around the earth. Old technology once again makes a step back into the limelight. We don't need expensive satellites when we have trusty old reliable undersea cables that have been put in use by humans since the 1800's. It really begs the question of, 'Are we actually getting smarter or not?'

3) America loves its satellite TV to be sure. It can be hard to find a house that doesn't have a TV dish perched on the side of it angled at the sky. The dishes always point in specific directions because that's where the satellite is located. ??? As previously mentioned the earth is spinning really, really fast and the satellite's going on in its own unique journey, but having a dish pointed in a particular direction at all times always grabs in that signal to keep the tube going full blast or..... or are all the dishes instead being pointed at a firmament dome that hovers over a flat earth set in place by an all powerful Creator? Are all the dishes receiving their transmission signals by collecting it as it is being deflected at differing trajectories off the dome at the top of the world kind of like playing racket ball in an enclosed room at the gym? Would this be why satellite dish receivers nearer to the equator point straight up (the highest part of the dome, while further away locations have to angle the dishes over farther in order to catch a signal?

Evidence to Consider #8

Space: Satellites – What are you made of?

Situation: On earth we have this thing called the Periodic Table of Elements, essentially the elements that all things on earth are made from. According to NASA and other scientific sources, there are varying levels of the atmosphere and who knows, maybe there are, but to get to the point, satellites exist in their orbits in a region called the Thermosphere. Not a very nice place as it has temperatures ranging from 900 to almost 4,000 degrees F. The problem as to whether satellites even exist gets thrown into greater peril when one considers that there are only about seven elements on the Periodic Table that can withstand such temperatures and not melt and satellites aren't comprised of any of these elements. So how do you put a hunk of high tech gadgetry into an area of the atmosphere where all the elements, it's comprised of will easily melt, but somehow magically it doesn't? Some defenders of the existence of satellites insist that it's because the intense radiation in this level of atmosphere closer to the sun has a cooling effect instead of a heating effect. Really? How about that. I'll try to remember that one if someone does indeed push the proverbial Cold War Doomsday button someday. Maybe that's what the phrase, 'When hell freezes over.' is referring to. Other defenders of this admittedly tricky issue for satellites insist that the satellites survive because they radiate so much of the absorbed heat away so even though the satellite is sitting in an oven hot enough to melt it – it somehow rises above and radiates away more of the 'heatness' than it is receiving, outward from itself preserving itself in..... in... um, yeah I don't get how that one works. Pies placed in the oven due tend to bake through and through eventually. The most important thing to remember though is that somehow about 50 years ago we sent actual human beings through this layer of the atmosphere and they didn't melt. Maybe the loss of the technology to get through this hurdle of the earth's atmosphere in route to the moon could explain the mysterious loss of sound logic to explain exactly why elements left in an oven hot enough to melt them don't actually melt even as the international space station has somehow managed to do this for around 15 years now.

Evidence to Consider #9

Space: Squirrels – Inhabitants of Mars?

Situation: On September 28th back in 2012 NASA released a photo to the public taken by the Curiosity Rover depicting the red tinted barren landscape that we have been conditioned to believe is what Mars looks like. The problem is that several intrepid souls over the years have matched up the scenery from Mars photographs as being a dead ringer for the Mojave Desert located in Nevada and California sans a little red tint to the photoshopped outcome. While it could be argued that Mars and the Mojave Deserts look remarkably similar, what can't be refuted easily at all by NASA is why is there a Mojave ground squirrel in their photograph. NASA refuses to address the fact that the squirrel is in their photo maintaining that the climate of Mars is completely inhospitable for animal growth with an atmosphere of 95.32 percent Carbon Dioxide. So NASA where did the squirrel come from? Maybe this is why relatively few photos are ever released to the public of the final frontier.

Evidence to Consider #10

Space: Satelites: - Smile.

Situation: Admittedly, this one isn't so much of an evidence to consider as it is a personal observation of mine. When in the course of your daily life you happen to see a photo of a satellite at work, chances are it was a scene of it poised above the big blue green marble of earth spinning away happily underneath it as the darkness of space beckons in from all sides, even though the bright shiny solar array wings of the satellite are lit up like only golden tinfoil at its finest grade can be – seen a picture of a satellite posed in its tireless work like this before? I bet you have. My question is – Who took the photo of the satellite? I mean really, who snapped the photo? A ghost satellite flying along in piggy-back formation for the sole purpose of photographing a satellite busy at work? Now remember the corporations of the world have stated that laying undersea cable between continents is cheaper than putting a satellite into space so where's the fiscal argument for having a shadowing satellite meant to take pictures of other satellites? The question is really rhetorical because the admitted reality is that all these satellite photos with earth in the background are arrived at through the use of CGI graphics. Don't believe me then look it up. The Internet still exists to this day as a ready fount of information at your keyboard finger tips courtesy of endless miles of undersea cable and median strip fiber optic cables to say nothing of the gazillion or so 'cell phone' towers that are in ever increasing existence everywhere. Incidentally, if you are blessed to live in the land of Nowhere, I hate to break it to you, but the towers will soon find you. Yes, the towers that you lose cell phone signal beneath, but that's a whole other subject. For the moment, let's just stick to discovering that terra firma may actually be just as flat as it appears to be.

Evidence to Consider #11

Space: The feel of sunlight.

Situation: Picture the scene – The temperature is in the eighties and the sun is blazing. There you are with a shovel in your hands digging a hole to plant a tree in your yard all the while sweat is just rolling off of you. Then suddenly something changes and the lawn around you shadows and with relief you feel a let up on the intensity of the heat that has been bearing down relentlessly upon you. With gratitude, you look up at the white fluffy cloud that has temporarily blocked out the sun from its steady torture of you. With remorse you see the cloud is a small one and in the passage of a couple more seconds the cloud has moved on and there you are baking in the sun again. The feeling of returning heat is an instant one isn't it. As previously noted, though NASA is on the books as saying that a light photon given off from the sun takes 8 minutes and twenty seconds to reach earth. When the cloud moved away you felt the heat of the sun again instantly didn't you. Now the counter argument is likely to be that because the sun is so far away and the cloud so much closer to you that the exchange only appears to be instant because things are moving so fast. Maybe. However can proponents of that belief explain why people prone to sunburn, indeed anyone for that matter, get the worst sunburns on cloudy days? The essence of the sun is still coming through the cloud. Let's take it out further still – solar eclipses. If you've seen one then you've seen how the light of the sun is instantly restored as the moon moves on past. Again, how is this possible? Where's the delay in the sunlight like there now is in a Super Bowl halftime show being aired 'live' so in the event of another Janet Jackson breast baring debacle they can shut things down before the feed enters your tube in the living room? The feedback delay simply doesn't happen in nature. As the moon moves past the sun the light of the sun is instantly there upon you being reflected on the ground around you. These are simple tests that you need to look at and ponder on and just for a moment forget how you've been taught that all the people at NASA are really so much smarter than everyone else.

Evidence to Consider #12

Space: Moonlight ain't Sunlight.

Situation: NASA and the scientific community at large tell us that the moonlight shining down on us is reflected light from the sun. If you believe this then answer the quandary of this observable fact that you can go out and measure for yourself. During the day the temperature under the shade of a tree is cooler than it is out in the open field next to it that is being exposed to direct sunlight. The observable twist with moonlight, though is that it is the opposite. It is warmer in the shade than out in the open that is being bathed in direct moonlight. If moonlight was reflected sunlight, then even in reduced heat tones it should be reacting just the same as sunlight impacts the environment during the day does, but the thing is the heat of moonlight is translucent and heats up those spaces that the sun skips over in the daytime. Beyond that, if you do research and weed through a lot of by the book faithful to the status quo rhetoric you will discover that when analyzed objectively that even the wavelengths of the two light sources are different from one another and not reproducible over into the other as in the case of sunlight being converted over into the actual wavelengths of light given off by the moon. As a Christian the moon being the source of its own light makes perfect sense after all, didn't God say in the beginning that He made, the greater light to rule the day and the lesser lights to rule the night. He made no mention of the lesser lights being reflected light off of the greater light, but posed them as individual sources of light unto themselves. I will admit to some serious concerns I have about the moon as it has several inconsistencies about it. First off it is not mentioned explicitly in the Genesis creation account and only appears later in the Hebrew texts. Furthermore, there are observable issues where the stars have been photographed shining through the surface of the moon. There are still other things on top of this that make the moon a big question mark for me. I frankly don't have all the answers, but I am in active pursuit of them and to do that it is critical to keep an open mind. As I stated at the beginning of this handbook – I can't necessarily prove that the earth is indeed flat, because I simply don't know everything and haven't been everywhere, but I can prove that the earth isn't either round or a spheroid shape hurtling through space. That's better than NASA trying to quell speculation that the moon landings were all faked by donating 'moon rocks' to museums and universities only to later have it come out that all the samples given were verified as being native of earth origin material. A lie spoken boldly enough and propped up by the high and mighty of society is convincing, but when analyzed as in the case of all these donated moon rocks can easily be turned out for the lie it is. If questioning the reality of either your planetary existence or that of a flat stationary existence where Earth is the center of the cosmos with heaven positioned directly above it and hell beneath it is still too much to contemplate then ask yourself why you should trust someone implicitly with something vitally important that only they can verify and tell you is true or not? The moon rocks have been proven to be fake. The shadows are all wrong in the original moon landing films, which by the way have since disappeared along with all the advanced technology of the 1960's to the point that current day NASA officials go on camera and publicly admit that they don't know how to safely convey human life through the radiation fields of the Van Allen Belts. I'm not making this up. The evidence is staggering in regards to everything about NASA being a complete fake from the famous Hollywood Movie director rumored to have been brought in to make sure that the filming appeared authentic to the escaping air bubbles escaping astronaut suits and rising to the surface of a pool when the film being shot is supposed to be depicting astronauts in the dark of space and not that of an underground darkened pool. Look up green screen failures in regards to the international space station, along with the many harness clothing glitches and crazy female astronaut hairdos that feature enough hair product to put a salon out of business. You don't have to be a flat earth believer to come to the conclusion that something is badly off with one particular government agency that receives more funding from the federal government than many countries in this world are able to post as their entire GDP. Why is an agency such as NASA so well-funded to continue in space exploration when as previously shown space technologies such as satellites are outdated and not as good as planes and undersea cable lines? It simply doesn't make rational sense. Keep reading, we're just getting started.

Evidence to Consider #13

Space: Moon Manipulation

Situation: A simple one. If someone – a lot of someones – are telling the truth about the moon then why Photoshop it? I mean, why? Why can't any photo of the moon being handed over to the public be free of photo manipulation or simply be completely forgery free? For the evidence I speak of look up the many evidences that exist where official released photos by NASA are uploaded in plain run of the mill Photoshop applications and with a little manipulation of light exposure levels to bring out the pixels it becomes instantly clear that someone has been erasing / cropping / mopping / and fabricating all over the place with what is supposed to be a direct to the public photo.

Evidence to Consider #14

Space: Zippy Clouds

Situation: Have you ever seen NASA's satellite 24 hour photo reel view of the earth spinning by? Look it up. Then on a windy day look up at a cloud zipping by overhead and notice the speed of the cloud a thousand feet or less above your head that is moving faster than the cloud mass shown circling the mass of earth rotating over a 24 hour cycle from the perspective of a satellite located way up in the Thermosphere. Does the disparity in what should be going on come to realization for you? From your minute perspective of only being able to see a few visible miles before your eyesight gives out you are seeing the cloud cover move faster or at least as fast as NASA's satellite view of earth (that they say is in real time) depicting at least a 1/3 to a 1/2 sized pic of the earth's surface equaling a swath of thousands upon thousands of square miles of cloud cover. The mathematical problem presented, however though is that the farther out the viewed in perspective is the faster the action should be the closer in you get to the action. In other words your view of the clouds passing by overhead should be one of seeing them pass by at warp speed at something like MACH 10 in order to account for how a perspective taken from so far out in space surveilling over a much greater area should look like given the fast rate of movement NASA shows the cloud swaths moving at. It simply does not compute in the real world. So the reality is that the people who have been proven to lie about so much are once again lying. Why do they need to lie so much?

Evidence to Consider #15

Space: The Great Wall

Situation: How many times growing up have you heard the released ‘odd’ fact that the only man-made structure visible from the moon is, The Great Wall of China? Thousands upon thousands of miles away and the Great Wall is the only visible man-made object? The Great Wall may be long, but it’s only about 20 feet wide a lot of places. Taking that into account exactly how is any kind of detail visible when the scientific community says the absolute visible spectrum for a human being of something small is 30 miles away? Now the Great Wall is really long, but the moon is 238,900 miles away and remember the width of the Great Wall is only 20 feet or so. The squiggly length of it measuring 2400 km may well indeed be visible, but with a width of 20 feet how would it ever show up, especially considering that the wall is made up of the native stone material of the local area. There are interstate systems all over the earth that run a lot longer than the Great Wall, and they are typically wider than 20 feet, if not double the distance and often made of materials that are in direct contrast to their surroundings. None of these black asphalt roads stand out though against even a desert backdrop?

Evidence to Consider #16

Space: Planets – Wandering Stars

Situation: In the ancient world planets were known as wandering stars. If you do your research and look up some examples of alternative high resolution photography taken by high end consumer market grade cameras you will witness these, ‘planets’ come into much deeper perspective as big dancing orbs of light with light rays arcing off of them in every color of the rainbow in ever mesmerizing geometric patterning that is constantly changing. It really does you no harm to stop reading this book and go look up some of the imagery taken by these freelance photographers. Who knows, maybe they’re lying about the imagery somehow, but then doesn’t NASA too? If both are being evaluated for honesty, my money is going to rest on the individuals who aren’t being paid to show their photography to the public and as the old, but neglected American legal precept goes, “innocent till proven guilty”, so take a gander at them. Just remember though, NASA says there’s a big old storm system on Jupiter that’s bigger than the earth and one that never ends. A storm system bigger than the earth and one that never ends – that’s frankly hard to imagine and that’s about all I can do, because details like that simply aren’t visible from earth. The strange thing though is that I can be anywhere on a planet smaller than a storm on another planet and yet look up and recognize every constellation in the sky, which again is simply a mathematical impossibility on a spinning ball.

Evidence to Consider #17

Space: Path of the Sun

Situation: The Bible tells me that the sun moves around the earth. The book of Enoch says the sun moves around the earth. All the great ancient cultures from the Egyptians to the Mayans and beyond believed the same. Cultures with such astute reckoning of the skies that they constructed items such as the Pyramids in perfect correlation with constellations and the like and yet one Jesuit Catholic Priest, a privately wealthy one at that, decides to alter the view of what all of previously recorded history dictated in great detail in terms of a sun mathematically shown to be about 32 miles above the surface of earth and one that moves or has a circuit of movement that wobbles in and out across the surface of a flat earth (change of seasons) and is equal in size to the moon to suddenly be 93 million miles away and eminently huge on a grand scale hard to even realistically imagine. This man, one Copernicus – Jesuit priest and author of the heliocentric model. Do you know he privately funded the construction of an observatory in order to prove his alternative math equations after the fact of announcing them publicly, but he never actually used the observatory to observe the sun that he had charted such an alternative view for. It was basically for show, an expensive prop if you will. It worked apparently because the Catholic Church reversed its view to align with his (The same organization that currently in the modern era owns and operates an ultra-high tech and highly illegal observatory in New Mexico located on a sacred native American mountain that has a telescope entitled , ‘Lucifer’ in its arsenal. Funny how a foreign entity can construct a state of the art facility in a native American historical land preserve without even a protest being waged over it or it even being agreed to by the native locals who regard the mountain as sacred in that they believe it is a portal opening to other dimensions of reality.) So armed with this new belief by one of their own Jesuit brethren, the Jesuits priests invading China in the 1800’s with the rest of the Western powers of the day demanded the eradication of observations by royal Chinese scribes that had thousands of years of painstakingly recorded data at their fingertips that proved that the sun was both small, much closer, and moving across the face of the earth in its circuit. Don't believe me, well then look it up. Study the evidence. Develop an informed opinion through research that evaluates all the angles along with all that the past has to teach us and you might just realize a profound truth. Which is this – we are dumber today than we used to be in the past. Again, it's basic provable math. Each new generation has more DNA copy mistakes, then the preceding generation, not to mention the valuable, healthy strands of DNA that go extinct in wars, famines, inner city violence, and drug ridden neighborhoods both far, and near. We humans are getting less capable of advanced cognitive function and overall health has declined from what we once possessed. No biological mutation has ever advanced the biological capabilities of an individual no matter how many movies you watch depicting it occurring. Adaptation and mutation are two very different things. Adapting is something humans are very good at, while mutation is a symptom of a system breaking down into less ordered random chaos. The Law of Entropy proves what I'm saying. We are truly less capable today, so who are we to throw all the wisdom of the ages still left to us down the drain because we think we're so advanced today in that practically everyone now has the ability to have a smartphone? A smartphone doesn't make anyone smarter. It's simply an aid to help those who are no longer able to do what their predecessors used to be able to do in their own head. It is a human adaptation to help with being less capable of cognitive output. This is proven out by the reality of though many possess a smartphone only a minute small number of people actually know how they work and could reproduce one if they needed to in a disaster situation. The smartphone/entertainment obsessed culture of today is symptomatic of a civilization on the verge of a collapse that may see many communities fall back to the stone age, that is if they're even able to yet survive those harsher conditions required for simple basic survival and the constant need to feed yourself more calories than you burn each day. I live in a community that has a strong Amish community living in it. Because of restrictive religious beliefs these Amish still get around via horse and buggy or, perish the thought –walking, and often don't have electricity in their houses. Some have tractors and in this I find one of the most ironic incidences of occurrence. The people in fancy cars and with a host of smart devices waiting for them at home, who have absolutely no clue as to how to reconstruct any of the advanced toys they own from their car to their Alexa waiting at home for them to ask questions of, honk their horn and shake their head in derision at these horse drawn simple country folk, the Amish, that they whiz by on the road. To them there could be no people more backward minded and yet that same Amish man when he gets home will approach his broke down tractor sitting out in the yard and start taking it apart by himself. He's never gone to mechanic school and has no experience to speak of to even know what the parts/functions are that he's looking at. He watches everything, though closely and with applied curiosity, he disassembles everything and lays it all out on the ground. He locates the problem that he still doesn't likely even have the terminology to even describe to someone else and upon fixing it in true jury rig fashion, he reassembles the tractor, often eliminating parts he sees as not being needed for best function of the mechanical beast or better yet he modifies things by adding in something he thinks will make a positive difference. Guess what, the tractor starts right up and works better than it has in years. Before long all the non-Amish farmers in the area are driving their expensive tractors over to Eli's farm for him to fix them because he just has a way of finding the problem that they can't or simply don't have the ambition to even try to. Now who is the lesser cognitive developed one in this equation? Extrapolate things out further. If I'm told by people who get paid lots of money and have lots of fancy toys that they apparently don't even know how they once worked, because they've misplaced them, but I am still supposed to believe in rote manner everything they say. I don't even belong to their sector of elitism in society's framework and yet it reflects badly upon me when I can take apart the rudimentary parts of the system and reassemble them back into a working model in opposition to their own that had thousands of years of accumulated evidence going for it, when they can't even explain how they can get another human into space beyond the Van Allen belts with the current advanced technology of today. An individual can walk down the street with a hand held device he bought for less than a $1,000.00 that has more computing potential and memory than the original Apollo moon, space modules had and yet we've lost the ability to make tin foil perform as well as it once did?

Chapter Four

Water – Ingredient for Life and Flat Earth Proof

Evidence to Consider #18

Water: Gravity as we've been told

Situation: So if the accepted scientific norms of space are applied and we look at the heliocentric model we will see that Earth is the third planet from the sun. What a sun too - I mean it's been calculated that the mass of earth could fit into the sun's mass over a million times or more. The numbers really don't matter, but basically when referring to the accepted views of space they start with a couple hundred grand and quickly move into millions and then billions and so on. Kind of like the Theory of Evolution. Hmm, imagine that. Anyway, because the sun is so big and so magnetically powerful it holds all the planets in a steady orbit around it. One question that might arise is why isn't the moon sucked away from the earth by the sun when it comes between the sun and the earth? It's got to be the centrifugal force, man – it just holds that moon locked to the earth. Just like how earth's gravity is so powerful that it can hold in all the tons and tons of water in the oceans from all sluicing to the bottom hemisphere of the planet, while at the same time allowing human body's consisting of 70% water to move about freely in both hemispheres instead of being glued to the surface of the planet like paperclips on a strong magnet. It's just amazing really. I mean Newton's Theory of Gravity – you know the mystic force of nature that's never been seen, never been measured and appears to be one peculiarly selective force if indeed it does exist. On the one hand the earth is being dragged through the cosmos by the sun, but the earth manages to hold the moon away from the sun and yet NASA tells us that the moon is actually getting farther away from us and will one day spiral away out into space on its own journey, but while this is all going on Jupiter, the fifth planet from the sun that supposedly has a mass 2 and a half times larger than all the other planets combined is still being dragged around by the sun right along with the earth. Really? Does no one see the obvious gaps in logic? Earth's gravity is so powerful that it can hold a small moon in orbit around it, but a planet several times larger than all the other planets combined that is even yet positioned farther out in space is still being dragged around like a puppy by the sun. In like fashion the quadrillions of tons of seawater on earth are glued virtually upside down in places to a ball and for the most part stay in place while earthly beings such as you and I walk around freely. I've said it before and I'll say it again – Do your own research! If you do, you will see and read arguments from professors and layman everywhere that are offering up evidential proofs that not only are Newton's theories wrong, but so are Einstein's when it comes to the Theory of Relativity. I could list source after source, but I'm not going to do that, because simply put if you don't have the drive to find out the truth of what you believe and why you believe it by now, me listing out fields of data is simply going to do you no good. The truth is something that needs to be found and the good news is that it can be, but you have to be open to discovering it, because if you just read it you won't know what to do with it. The purpose of this book is to point out evidences for the individual to consider in order to make that journey of self-discovery for yourselves. If I tell you to just believe me and other flat earthers because we're just so smart how would I be any different than the current deceivers of mankind? I didn't stumble upon hidden truths because I was smarter than anyone, no, this journey began because I was delivered from a lie. A lie that held me in a make believe prison and conditioned me to think and act like a slave in that I believed and did everything told to me without ever once questioning it as to do so would make one look so stupid wouldn't it? Everyone knows the earth is round after all. Correction: That is almost everyone and the mostly everyone in question believe what they do out of simple faith and conditioning by the powers that be that throw the truth in everyone's faces with a UN flag that depicts a flat earth with Antarctica nowhere to be found on it.

The next three evidences involving water will if the others before them have not proven beyond a shadow of a doubt that for the majority of us, we have been born into a grand scaled lie and have unwittingly even taken a part in perpetuating it out even further. Truly as it has been said, “The truth will set you free.” This is indeed the case and it is my hope that even as I have been delivered from a false practice of belief even so maybe others can be too. Read on if you still need evidence to help you make the leap to question modern reality as you know it. Come right on in. Warning: The waters of truth can be quite cold and jarring to say the least, but at least you will know that you are alive.

Evidence to Consider #19

Water: The Nile

Situation: The Nile, ancient river that it is, flows over a thousand miles through the desert wastes of Sudan and Egypt to eventually spill into the Mediterranean Sea and yet the measurably drop in elevation over this great expanse of time honored distance rooted in antiquity is exactly one foot. That’s right. The drop in elevation over a thousand miles of flow is one foot. Pause..... Okay, what is the accepted rate of fall over the horizon in regards to the curvature of the earth again? Here’s that chart again for you.

- 1 mile = .67 feet of fall over the horizon (otherwise known as the vanishing point)
- 5 miles = 16.67 feet of fall over the horizon
- 10 miles = 66.69 feet of fall over the horizon
- 20 miles = 266.75 feet of fall over the horizon
- 50 miles = 1,667.17 feet of fall over the horizon
- 100 miles = 6,668.14 feet of fall over the horizon

- 1,000 miles = 663,337.65 feet of fall over the horizon.

Okay then how exactly does our one foot of elevation change over a thousand miles turn into the NASA's bare, minimum of curvature fall equaling 666,337.65 feet? While die hard believers in the round earth theory come up with off the wall concepts to combat this irrevocable proof for a flat earth only to settle on the hope that NASA has an answer for it in a scientific journal forum somewhere – which the answer to is – no they don't. They won't even debate a fact like this with a flat earther, because they can't and so they don't, instead they just call us stupid. Interested readers do move on as water has more to say in support of a flat stationary earth.

Evidence to Consider #20

Water: The Seas Don't Lie

Situation: We have these maps worldwide that are called topographical maps and they function on a very simple and worldwide measurable principle – sea level. Water is self-leveling and while there are lakes at higher altitudes the connected oceans and seas of this world form a baseline measurement from which all other measurements in height are gleaned both above and below the level of the sea, which is elevation 0. Mountains like Mt. Everest rise over 29,000 feet above sea level and rifts in the oceans plunge to even deeper depths below sea level. The baseline of 'sea level' is pure factualness. There is no arguing with it like can be done in a back and forth matter about gravity and matters of density, heat, volume, and mass. The Zero level mark is the same world-wide, an international standard of observable fact. Why is sea level so important to a flat earth? Well, because it can only exist on a flat plane and function as it does. Water is self-leveling. If you have water left in a bucket it doesn't form into a ball of water. It remains flat and the measurement from the rim of the bucket down to the surface of the water on one side of the bucket is the same on the other side of the bucket with no degree of upward curvature of the water across the middle expanse of the bucket. An argument might be raised that a bucket is too small an object and the rate of curvature that should exist if the earth is round simply can't be measured. That's fine, move on to a bigger target, freshwater lakes. Pick any lake in the world you would like to and get some surveying gear and go out and take some base point measurements of the surface of the water from one side to the other and guess what – no degree of curvature of any body of water on earth has ever been found. The water in a lake no matter how big or small it might be is perfectly level across its entire expanse. Don't believe me then look it up, better yet, do it yourself. Say you have a swimming pool that you can visit. Get yourself a laser level and take a crack at it. Even if the swimming pool is only 30 feet across according to NASA's official earth curvature calculations you're going to have a measurable degree of curvature over even such a short distance. I know the reality that is being set before you is huge, but just hang in there and allow yourself to contemplate and rationalize out things.

Things such as - how did seafarers in the old sailing days chart out their location at sea by either using the stars or a sextant with which they took direct measurements off of the sun to find out where they were when they had no formula for earth curvature rattling around in their brains? All their dead reckoning was based off of linear line measurements with no curve added in. You ever see a movie or a picture of an old maritime map or heck, even a modern map say off of a movie like the Red October? Every last map any sea captain has ever used from the days of Captain Cook to the Soviet Commander of a nuclear submarine has been a flat earth map. No sea captain has ever taken an actual globe and used it to plot a course to anywhere as it is simply mathematically impossible. What is even the sense of all the globes put on the market and stuck in classrooms when every last one of them is shaped like a round ball and not an oblate spheroid as NASA claims the earth to be like in appearance, but never actually shows it in that shape anyway. Anyone ever see a pear shaped globe hanging out on someone's office desk?

Sea captains both past and present don't have formulas that account for curvature nor do they have prewarped perspective print outs that will coincide with a straight pencil line drawn telemetry drawn across a map in order to account for the rate of curvature as a reference for a course of heading in order to know how fast the ship has to travel and for how many days in order to reach a given point somewhere else on the sea chart map. The only formulas they've ever used to plot these measurements are based off of straight line trajectories and known fixed points of reference, but if the earth is curved then literally there is this giant bubble of water that the ship literally has to sail up and over that would add untold nautical sea miles to the journey. No 2D drawn dimensional unit can be converted over to equal the same number of units when portrayed in a 3D model where not only do you have the factors of x and y, but also that of a vertical plane z axis to consider. Am I coming through?

Do you see how it's impossible for a ship captain to plot a straight course based off linear line measurements whose units of length are the basis for determining the time of arrival at the final destination and whose tested and tried long term use has been in existence since the days that men universally accepted the fact that the earth was flat. Man's opinion may have changed over the years, but the realities of a sea chart and finding your way anywhere on earth has not. The reason a charted out course on a sea chart reaches its destination time and time again is because the sea is level. It's level. It's dead flat level. How many of you have a road atlas in your car? Probably a few of you, the few who haven't given over to the peace of mind of simply driving and letting the British voiced woman in your phone tell you where to go. If you have one pull it out and take a look. See any lines of curvature. No, actually there's this little scale bar that says this much darkened out space equals this many miles of distance. So with that baseline measurement you can see that it's roughly going to take 700 miles of travel to get from the state of Maryland to the state of Illinois. Where are the curvature calculations? Why did your first word math problems in school, "Harry is in a plane traveling at 500 miles per hour. How long will it take him to reach Cleveland, Ohio that is a straight distance of 1,500 miles away from his starting location?" never factor in the fact that the earth is curved and so you need to add in more time because there's more distance to be traveled? The plain, simple truth people is that we've been lied to about a lot. How much is anyone's guess, but I think it's time we found out.

Evidence to Consider #21

Water: Seeing the way home.

Situation: Okay, one more use of the high seas to illustrate how actually laughable it is to prove that NASA and you name everybody else involved in the conspiracy is flat out lying about the shape of the earth. Lighthouses. Lighthouses are as concrete of a fact as one could ask for to forever sink the notion of the earth being a ball as actually being nothing more than a silly notion. Look below and tell me what you see.

Fact: Sailors spot light houses while at sea at distances of 25 miles and beyond.

Question: Why can this average sized ship not see the light from a rather tall for a light house 20 miles out at sea?

Answer: I have no idea. Why?

The evidence for a flattish non-round earth is really staggering when you look at actual observational facts that can be measured and quantified by the average Sue or Joe. When it comes to sight line distances that defy anything remotely possible for the earth to be round as NASA claims you have many if not countless examples. People in Canada many, many miles away can see the city skyline of Chicago over Lake Michigan if conditions are right. Another one would be the Cliffs of Dover visible over the English Channel and for me it's a 90' foot tall row of windmills that I shouldn't be seeing as far away as I do from my own land if NASA was telling the truth. One note: When you go to research these proofs for a flat earth be aware that what you're going to find is a mountain of trolls doing their best to put up roadblocks of obtuseness to invariably seek to shove a finger in the leaking dyke that is the whole notion of a round or even spheroid shaped earth. Invariably, after their mumbo jumbo over how stupid flat earth believing people are, you will often witness they sum up their reasons to discount solid facts by them, citing some official person of academia or tv personality that said something like, "It's so obvious! The earth is round, because, well.... because it just is." I have yet to see one proof from a round earth believing person as to why it is so obvious that the earth is round that didn't rely on NASA or something related to the space program and satellites. Do you feel the spin of the earth beneath you as you sleep? With your first step out of bed are you smacked into the wall of your bedroom at a 1,000 miles per hour? Of course not, but then why aren't you? This is a question that really boils down to the individual, because you see NASA doesn't have any explanation for why that doesn't happen. They just have a legion of important people in positions of preeminence, who are paid quite well to spout out a bunch of tangled webs designed to confuse one and at the same time cast this crowd controlling aura of 'you're not one of those stupid people are you? Come join up with the crowd again or else....' The 'or else' is the unspoken threat of being labeled as crazy and it being justifiable to lock you away just because you don't go along with the flow. Dictatorships are nothing new and right now there's a host of them across the breadth of nations that do not respect the borders of countries, but seek to dominate everyone's thoughts and actions into an aura of obedience to the accepted policy of the powers that be. Freedom of thought and the ability to question one's reality are looked down upon things indeed, because an idea based in truth has the potential to overturn countless years of mind manipulation in just a few trauma seized moments of clarity. It is my opinion that the proverbial dam of lies and mind manipulations needs busting and it is a Biblically rooted one as well. I truly believe we are witnessing the last days unravel before us even as God prophesied in the book of Daniel that we would know the end times by the fact that knowledge would be increased and that the love of many would wax cold. I see both events happening in ever increasing measure and the flat earth movement is a good example of it. Lies are falling by the wayside more and more in the lives and perceptions of a growing few, but the hatred of the majority in response to this minority passionately seeking the truth is more virulent than it has ever been. Why do so many literally hate on a group of people who believes differently than they do about the shape/conditions of the world we live on? It should be an issue for debate, not the ridicule and extreme prejudice as is often seen on the part of those defending a globe model. A model that has only been in existence for a little over seventy years or so, while the flat earth movement can claim the allegiance of belief of every great civilization of antiquity. Ahhhh.... is that it? Is the hatred by the current age of the accepted reality and common knowledge of prior ages, so rabid because it represents that this is indeed the last age and so the desire to obscure the truth from reoccurring in the hearts and minds of people is conversely intense, because face it – a domed flat earth testifies to the reality of a heavenly all powerful Creator like nothing else ever could. This age is different and yet the need to stand for the truth and the right to peaceably seek it out has never been more important and it is my great hope that I have encouraged some reading this handbook to start their own journey of discovery and if so then do keep reading as I have some more evidences of a flat earth for you to consider. If this isn't you then why, pray tell, are you still reading? While you're pondering on that you might also ask how the Apollo moon landing team unloaded their moon buggy from a shuttle that didn't have a doorway capable of offloading it through. Food for thought people.

Chapter Five

Miscellaneous Hard Hitting Facts and Considerations

Evidence to Consider #22

Architecture: Building's don't lie.

Situation: In the modern realms of construction an ancient tool, the plumbob, used for finding and accurately setting the vertical plane of a building has been replaced with bubble and laser levels that you can pick up at any hardware store. You can make a plumbob for yourself though if you need one. You simply tie something chunky and heavy to one end of a rope and let the weight hang free. Ta DA! You have a perfectly vertical line to measure off of curtsy of the string and with a right angle tool lined up with the string you can also find the horizontal level plane as well. Now a ball earth enthusiast will explain this simple method of finding the vertical axis as a result of the heavily magnetic earth's core exerting an intense gravitational pull on the heavy object. Sounds like a plausible idea, but like many round madly spinning earth beliefs, it completely falls apart when put into action. How, you ask?

Allow me to construct the following scenario. The dimensions of a New York City block vary a good bit, but an average size of one is 264 feet by 900 feet. There are also quite a few buildings in New York City that take up an entire city block as well. So let's say we're constructing one of these big buildings. I've got contractors setting steel I-beam supports on either end of this eventual 900 foot wide by 20 stories tall modern monolith. The foreman on each side is using a level held in the vertical position placed on the I-beam because this is going to be a big building and everything had better be leveled and that means it needs to be checked, checked again and triple checked. Neither foreman is happy until their beams are exactly level in all four cardinal directions in terms of their upright beam being centered on the vertical axis. Satisfied they build the rest of the building and join it all together and when complete it stands an impressive 20 stories tall in the air. Now if the earth was round, or spheroid for the purists out there, imagine the complete consternation of those two foreman as they are standing back and viewing a structure that is significantly wider at its top floor than it is at the ground plane or street level floor. What on earth happened? First off I should ask, "Have you ever seen a building shaped like this?" No, I haven't either and it's because the earth is flat. In a building of this size, although really the effects would be seen in any building, the curvature of the earth in the course of that 900 foot width is significant. There would be a difference of several inches of curvature over that span. If each foreman had been holding a string with a plumbob attached to it, instead of a level, imagine the straight line vector traveling down to the very center of the planet's magnetic center and also its continuation upward out into space. Those two dead level plum I-beams are actually pointing slightly away from each other as over 900 feet, they've already begun falling over the edge of the horizon from one another. Now the difference in the trajectories is only a difference of several inches on the ground plane, but the next story up you go as those vertical beam lines continue to angle away from each other as they gain altitude adds a few more inches of separation and then the floor above that has a difference of over a foot and so on and so on. By the time you reach the twentieth floor you have what looks like an upside down step pyramid. This is true reality folks. Just because I know some people will ask – no – there is no curvature formula that high-rise architects down to your local residential house builder uses to account for earth curvature gains across every foot in elevation traveled. The true reality of construction on earth is that if your structure's supports are level (plum) on the ground plain and you carry them upwards in height in the same fashion the supports for the roof corners of your building are not going to be any wider apart from end to end than the same supports located below them in the basement. The basement is where every notion of a round earth paradigm should be sent to. This flat earth proof, just described completely does away with any notion of the earth being round. This proof relies on a common sense reality of the observable facts and yes I know the truth is staggering and the desire is strong to hold on to old beliefs so you're not one of those people put to shame at the Thanksgiving table for being way out there, but the simple reality is that some lies are simply huge and they persist like self-replicating organisms until enough people say enough is enough and tackle the thing by the horns and kick the thing out of their square-right angled and entirely plummed level constructed dwelling and say. ‘No more of this foolishness under my roof!’ will there come a change where the majority of people at the Thanksgiving table are all remising about how they actually once believed that the earth was round, but not now and with many slaps on the back the crowd turns and picks another favorite to follow.

Evidence to Consider #23

Architecture: The Buildings of Old

Situation: We have endless documentaries available that are actually acceptable to the broadstream scientific community of how so many of the ancient structures of the world from the pyramids in Egypt and pyramids everywhere else for that matter (Siberia, China, Bosnia, South America, and Alaska) to Stonehenge and even down to the Nazca lines in South America are all perfectly aligned with star constellations to a degree of perfection that we would be hard pressed to adhere to in modern building practices if we could equal it at all. The question you have to ask yourself about all the ancient people groups of known history: Egyptians, Babylonians, Greeks, Chinese, Mayans, Celts – is - were they stupid?

We revere their architecture, their art, in some cases their treatises on law and societal order and the list goes on. So apparently modern academia doesn't believe they were entirely stupid or else why would there be so many studies devoted to such ancient histories/customs in gatherings of higher education circles. So if they weren't stupid and in actuality were quite brilliant and able to construct marvels of engineering that have lasted to the present day, whose secrets are still being revealed, then why has all modern academia completely thrown out the reality that every one of these cultures is a flat earth believing culture within their own myths of origins? All these past cultures feature a sun that moves around a flat stationary earth that has a domed ceiling. These ancients who placed the wonders that have persisted over into today long after any modern skyscraper would be a moldering pile of rust and mold weren't using earth curvature calculations to discern distances or building mechanisms/locations based off of distant star constellations because at the core of their belief system was a flat earth. Don't believe me then look it up and educate yourself. Every past culture from the Old Testament believing Hebrews wandering in the desert with Moses to the records of the royal Chinese observatory scribes which have left us detailed records of thousands of years of past celestial events that spans the lengths of multiple Chinese dynasties, all witness to a belief in an earth that doesn't move and a sun and a moon that do. So if the positions of these ancient structures are perfectly located as they truly are and is attested to by modern archeologists then how was this confirmation by modern academia arrived at if modern researchers are hampered in their efforts by the need to have to factor in earth curvature and earth spin and so forth, when the ancients being studied did none of this in their calculations, which leads to the question of how then can their measurements be justified by earth curvature believing researchers of the modern era as being entirely correct to an almost perfect degree in most cases? Any archeologists or professors reading this – have you ever applied earth curvature formulas in your interpretations of how past cultures came up with $2+2 = 4$? Seriously, think about the gap in logic occurring here. Modern academia acknowledges the Egyptians were a flat earth believing culture and yet they credit them profusely with the flawless placement of the pyramids based off of celestial mathematical alignment calculations, flat earth based calculations at that. Now how does modern math with so many NASA added in integers still add up to 4? That's because the math has never changed. We can verify that the pyramids are perfectly placed mathematically because it's the same math, but in a modern global world that simply shouldn't be the case. Why are archeologists, civil engineers, and university researchers still lost in the paradigm that every ship navigational map both past and current is a flat earth map? The math should have changed to reflect curvature. It had to, but it didn't. Someone is lying. A lot of someone's too. Ancient people weren't stupid. Their architecture will easily outlast our own. Their yearly calendar in the case of the Mayans was more exact than our current Julian model by far. I could go on and on. To put it simply everything you think you know about past peoples of the earth needs to be revisited and looked at with new awareness of perception. Take the Nazca Lines in South America for instance. Never mind the incongruity of how ancient culture supposedly bound to the ground plane (Because through modern judicial prejudice we think they were too stupid as to have mastered flight and to this day we advanced modern human are unable to accurately know if dinosaurs had feathers let alone what they may have sounded like or how T-Rexs could ever have possibly mated with each other.) could even begin to see or interpret the perspective of the line creations that go on for miles across the Atacama desert. This desert is one of the driest on earth and to a western culture viewing audience it must look like sheer lunacy from the seats of our armchair recliners that an ancient people would go to so much trouble to scratch rocks a part in the representational symmetry of creatures such as monkeys, spiders and so on that scroll across the desert over miles and miles of some of the worst desert terrain on earth. Am I right? Have you had that armchair quarterback consternation in regards to why people would go to so much trouble to create something so fanciful looking with no immediate perceivable benefit? I admit that I did once. The reality of, "Man, go find some water and stop raking up piles of rocks in the hot sun!" is a common reality of observation that goes no further than the surface and that attributes no shared genius to the people who came before us who were most likely more intelligent than we are today. The true reality of those scratched out lines in one of the harshest deserts on earth, as it turns out, were literally their best effort to find water. How so you might ask? Well modern seismic imaging equipment has just recently in the past several years discovered that wherever that trail of raked out rocks goes across the desert is exactly where the ancient underground water aquifers are at their closest position to the surface of the land and thus most easily accessible by a culture desperate for every drop of water that they could lay their hands on. Not such a bad idea now is it to rake out grid lines all across your homeland to let your countrymen know where water is to be had with the least amount of digging. Lines that are now thousands of years old and have well outlasted the culture that depended on them. In America we have sections of interstate highways that are bypassed for better routes and within fifty years you would not be able to even tell there had once been a 4 lane paved highway in existence there and yet these lines in the desert are kept clean of all debris by the desert winds because in addition to being water markers they are also energy ley lines and the accumulation of debris upon them is actually repelled from doing so somehow. We still don't really know why these lines don't get covered up by sand storms and like occurrences, but such is the case. Is our lack of knowledge as to how the ancients engineered this self-cleaning trick an indication that those same ancients were obviously just stupid? I don't think so. What do you think? It kind of says the opposite doesn't it. These ancients had technologies and perceptual awareness's that we today with all our high tech gadgetry still don't know how to make sense of. Who's the more advanced of the two?

Evidence to Consider #24

Everyday Ordinary: The Treadmill

Situation: I have a treadmill that lets you raise or lower the incline of the slope aspect. In other words, if I want to burn myself out I can raise it up to an incline of 20+ percent if I so desire. Now another case for a flat earth or perhaps better put, an understandable context of proof occurred to me. Imagine instead of punishing myself with an incline of the slope I instead keep the treadmill leveled off at 0 percent and jog/walk for five miles. The treadmill is perfectly level. The built in pedometer is keeping track of my real-time pace, which will determine how soon I reach the deadline of having traveled a distance of 5 miles. If I stop walking it stops. I start up again, it starts up again. Following me? Now imagine a 5 mile stretch of road located in Kansas next to a corn field. The terrain is flatter than a pancake so to speak. If you've ever been to Kansas you know what I mean. You can literally see a ground hog stand up on his back legs at a thousand yards. Oh, wait – that's probably impossible according to NASA to see that. Anyway, imagine walking that 5 mile stretch of road with your pedometer clicking away at your side. What are the differences in the two scenarios? On the treadmill you didn't go anywhere, so earth's curvature wasn't an issue. But out on the blacktop over a span of five miles you've fallen over the horizon a distance of 16.67 feet according to NASA. Your path of journey is not a straight vector line, but actually an arching one and yet the pedometer on your hip tells you when you've reached your quota of a 5 mile hike. On a round earth you are now faced with a quandary. Your pedometer measures your actual distance traveled and it says you've gone five miles. The pedometer only measures the distance traveled and not the route chosen. But NASA says you've been dropping over the horizon by over 16' feet. So is 5 miles on a treadmill a longer distance than 5 miles on a flat country road in Kansas that has to account for curvature incurred that was not experienced on the level planed treadmill? If you say no then the reality is that you have to draw a straight line that cuts through the surface of the earth in order to connect your departure point with your destination point in order to say your journey outside is equal in distance traveled to your five mile journey at 0 percent slope aspect on your treadmill at home. Now if you draw this line through the surface of the globe your left with another incongruity – all the extra territory covered in your traveled arch from Point A to Point B measured in height above the straight line trajectory equal to the path traveled on the treadmill. Now the argument becomes, 'Is your actual distance walking in a straight line outdoors more than if you'd just jogged inside your house on a machine that never approaches any closer to the horizon.?' How many of you out there who regularly jog outdoors have been told, "Oh don't worry about getting your whole 5 miles in today. Four and a half miles jogged outside is the same as 5 miles traveled on a treadmill anyway.'????????? Someone really needs to tell all the marathon runners out there that the finish line should be several miles closer than it is because they've jogged 24 miles in distances before they've gotten to mile marker 19 in the marathon. Who knew the actual distance of a marathon is more like 30 miles traveled or so than the distance of 24 miles that they've always told us that it was. Okay, I'm being sarcastic, but do you see how easily everything you've been told falls apart with some simple observational analysis. It's laughable that the lies that we have been told are able to persist as long as they have when I can use a treadmill to poke a gaping hole in everything being sold as the gospel truth by the governments and scientists of the world as the truth and nothing but the truth.

Evidence to Consider #25

Land Improvements: Suez Canal

Situation: The Suez Canal divides Africa from the Middle East and stretches an amazing 120 miles and perhaps its most amazing feature is that it has no locks or dams of any kind throughout its entire length. Picture it. Before this canal was dug the water from the Mediterranean Sea and the Red Sea, which reversely are connected to their own greater outlying oceans had never mixed before at the point that they now do. Now that a canal connects them the distance of this man made corridor is host to an expanse of perfectly flat water. It's an impossible achievement on a globe. As previously mentioned, it is simply impossible to measure the curvature of the earth based off of any body of water, because there simply is none. There have been very few bridges in the world that I know of that were actually constructed with the curvature of the earth in mind (primarily the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge in New York) and the hilarious thing is that if you google pictures of it and get one with the right perspective in terms of viewing the bridge flat with the horizon you will notice that while the bridge does indeed climb up in the middle the water beneath it is flat as a pancake and shows no curvature whatsoever. Words can be lies, but your eyes see the truth, which is why the eyes are the windows of the soul and not your ears.

Evidence to Consider #26

Distances: Speaking of Pancakes

Situation: Did you know it was proven by scientists that the state of Kansas is truly flatter over its entire distance from East to West than a pancake. I kid you not. Look the study up. Explain how earth curvature is on display in the state of Kansas. It simply isn't an example of anything, but a flat earth.

Evidence to Consider #27

Nature: The Bolivian Salt Flats

Situation: Truly a place I would like to visit one day. Seriously, look up pictures of this amazing 4,000 square mile large salt flat that is so flat that with just a tiny bit of rain creates an optical mirror of the sky above that looks simply unearthly to behold as it appears as if you were striding among the clouds walking on air. It is simply breathe taking and a glory to my Creator's artistry of design. With just a tiny bit of rain the effect you see in the photos if you google pictures of this place creates all the illusion of striding in the clouds and somehow the majority of the earth's population seeing this gorgeous natural phenomena don't ask the question of how such a small amount of standing water could be possible over such a vast amount of area if the earth was indeed curving over the horizon. Notice too in the photos that the horizon is flat and I mean really flat. Well, basically just as flat as it is everywhere, but there you can really get an appreciation for it. As the law of perspectives go if you were to raise up in elevation over that salt flat in something like a hot air balloon that straight horizon line would rise with you because the horizon rises according to the perspective of the viewer just as when you look out a plane window and see a flat horizon line. This is the reality of what you see, but if the earth was round and you kept going up in elevation in that hot air balloon you should start seeing the edges of the horizon tailing off as earth curves, but as many high altitude balloon tests review the farther up you go the straight horizon line goes along with it and there is no curvature of earth to be detected whatsoever. Again the Baumgartner stunt was manipulated entirely by the use of a fisheye camera lens. The proofs of everything I bring up are in ready supply to be verified within the flat earth community. All that is missing from the equation is you.

Evidence to Consider #28

Science: Test Studies

Situation: Do you know that there has never been a test study done that has proven planetary motion. There have been attempts, but never one that actually proved it and as the case may be the study results actually showed no movement at all. Those results were of course rejected as everyone knows that the earth is spinning and quite quickly according to NASA's configurations. I see an amazing accomplishment by NASA in this. Imagine it, just like the mysterious force of gravity that also has never been seen or measured or even able to be quantified in any laboratory setting, these intrepid explorers of space still managed to hop off of a spinning rock and make it to a spinning moon, when they couldn't even know from the outset how fast their base point was moving to start with. Kind of amazing how you could plot a course to a moving target off of a likewise moving home base when you didn't know the speeds of either. I mean they say they do and all, but well..... they've never shown the public how they do. Kind of like those Hubble Telescope technicians measuring the vast outer reaches of space, even though they self admittedly have no ability to do that, but they're measuring it anyway.

Evidence to Consider #29

Basic Physics: Trains –They Exist

Situation: Growing up I had the opportunity to be on a lot of trains curtsy of my father's obsession with them. Admittedly the model train set that took up half the basement was kind of fun, even if every vacation we took seemingly had to have at least one train ride fit into it somehow. So I am a bit of an expert in that I can say quantifiably that trains do indeed exist on this earth because I have multiple firsthand experiences on a wide assortment of riding upon them from steam powered to heavy commercial diesel and electric engines. Trains exist. Every day they move across the earth and to this day they move more cargo about in a more efficient manner than any other method known to man. This is reality. The reality, though on earth as NASA would have you to believe that the earth exists as means, though at the most basic of levels that no railway system in the world could exist and much less function as it does. Why is this? Well, train wheels don't come with tread on them. They're smooth. The ability of a train to go up grades in elevation has much to do with the initial inertia of weight in motion before arriving at an uphill grade. Train tracks in general are kept on the level as much as possible because there is simply no way for them to function with heavy cargo payloads on too steep of a grade. That's why the tunnels are blasted through the mountains and the train trestle bridges rise up high over the valleys and rivers below where possible. NASA's basic earth curvature calculations arrive at gradients of steepness that basic cargo trains that on average measure 6,600 (over a mile) feet long could never begin to even think of accomplishing, and that's just on the level areas, which what is level on a ball earth anyway. To add even more dimensions to this the distance of some freight trains can be 4 times longer than the distance mentioned with the use of additional engines being employed. The incongruity of a spinning ball in comparison to the existence of trains operating as they do is a very well-known reality that people in the train industry have known about for a very long time and have spoken out about, but seemingly no one cares for the simple truth of the reality of the physics involved in terms of what a train can do and not do. The reason for this is probably quite best summed up by the power of media propaganda, best illustrated by the Nazi's propaganda minister Joseph Goebbels. Here are three quotes by him in terms of media propaganda.

First Quote - “The best propaganda is that which, as it were, works invisibly, penetrates the whole of life without the public having any knowledge of the propagandistic initiative.”

Second Quote - “Propaganda is not a matter for average minds, but rather a matter for practitioners. It is not supposed to be lovely or theoretically correct. I do not care if I give wonderful, aesthetically elegant speeches, or speak so that women cry. The point of a political speech is to persuade people of what we think right. I speak differently in the provinces than I do in Berlin, and when I speak in Bayreuth, I say different things from what I say in the Pharus Hall. That is a matter of practice, not of theory. We do not want to be a movement of a few straw brains, but rather a movement that can conquer the broad masses. Propaganda should be popular, not intellectually pleasing. It is not the task of propaganda to discover intellectual truths. Those are found in other circumstances, I find them when thinking at my desk, but not in the meeting hall.”

Third Quote - “Repeat a lie often enough and it becomes the truth”

These quotes pretty much say everything don't they, when it comes to the intents of modern media or for that matter advertising at large. You can keep believing that there's a weight loss pill that will shred the fat off your body, but chances are the only thing it will shred is your liver and kidneys and without them well – you're dead, but what does the company care about that? After all, they did succeed in getting you to buy their product and their financially motivated bottom line is quite simply what their moral status of being in business is focused on. Now with damaged organs you will need further medical assistance and more pills just to maintain being alive and chances are in the large corporate scheme of things you never left buying from the company that made you sick in the first place. The way out of the cycle of being fat is to realize that it's you who is responsible for what you put in your body and how well you take care of it. Just as it is your responsibility to eat right so it is with what you feed your mind with and believe in your soul. You can take the pill that everyone is claiming amazing results from ingesting or you can make your diet be the raw, naturally derived food God put on this earth for you to consume and be made well from. The choice is yours. There are no shortcuts to achieving good health and so it is with wisdom. One positive thing builds on another and reversely one negative choice leads to another.

Evidence to Consider #30

Architecture: Flat Bridges

Situation: I'm only going to give two examples of bridges, but rest assured that there is a world of examples to pick from just as there are lighthouses everywhere to pick from, some of which can be seen by ships at sea from as many as 40 miles away, as in the case of the light house on the Isle of Wight, which isn't even nearly the tallest as light houses go and yet it should be hundreds of feet out of view buried beneath the horizon if NASA was to be believed, instead of being visible to ships at 40 miles out.

First Bridge: The Lake Pontchartrain Causeway in Louisiana, USA. A very ordinary concrete causeway of concrete pillars that supports a narrow concrete bridge not that far above the water that travels 23.87 miles in distance. It's not a suspension bridge or anything fancy. Nope, it's just a level hunk of poured concrete that if NASA was right about the earth's shape should have a curvature gradient of approximately 380 feet configured into it. The reality though is that the bridge is level as measured off of sea level, which is also level. I mean really what kind of space funky earth bending levels, and survey equipment does NASA use that the rest of the general public, for all the years of human building practices upon earth, not know about? We'd really like to hear and see what they are, because they simply defy every aspect of the known reality that everyone experiences daily.

Second Bridge: Danyang Kunshan Grand Bridge, China. The longest bridge in the world at 102.4 miles long. Expected earth curvature over this distance of territory..... are you ready for it? Here you go: 6,990.50 feet of elevation change. There really comes to be a time when it just isn't funny at how badly the reality of being lied to actually takes on shape. I hope you've reached that point before now, but if not, then somehow get it working with this fact alone. Let's just stay in China for a moment. Take the 3 Gorges Dam complex they've built for themselves. A modern marvel. Now I'm not going to do any research, but I'm going to make a wild speculation (hey, if NASA can do it so can I) that the concrete form boards of this dam complex were good and level during construction of a project that if it should ever catastrophically fail would kill untold millions of people. Seeing as to what the stakes involved are I bet that if I went there and put a level on that sucker that I wouldn't be disappointed in seeing a level bubble reading across the entire width of a dam that space agency think tanks are even on the record as stating their fears that the backed up water behind the dams could throw the rotation of the earth several degrees off of its rotational axis. They're worried about this trivial amount of backed up water in comparison to the miles and miles of ocean water that comprises 70 percent of the surface of earth, which is mystically held glued in place by gravity?

Knock! Knock! Anybody home?

Evidence to Consider #31

Relativity of Location: Coriolis Effect

Situation: The Coriolis Effect is the one thing I have seen global planetary believing individuals use the most in terms of a mathematical proof for a ball earth that has nothing to do with NASA. I don't really see it that way because the assumptions made in regards to this effect are all measured off of NASA's view of the earth and there believed rotation of it. In fact the rotation of earth is the whole basis for them insisting that this effect is in existence and thus earth must be round and moving because of it. A bit reminiscent of the faulty practice of circular reasoning wouldn't you say? Most basically put the effect stipulates that in the northern hemisphere water will spin clockwise and in the southern hemisphere water spins counterclockwise. There you have it folks, the single best example for why the earth is round and spinning a thousand miles per hour in one direction. Hmm. Question: So why can I get my sink to drain in a counterclockwise fashion based on the direction of my in-pour of water, while my toilet drains clockwise because the inflow of water is focused to come in on the one side of the bowl? Kind of a quandary wouldn't you say within just the bounds of a house located in the northern hemisphere? The toilet bowl inflow jets are molded to bring the water in at the angle to create a spiral clockwise flow. When I reverse position and pour water into my sink from the opposing angle of inflow as found in my toilet I get a counter-clockwise spiral of water down the drain. Conclusion: The Coriolis Effect does not exist in my house. But what about storm systems moving one way above the equator and the other way below the equator. Well, I'm not quite sure, but my guess is it could have something to do with wind patterns. Sounds more plausible of a solution than to suggest it's caused by the spin of the ground under my feet at approximately Mach 1.5. But hey, if you want to hold onto a belief in a spinning ball from your interpretation of a rumored effect that can be disproven by an average guy within his own home then by all means go ahead. When matters are a bit up for debate as they are in this matter, I encourage people to use the wisdom found in a philosophical approach utilizing a principle known as Occam's Razor. Essentially, it is a means of logistical analysis that when presented with two diverging theories for the same cause and effect of an event that you should side with the theory that assumes less overall logistical issues, because in general the theory that assumes the fewest amounts of unknowns in order to support its conclusions is the one most closely linked to the true reality of the situation being observed.

Flat Earth: Weather systems spin the other way below the equator because the causation of wind patterning (sun and moon effects) are different then above the equator.

Ball Earth: Weather patterns spin differently in the Southern Hemisphere then they do in the Norther Hemisphere because earth must be spinning a 1,000 miles per hour at the equator, rotating at 67,000 miles per hour around the sun and yet holding onto the orbit of a moon that effects and controls the global tides of earth and yet is not ripped away from earth by the greater gravitational mass of the sun because of the inertial swing of the planets around the sun, while the solar system is spinning through the Milky Way galaxy at 515,000 miles per hour and this galaxy only being one of an infinitesimal number of galaxies all awash in a greater cosmos that no one can entirely explain or measure and yet in which human entities do in great detail in so much that they have the ability to halt the whole process and let a high powered telescope that has never taken a picture of earth, but exists in space and was allowed to stare uninterrupted into space once for 10 days straight on a narrow line trajectory of view that can't be measured but has been done so much as the spin of earth has been conquered successfully by NASA and the launch of several thousand orbiting satellites, including an international space station that people even live on when it along with the theory of gravity has never been proven in an actual scientific based study of any kind.

And there you have a brief comparison of the basis behind two theories as to why storms spin in different directions. Which theory do you think assumes the least amount of unknowns? One quick note though before you make up your mind. Remember that it is currently unknown by space agency authorities as to how to get somebody to the moon again, which basically puts the whole realm of space kind of in question doesn't it. I mean, how exactly with a several billion dollar budget do you forget the science and know how to build a craft and traverse across space previously traveled over 50 years ago in the past when technology has increased exponentially across every other sector of the human biome? It would be kind of like being lost driving and not able to find your own home while sitting in your garage in the car with the keys in your hand wouldn't it? Usually when this happens, it's a good indicator of advanced dementia in a person wouldn't you say?

Evidence to Consider #32

Physics: Artificial Planes tell the Truth - Always

Situation: This is the last non-Biblical based evidence I'm going to submit as to why I believe that the earth is flat and not a spinning rock magically held in orbit around a giant 109 times larger burning star located 93 million miles away that should eat the earth for breakfast every day of the week due to its greater gravitational pool and yet it's the gravitational pull of the moon that makes the tides rise and fall and not the gravitational pool of a sun that holds a planet that has a mass 2 and a half times larger than all the other planets combined in orbit even farther out then earth is located. Alas, I digress. There is a device that has been in common existence for quite some time. It is basically simple in what it manages to achieve. What it achieves is the creation of an artificial plane, a straight, level plane that is invisible to the eye, but one that exists nonetheless. This device is known as a gyroscope and you will find one in almost every plane that flies today. Why? Well, because as a pilot you need to know how you're oriented in the air. Visibility in a fog bank or a storm is virtually nonexistent at times and without some fail safe means of knowing where you're at you could be unintentionally aiming the plane down towards the ground or even up into space or as I would have it the upper reaches of a domed atmosphere, which, if you didn't stop in time to avoid you would smash into, which there being several private funded rocket example explosions in existence to testify to (Yet another proof for you to look up). So a gyroscope is critical as it's the eyes of a pilot when visibility is nothing or being greatly impaired. As a device, it has no circuitry, no uplink to ground control, or anything remotely digital to it in its purest form. It does its job of showing where a level plane orientation is, even if the plane is doing barrel rolls. The gyroscope spins free of constraint to show the pilot where level is so he can even back out in the air once the maneuver is completed. So picture this. A pilot brings a 747 up to cruising altitude. He levels off, enters in his coordinates and the autopilot takes over. The thing about it though is that during its entire time at cruising altitude the plane remains leveled off to the gyroscope's artificial plane of the horizon. Maybe you can see the picture of what would be happening if the earth was a planet and maybe not, but to describe to you, what would be occurring would be to say that the plane is on a steady course into outer space as it follows the leveled off artificial horizontal plane of the gyroscope. Here is the definition of the word horizontal, "parallel to the plane of the horizon; at right angles to the vertical.” At no time does a gyroscope account for earth curvature and bend down in order to orchestrate the plane’s navigational equipment to keep nosing the plain down every five minutes to account for earth curvature. Proof for a non-planetary environment doesn’t get any more definitive than this and if you can’t see the basic mathematical logic being involved here, then you need to get new eyes, because yours are so full of lies as to keep you from ever believing in the truth even if it smacked you in the head and said. “Look!”

Chapter Six

The Beginning of the End

If believing that NASA and the modern governments of the world continues to be the core of your basis of belief, then by all means reading this book has been a big waste of your time, but..... but if just maybe... maybe something has been inspired within you to question the narrative of your own perceived reality then consider this last question posed to you meant to inspire investigative analysis even as it is one rooted in simple common sense.

Time meridians – those straight vertical lines radiating out across the expanse of the surface of the globe placed in every modern classroom and most likely somewhere in your house. They start out from the North Pole and eventually narrow down back the South Pole.

Time meridians divide up allotments of time based off of a 24 hour cycle of day and night. They simply put are how the world tells universal time and orients itself.

So, assuming that you are now looking at your trusty globe, try to find one of those big fat Pacific Ocean Time meridian squares somewhere near the equator. Take a ruler and measure how wide the square is approximately.

Now take your hand and give the globe a spin. Stop it with your hand somewhere in the northern latitude around say northern Canada. Now measure the distance of this smaller shaped time meridian square.

Question: Do you really think that a ship captain traversing across the Pacific Ocean time meridian square of what one time meridian hour in time is perceived as is going to experience the same allotment of time and distance going by as a dude on a dogsled traversing across the tiny sized in comparison square of the frozen wasteland of the northern Canada time meridian square you picked out? Look at your globe.

The Pacific square is huge isn't it? Why is time and for that matter distance traveled, measured differently based off where you are on the globe?

Are we going to write a new math formula to account for the reality of being able to traverse less distance traveled within an hour's time near the North Pole versus it taking the same amount of time near the equator to go much farther in perceived distance?

The reality that you can see with your own eyes as you stare at your globe is that there is no way on earth that what you're looking at has any basis in the reality we all live in! Wherever you call someone on earth, though they may be many time zones ahead or behind you they are still on the same minute in time in retrospect to the offset in the hours of meridian time and, in general, they're under no time dilation squeeze as suggested by a time meridian square in Canada that would suggest that both time and distance has been dimensionally condensed somehow over what some Pacific Islander is experiencing both as. What an extreme prejudice is being insinuated of everyone located closer to the poles!

Ask yourself, how is an hour's worth of time, so expanded within the consciousness of a sea captain near the equator than it would be for a dog sled operator within a tiny little square to work with near the North Pole? And this doesn't even begin to take into effect how much extra territory is being traveled across within the same unit measurement of time.

If you, like me, think that it's ludicrous that time and measurements of distance are being stretched out magically the closer you get to the equator then by all means turn the page and read what the Bible has been saying about the earth for a very very long time.

P.S.

By the way, if you really want a more acceptable opinion of how Time Meridians look like then check out the UN's flag. The only thing missing is the continent of Antarctica, which you the average Joe or Maria are never going to be allowed to visit. It is highly illegal for you to ever go there and step one foot upon it in order to see a penguin live and up close and personal. Why might you ask is this? Because all the resource and energy hungry governments of the world and the greedy military complex corporations that run them have suddenly all grown a heart and don't want the rich resourced area as reported on by Adm. Byrd in the early 1900's to ever be exploited by the voracious lust of mankind, but to forever remain a wilderness preserve where only specially approved of people or government workers are ever allowed to tread upon. And the governments of the world all feel so strongly about this that it is one of the few, if only treaties, all governments have ever been able to universally agree to, support and adhere to with no infractions by anyone involved.

How touchingly noble of all of these governments to secure the last great wilderness known to the common man forever from him. Or could it be because of something else? Maybe it's something like this map shown on the next page that was allegedly discovered in a Chinese monastery and is reported to be over 10,000 years old. A map that traveled to Japan at some point a thousand years ago and then made its way into the hands of a Japanese Physician in Hawaii around 1907. One of thing of note if all the outlying continents are pure fiction the reality is this at its very core is a quite well done flat earth map and how many modern day hoaxes do you think are able to seed themselves into the pages of a paper published in 1907 in Hawaii of all places. It may well be a hoax, but what if it's not?

Was This World Map Made Ten Centuries Ago?

Stranger almost than the "Manuscript found in a Copper Cylinder" is the copy of a map which came across seas to Honolulu from a Buddhist Temple in the mountains of central Japan. It is a map of the world made 1000 years ago. Dr. Kobayashi, the well-known Japanese physician and surgeon of Honolulu, has received a copy of the map, which he believes to have been made by Chinese priests ten centuries ago.

Source: <https://chroniclingamerica.loc.gov/lccn/sn83025121/1907-01-11/ed-1/seq-2/>

Imagine it – countless continents, both larger and smaller than our own known ones existing beyond our borders of an ice barrier dome firmament. The Bible tells us of earth's creation and of its stars being placed in the firmament dome, but what is also clear from the biblical passages is that the six-day creation week was nothing but a reordering of some parent material that God had put into existence at some prior point in the past.

There was already a deep (water) and matter (ground) to be pulled out of the water in order for the dry ground to be made. God never said that He'd flooded the earth just once, He said that He'd never flood it again.

What is interesting to speculate upon is that in the book of Genesis, the first two verses can be better interpreted in Hebrew to say that the earth became a ruin before being recreated by God during the six day creation week and when it says God sent His Spirit to hover over the waters the Hebrew word for 'hover' means to vibrate.

So if you had a cold lightless environment and suddenly you add intense vibration would it not potentially serve as a catalyst to break up a permanent ice sheet across the face of a flat world that had previously fallen into ruin? Such a violent upheaval of vibration could have provoked a geothermal release of heat and magma that could have up thrust the land out of the water and melted the ice, as well as gone towards creating an atmosphere to effectively restart the process of life occurring within a closed terrarium system? It's a theory anyway.

Is this older matrix of materials renamed earth and brought to life by God once again the reason why some rock layers test so much older than a young earth creationist believer's 6000 year deadline would like to admit that they do?

Is a literal interpretation of Scripture that exposes the fault of a lot of mainstream Christian doctrine the reason why some Christian institutions like the Creation Museum run by Ken Ham comes down so hard upon anything to do with a flat earth being Biblical, because admitting so would in fact cause them to have to admit to having a lot of things wrong within their own set of beliefs that everything is no older than 10,000 years at best, not to mention the expense incurred in order to update facilities to reflect the new truth of reality of an old truth come back into the light again?

Admittedly none of us were there, but we do have God's Word and that is always what we should base our beliefs off of the most. Going with that is the reality that God made Adam with age, as well as Eve. Neither of them started out in life as squalling babies.

Did God create the earth with material that already had an existing age wrapped up in it that preexisted the six-day creation week?

There certainly seems to be a case able to be made for it. So then there is a question that remains.

Are there more flat domed worlds or just simple isolated continents out there?

Are they dimensionally linked with our own world as the author of the book and movie script writers of the recent Hollywood movie, The Dark Tower, would have you believe?

Instead of faraway planets reached by spaceships as popularized by endless science fiction narratives is the case more closely related to traversing through dimensional portals that transverse time and space to arrive in previously created environments that God made in the past?

Why was the US Air Force the primary sponsor behind the long-running TV series Stargate SG1?

Where did all the ideas for those episodes featuring dimension gateway travel, along with any of the other series, movies, and books with like content all pull their ideas from?

As a parallel of comparison why does all of humanity have a concept for what a dragon looks like, is capable of, and is likely to do if unearthed again, when no one has ever seen one and no specimen has ever been found and yet it is buried almost genetically as a belief within humans today that they existed and how hellish a day it could be if they were to come back into existence.

It could make for a very bad day in the realms of mankind and yet leviathans are clearly depicted in the Bible in every regard as what we perceive the mythical imagery of a dragon to be? Not only that, but satan himself is likened to as, ‘that old dragon of old’.

Is there a primordial sea of waters beyond the sides of the dome filled with the monsters of old waiting to come back into our sphere of awareness in the day that will see all chaos and hell breaking loose on earth as the pit is opened at the end of days?

Is everything that we believe, watch, write about in books all chance and circumstance?

I honestly don't know, but just maybe I've opened your eyes a little as to just one more reason why all the governments of the world as we know it might collude together and lie about something so monstrous as to convince everyone they live on a miniscule planet with nothing at all that special about it that just by chance came to be and that exists in a greater cosmos that the earth can't even be defined as even being a speck of dust within it.

A speck of dust mind you that they say is in severe need of population control because as the powers that be would tell you, "There simply isn't enough room for everybody let alone the resources to care for them all. Please be considerate of everyone else and keep taking your pills to ensure a birthrate of 1.5 children so that we can establish a population die off through natural and unnatural means to ensure a greater amount of souls leaving the earth than are being born into this reality."

Hell is hungry for people, and yet my God's standing order to me is, "Be fruitful and multiply and have dominion over the earth."

While the edict to have dominion may only apply to the domed in world of earth I still want the freedom to be able to inspect every last corner of it as I wish to and not be told that I have no right to when my God told me that I did. There are many questions and things yet remaining to be discovered and for an author of Christian Speculative Fiction the possibilities are truly endless.

I do hope that I have inspired you to question your reality more, the key thing being that God, His Word, can always be trusted.

Chapter Seven

The Bible – Ultimate Flat Earth Proof

This is a chapter about letting the Word of God do all the talking. All translations are taken from the Holman Translation of the Bible. My points of interest for particular verses will follow after the verse(s) which will be italicized, while my points of interest will not be italicized.

The points of interest I may raise are entirely my opinion based off of my interpretation of what is being said in regards to the passage of the Bible being spoken of. As such, they are my opinion.

Feel free to formulate your own opinions and disagree with my conclusions, but do it out of a spirit of seeking the truth and nothing but the truth and not out of a protectivisim mode that doesn't allow any new insight to dent the walled construct of what religious Christian dogma has come to be that believes, says, and mandates many things that are not found within the pages of the Bible.

Note: Something to know about me. I am a Bible Literalist. Meaning, I believe everything written within the pages of the Bible as actual fact whether my understanding can grasp a hold of it or not.

God spoke it and that makes it real. I don't exist on any plane of existence where the Words of God can be evaluated as acceptable or not.

Simply put, I only exist in Time because God's words spoke me into existence. While I have the God given ability and desire to understand and replicate the amazing processes on display all around me, I do not fall into the mindset that I control anything else in the existence of everything other than for the personal choice given to me by my Creator.

I am not the Creator and yet I seek to be like Him, because my desire is to be near Him and, if He chooses to, even be involved in the work that He is doing. I don't look at passages of the Bible as a secular person or sadly, many modern Bible scholars might with the intention of taking what they like and disregarding what is not viewed conveniently acceptable to the current church culture or society in general.

I go where my God leads me and the Words of God are tested, tried, and true and even as it is impossible for my God to lie, because He bound Himself from doing so by His own spoken word I know that from a study of all His available words that the Earth is indeed not round, but most likely flat.

This is my belief based off the passages of the Bible to be listed subsequently. May the Holy Spirit of God guide you into paths of truth and righteousness, even as She has me and yes, I just referred to the Holy Spirit in the feminine tense, because quite simply put the Hebrew word, Ruach Hakodesh is listed as a feminine noun even as other Bible authors most notably King Solomon referred to Wisdom (the Holy Spirit) as a ‘she’.

So you see quite clearly that I am indeed, a Bible Literalist. I don’t care if my beliefs counter the mainstream viewpoints so much as I care about knowing that what I believe is the truth and when you find the truth, well, as the Bible says, “You will know the truth, and the truth will set you free.” John 8:32 HCSB

Scriptural Proof #1 – Matthew 4:8

“Again, the Devil took Him to a very high mountain and showed Him all the kingdoms of the world and their splendor.”

Personal Observation: On a flat earth the limit to seeing to the literal ends of it are entirely a matter of the limitations of human eyesight. In much the same way a ship that has supposedly fallen over the horizon can be brought back into full view by lifting a pair of binoculars to your eyes. So while fully human, Jesus, none the less was shown all the kingdoms of the world by a nonhuman entity. It is very clear from the passage that the Devil supplied the amplification to show Jesus all the kingdoms of the earth, even as it can be suggested that the Devil teleported Jesus somewhere on earth to a ‘very high mountain’ as Jesus had been previously wondering in the wilderness and not on a mountain. The question for Bible believing Christians is that what is stated in this passage as occurring is impossible on a planetary shape other than that of a flattish fixed terrain that on a high enough mountain you could see entirely across with enough amplification.

P.S. Incidentally, did you know the word ‘Sahara’ is a Hebrew word meaning, “The Wilderness”. Now why would the Egyptians allow the Hebrews to name the big expanse of desert to the west of the Nile River and not do it themselves, especially as Bible historians have the Hebrews holed up in the land of Goshen located east of the Nile River during their 400 year captivity period in Egypt?

A question better left to be speculated about in another upcoming fictional book, The Untold Story: The Adventures of Zacharya Givens. Look for it to be available sometime in 2018

Scriptural Proof #2 – Isaiah 40:22

*“God is enthroned above the circle of the earth;
its inhabitants are like grasshoppers.*

He stretches out the heavens like thin cloth and spreads them out like a tent to live in.”

Personal Observation: A circle is not a ball. There is no error in the Hebrew translations either. The words for ‘circle’ and not that of ‘ball’ are definitely made use of by the original transcribers of the Bible. The view portrayed in the passage is very much that of a domed enclosure.

Scriptural Proof #3 – Joshua 10:13

*“And the sun stood still and the moon stopped until the nation took vengeance on its enemies.
Isn’t this written in the Book of Jashar?
So the sun stopped
in the middle of the sky and delayed its setting almost a full day.”*

Personal Observation: Again the Word of God speaks. It says the sun stood still and the moon stopped. It says nothing about the earth grinding to a halt in its 1,000 mile per hour planetary rotation on its invisible axis nor of its 67,000 mile per hour rotation around the sun, which the verse clearly refers to as a moving object in terms of general operating procedure in order for it to hold still and even if it did hold still and the earth stopped what about the 515,000 mile per hour path of our solar system through the Milky Way Galaxy?

Imagining that the inertia of all the speeds mentioned are occurring every day without our noticing them is one thing to believe as fantasy, but to then suddenly bring all those great speeds to a halt for the duration of almost a whole day and then start them all back up instantly is sheer lunacy. Being thrown back into the seat when you ease off the clutch is one thing, but to crank it up to 515,000 miles per hour???

Yeah, Baby!!!

While NASA’s objection to the incongruity of this dilemma may be passed off as, “It’s just an old Bible story. It didn't really happen like that." which leaves the Christian believer in a quandary of, "Do I take the road of faith or live in the reality of what science says?" often resulting in a mashup of the two beliefs within the individual.

Sort of a personal differentiation of there being a division between church and state occurs within the individual and satan couldn't be happier with the results. While this separation of church and state may work for some to me it spells out the literal interpretation of what a lukewarm believer is.

You either believe the Word of God above everything else or you don't and if you don't then you don't have any part in the resurrection promised to "Believers" in Jesus Christ. You can't believe in something that the Word says isn't up for extraneous interpretation that denies what is being said and denies Jesus at the same time, because Jesus is the Word, the Word made flesh even as Jesus and God are One.

So much of the issue though is one slighted out of deceptive means to make the situation appear more black and white than it actually is. NASA/Modern Governments are portrayed as the ones with all the science to back them up, but both are recent short lived constructs that have no past history to be drawn upon, while on the opposite hand, there is evidence within the records of the royal Chinese observatory of a night that lasted the length of almost an entire day.

A non-Biblical source that corresponds with a Biblical occurrence unlike any other. Now if that isn't evidence, then what is?

If this ancient Chinese evidence is true what is NASA's counter argument? - A venerable gathering of royal observers fabricated a fantastical lie about the occurrence of a night that lasted almost a whole day in order to validate the most substantiated work of literature in human history, the Bible, that wasn't going to be in any widely available written form to a civilization located several thousand miles away that existed in isolation from most parts of the world for large sections of its history, not to mention miraculously coinciding this farce of a tale to predate the Biblical transcribers that wouldn't actually transcribe the event down into written form until years after the event of the actual day long night listed by a group of venerated Chinese court officials honor bound to be as meticulous as possible so their heads didn't roll into the street?

How terrifying do you think a day that is as dark as night would be to a civilization? Kind of something you would indeed expect them to write down and make note of, especially when it's been their practice for thousands of years to notate every celestial happening of import that they see occur so that it might be interpreted as to whether it had any deeper meaning of things to come in concern to their flat earth believing culture.

Scriptural Proof #4 – Genesis 1:6

"Then God said, 'Let there be an expanse between the waters, separating water from water.'"

Personal Observation: This is speaking of the firmament dome as well as a body of water beyond it.

Scriptural Proof #5 – Genesis 1:14

“Then God said, “Let there be lights in the expanse of the sky to separate the day from the night. They will serve as signs for festivals and for days and years.”

Personal Observation: How as a Christian, can you listen to God speaking in first person perspective only to disregard what He’s saying by accepting a viewpoint that the stars are these huge massive bodies of burning gas located great distances from earth, when God’s intention for them was to serve the earth and be a light to it? The next verse clearly illustrates the fallacy of common thought about stars.

Scriptural Proof #6 – Matthew 24:29

“Immediately after the tribulation of those days:

The sun will be darkened,

and the moon will not shed its light;

the stars will fall from the sky, and the celestial powers will be shaken.”

Personal Observation: So just for reference sake NASA says that our local sun alone is 109 times larger than earth. So the question to be asked is what is going to be left of earth if just the sun crashes into it?

For decades now we have received a steady indoctrination of the ill effects of global warming, now, regardless of whether the earth is getting hotter or colder how many of us have heard the statement of, “If the earth gets just a few degrees closer or farther away from the sun life on earth would be impossible.”

That’s one thing to consider, but imagine it crashing into us. Wouldn’t we be vaporized long before the impact and the Bible says it’s not just one star crashing to earth, but all of them.

Overkill much?

Not if the stars are much much much smaller orbs of light than we’ve been told of them to be in size. Even the sun might not be a death sentence if it truly is according to flat earth calculations much smaller in size and only about thirty miles away in the sky.

Some of the other things to be noted in this verse, though is that the sun seems to be separated away from the other stars in distinction in that it’s only darkened and doesn’t come crashing down and the moon will not give ‘its’ light. That’s right, “its light”. Not reflected sunlight, but rather its own light. As mentioned previously moonlight is the opposite of sunlight in terms of heating up potential. It is translucent, while the sun is radiant. It all boils down to whether you take the Word of God at face value in what is actually said and interpret the world and what you see through God’s lens or you go elsewhere and put your faith in somebody else’s story.

Scriptural Proof #7 – Job 9:8

“He alone stretches out the heavens and treads on the waves of the sea..”

Personal Observation: Not evolution. Not by random accident. No, God administers all of creation intentionally. To believe otherwise is to go against what the Word of God says.

Scriptural Proof #8 – Job 37:18

“can you help God spread out the skies as hard as a cast metal mirror?”

Personal Observation: The firmament is a very hard surface and yet there is evidence that it has cracked. I know that you have been raised with the programming that when you look up that you are looking into vast reaches of space and that nothing much smaller in scale seems fathomable. When you look into the night sky you do feel small and it is easy to believe that everything must be much bigger simply out of how small you appear to be, but the reality isn't much different as when you go to a planetarium show, which immerses you in an experience (that takes place in a dome shaped room, hmmm....) that shows you everything in smaller detail and yet you feel still feel mesmerized by it all even though your bodily proportions are much greater in proportion to it.

In the same way the sky above you isn't as massive as you've been told and what you see in regards to what's termed as the Milky Way galaxy is indeed in many cultures such as the Navajo and aboriginal Australians a great crack in the firmament dome.

A crack that once opened up and drowned the world with flood waters. Many ancient cultures stared with great concern at what they considered a barely healed rift in the heavens always dreading the day that it might fail and open up again and let flood waters pour back in.

If you poke around enough in flat earth videos on YouTube you may run across an episode of Family Guy that shows this very thing happening in an episode when Homer hits a baseball through the sky above a stadium causing a hole to open and let water pour in.

You ever wonder where the term 'glass ceiling' came from? I mean, how many structures do you commonly know where you walk in and the entire ceiling is made of glass other than a greenhouse?

So why the emphasis on breaking through it, as being popularized currently in the feminist movement in terms of doing everything men can do? Do we really need to have a female prototype of Nimrod to begin constructing a second tower of Babel to prove all is equal between men and women on the outright rebellious end of the spectrum of humanity?

Again the flat earth concept is not relegated to just me and a few others, but every ancient civilization from the Navajo and Cherokees to the Greeks and the Egyptians believed in their own version of a flat stationary earth.

Scriptural Proof #9 – Psalms 19:1

“The heavens declare the glory of God, and the sky proclaims the work of His hands.”

Personal Observation: NASA’s view of the heavens doesn’t give the credit to God for anything. In fact everything is based on explaining everything away that’s come to be by some other means other than the existence of an all powerful Creator. So why do Christians believe them over God? As the Bible says, “You can’t serve two masters unless you learn to hate the one and love the other.”

Scriptural Proof #10 – Psalms 102:25

“Long ago You established the earth, and the heavens are the work of Your hands.”

Personal Observation: When God repeats things, it’s very important and notice should be taken of it.

Scriptural Proof #11 – Psalms 104:2

“He wraps Himself in light as if it were a robe, spreading out the sky like a canopy.”

Personal Observation: “Like a canopy.” Not a limitless expanse of space that the Hubble telescope is peering into. You know so many questions would be answered about the shape of the earth if they would just turn the Hubble Telescope around and snap a few photos of the earth, but they have no intentions of ever doing that. Maybe because it doesn’t exist. What do you think?

Scriptural Proof #12 – Isaiah 44:24

“This is what the Lord, your Redeemer who formed you from the womb, says:

*I am Yahweh, who made everything;
who stretched out the heavens by Myself;
who alone spread out the earth..”*

Personal Observation: It doesn't get more definitive than that. He spread out the heavens. He spread out the earth. The last time I checked a ball is made by clumping things together and not by being spread out on a surface.

Scriptural Proof #13 – Isaiah 45:12

“I made the earth, and created man on it.

It was My hands that stretched out the heavens, and I commanded all their host.”

Personal Observation: Every time, as a Christian, that you disregard a passage like this and participate with the world in the celebration of nature being an aspect of evolution or chance happenstance you are engaging in heresy. Don't do it. God says that He would rather have you hot or cold than be lukewarm. There's hope for the other two, but what hope is there for the individual trying to have a little bit of every pie in town and yet not fully committing to any one of them. Such an endeavor of straddling the fences in order to keep all your bases covered is indeed a commitment and it's not one for God.

Scriptural Proof #14 – Isaiah 48:12

*“My own hand founded the earth, and My right hand spread out the heavens;
when I summoned them,
they stood up together”*

Personal Observation: Creation knows its Master.

Do you?

Scriptural Proof #15 – Jeremiah 10:12

“He made the earth by His power, established the world by His wisdom, and spread out the heavens by His understanding.”

Personal Observation: It's not a mystery how things came to be. The Bible tells exactly how, it's just in both our innate curiosity and in some cases arrogance that we insist we need to know all the particulars of the actual process right here and now and reject the truth of anything that we can't fully comprehend or take on faith. That's why the only way to come to God is as a little child, because a little child really doesn't understand much. He just knows that Mommy and Daddy love him and when he wakes up, he'll have food to eat. In the same way so should we come to God to have our questions answered or, as the case may be, not answered. Either way we need to trust what the Father says as being the truth, whether we understand it or not.

Scriptural Proof #16 – Zechariah 12:1

“The word of the Lord concerning Israel.

A declaration of the Lord, who stretched out the heavens,

laid the foundation of the earth, and formed the spirit of man within him..”

Personal Observation: Some people may think I’m being repetitive with these last several verses, but I’m not. God is being repetitive. Using multiple authors over wide ranging sections of time to keep repeating the same thing. The thing that every Christian needs to accept and proclaim as a point of fact and that is that God made everything. A good teacher repeats himself enough times until the student learns the truth and God is the best Teacher of all.

Scriptural Proof#17 Deuteronomy 10:14

“The heavens, indeed the highest heavens, belong to the Lord your God, as does the earth and everything in it.”

Personal Observation: You really need to pay attention to the implied intents of phraseology. God didn’t say everything on a ball earth belonged to Him. He said that everything “in” earth belongs to Him. To be “in” something says to be enclosed by something. If you were in a ball, then you wouldn't be located on it, but if you're in an enclosed firmament domed earth, well that fits a lot better doesn't it.

Scriptural Proof #18 – Psalms 148:4

“Praise Him, highest heavens, and you waters above the heavens.”

Personal Observation: “waters above the heavens”

Now that's a mysterious sounding thing to be sure. Maybe there really is something to the fear the Navajos and native occupants of Australia had for the imagery of the Milky Way Galaxy in the heavens being a barely healed giant rift in the dome ceiling. As a Bible believing Christian I believe in Noah's flood completely and when it tells me during the passages of Scripture pertaining to the Flood that the windows of heaven were opened and water poured down I believe it and maybe the Milk Way Galaxy is very much that scar in the dome shield left to us today to witness to the single greatest wiping out of almost all humanity to that date in time.

If this seems to be too incredible for you to believe, then what is your opinion of the cultures who have these ancient handed down traditions detailing such things as having happened in the past?

Do you think there stupid?

I would hope not.

But if they're not stupid then why have you completely disregarded what they have to say? Because NASA says, “It ain't so Joe.”?

Which narrative aligns with the Bible better? Always go with the Word.

You might be the only one left in the room, but that's better than being in the hell that exists outside the room.

Scriptural Proof #19 – 2 Peter 3:5

“They willfully ignore this: Long ago the heavens and the earth were brought about from water and through water by the Word of God. “

Personal Observation: There is far too much willful ignorance going on out there. No matter how many facts, scientifically backed studies, documentaries, reproducible experiments that I and others come up to prove a flat earth, there will always be those who will remain shut off to sound instruction. In flat earth circles they're most commonly represented as the lurking trolls whose comments range the gamut of profanity's offerings and can be summed up best in regards to flat earthers as, “You're stupid”. Oh well, you can't please everyone, besides they'll be weeded out eventually.

Scriptural Proof #20 – Revelation 4:6

“Something like a sea of glass, similar to crystal, was also before the throne. Four living creatures covered with eyes in front and in back were in the middle and around the throne. “

Personal Observation: In the Hebrew Flat Earth model the very top of the Firmament Dome is able to be opened and is called the Gate of Heaven and offers direct access into the throne room of God. So if you were in the throne room of heaven, what would you expect to see smack dab in front of you on the floor based off of this verse?

Scriptural Proof #21 – Revelation 15:2

“I also saw something like a sea of glass mixed with fire, and those who had won the victory over the beast, his image, and the number of his name, were standing on the sea of glass with harps from God.”

Personal Observation: There was a series of high altitude nuclear tests performed in the 1960's, which reversely is why all humans today are slightly radioactive because of the several pounds of plutonium spewed all over the atmosphere by these tests going wrong, ironically the name of the event was called Operation Fishbowl.

I'm not making this stuff up. Get out there and start doing your own research.

I have no evidence to support this following statement, but the rumor is that both the US and the Soviet Union were in complete collaboration with each other in an attempt to break through the Firmament/Dome via nuclear weapons. Now that, my friends, if true, is what I would call truly stupid.

Scriptural Proof #22–1Chronicles 16:30

“tremble before Him, all the earth.

The world is firmly established;

it cannot be shaken “

Personal Observation: A far cry from that planet model that has us spinning all over the place and victim to countless asteroids from outer space that will end life on earth as we know it tomorrow if NASA doesn't save the day by letting us know six months in advance when the big one is coming so a global team of misfits can come together and magically come back up with the space technology mysteriously lost since the 1960's that would enable us to fly out there and stick a bomb on that menacing evil hunk of rock intent on turning us all into fossils.

While the prior statement was spoken in sarcasm please consider that the truth is as they say, often stranger than fiction, and this is exactly the kind of stuff Hollywood puts out there. Another explanation for supposed meteor impact craters that you may never have heard of is methane gas explosions.

To my knowledge no actual meteor fragments have ever been found within a crater on earth. That's a bit strange isn't it?

Right along with the reality of the sharp sides of the craters being more likely a result of something blowing up and outward versus something smashing downwards and going off like a big bomb.

But what about the meteor that killed the dinosaurs? That is a whole other topic, but suffice it to say that when we have vintage non-photoshopped photographs in existence of Winchester toting cowboys proudly standing beside a stretched out pterodactyl, a description in the book of Job perfectly describing a Brachiosaur as a beast entitled Behemoth, and many eye witness accountants by natives within the Congo river basin of a three horned beast matching the description of a Triceratops that they widely report is an elephant killer, it is safe to say that at least in some limited capacity dinosaurs are still among us with no need for added in millions and billions of years to account for it.

All that said a process of rocks falling from the heavens may very well be a process that does indeed happen even as it says in the Book of Revelations that a rock as big as a mountain will be tossed into the sea. The difference, as I see it, now being that the rocks aren't coming from the vast vestiges of an eternally expanding outer space with livable planets popping up here there and everywhere for mankind to one day subjugate.

Instead for a moment imagine a large hunk of ice the size of a football field clinging to the Firmament/Dome 70 or 80 miles up there suddenly breaking off and free falling to earth. Ouch!!!

Would this possibility of ice accumulation perhaps explain how in the latter days hailstones weighing 70 pounds will rain down upon mankind? If not, I don't want to experience the kind of winds strong enough to keep a 70 pound weight continuously held up in the air before dropping it in a classic case of carpet bombing if there ever was a mental picture to describe what that event will be like to experience.

Before I woke up to the reality of a flat earth I wrote several books, entire series actually, outlining exactly these kinds of outer space wanderings. I know it is hard to leave it all behind and accept a new reality, but always let truth be your guide. You simply don't want to live or partake of anything that isn't of the truth.

Scriptural Proof #23 – Psalm 96:10

“Say among the nations: “The Lord reigns.

The world is firmly established; it cannot be shaken.

He judges the peoples fairly “

Personal Observation: God repeating something important. The earth doesn't move. Other translations are a bit more descriptive in that they say, “fixed” and “immovable”.

Scriptural Proof #24 – Psalm 93:1

“The Lord reigns! He is robed in majesty;

The Lord is robed, enveloped in strength.

The world is firmly established;

it cannot be shaken. “

Personal Observation: God is a good teacher.

Scriptural Proof #25 – Psalm 104:5

“He established the earth on its foundations; it will never be shaken. “

Personal Observation: He uses repetition. To teach us lessons.

Scriptural Proof #26 – Job 38:1-41

“1 Then the Lord answered Job from the whirlwind. He said:

2 Who is this who obscures My counsel with ignorant words?

*3 Get ready to answer Me like a man;
when I question you, you will inform Me.*

*4 Where were you when I established the earth?
Tell Me, if you have understanding.*

*5 Who fixed its dimensions? Certainly you know!
Who stretched a measuring line across it?*

*6 what supports its foundations?
Or who laid its cornerstone*

7 while the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy?

8 Who enclosed the sea behind doors when it burst from the womb,

9 when I made the clouds its garment and thick darkness its blanket,

10 when I determined its boundaries and put its bars and doors in place,

11 when I declared: “You may come this far, but no farther; your proud waves stop here”?

12 Have you ever in your life commanded the morning or assigned the dawn its place,

13 so it may seize the edges of the earth and shake the wicked out of it?

*14 The earth is changed as clay is by a seal;
its hills stand out like the folds of a garment.*

15 Light is withheld from the wicked, and the arm raised in violence is broken.

16 Have you traveled to the sources of the sea or walked in the depths of the oceans?

*17 Have the gates of death been revealed to you?
Have you seen the gates of deep darkness?*

*18 Have you comprehended the extent of the earth?
Tell Me, if you know all this.*

19 Where is the road to the home of light?

Do you know where darkness lives,

20 so you can lead it back to its border?

Are you familiar with the paths to its home?

*21 Don't you know? You were already born;
you have lived so long!*

22 Have you entered the place where the snow is stored?

Or have you seen the storehouses of hail,

23 which I hold in reserve for times of trouble, for the day of warfare and battle?

24 What road leads to the place where light is dispersed?

Where is the source of the east wind that spreads across the earth?

25 Who cuts a channel for the flooding rain or clears the way for lightning,

26 to bring rain on an uninhabited land, on a desert with no human life,

27 to satisfy the parched wasteland and cause the grass to sprout?

28 *Does the rain have a father?
Who fathered the drops of dew?*

29 *Whose womb did the ice come from?
Who gave birth to the frost of heaven*

30 when water becomes as hard as stone, and the surface of the watery depths is frozen?

31 Can you fasten the chains of the Pleiades or loosen the belt of Orion?

32 Can you bring out the constellations in their season and lead the Bear and her cubs?

33 *Do you know the laws of heaven?
Can you impose its authority on earth?*

34 Can you command the clouds so that a flood of water covers you?

35 *Can you send out lightning bolts, and they go?
Do they report to you: "Here we are"?*

36 Who put wisdom in the heart or gave the mind understanding?

37 *Who has the wisdom to number the clouds?
Or who can tilt the water jars of heaven*

38 when the dust hardens like cast metal and the clods of dirt stick together?

39 Can you hunt prey for a lioness or satisfy the appetite of young lions

40 when they crouch in their dens and lie in wait within their lairs?

41 Who provides the raven's food when its young cry out to God and wander about for lack of food? "

Personal Observation: Having just read this chapter do you seriously want to tick off the One who spoke these words in defense of the earth that He both made and holds in every working order process of it even to this present day?

Do you know you're in danger of doing that as a Christian every time you're given an opportunity to witness about God's earth and instead you either remain silent or you agree with a secular belief of how the earth was made or operates that stands in defiance of what God has Himself said? Don't be that person and if you have been that person then seek forgiveness immediately.

There literally is no time to waste even as each of us will be called upon to give an accounting of the time that each of us has been given to live before the Most High. Here's to hoping that your story no matter how twisted the path of getting there reaches an ending that is truly awesome instead of one that will only bring you eternal separation and shame.

Scriptural Proof #27 – Isaiah 38:8

"I am going to make the sun's shadow that goes down on Ahaz's stairway go back by 10 steps." So the sun's shadow went back the 10 steps it had descended."

Personal Observation: This verse like the account of Joshua's long day just simply can't be accomplished on NASA's model of the universe. Talk about a head spin.

Not only would all the planetary bodies and the universe for that matter have to come to a stop, but then they would have to go backwards, only to then go forward again! How is the rotational swing of planet earth around the sun going to handle that one when supposedly the inertia of its orbital swing is the only thing keeping it from being dragged in by the immense gravity of the sun?

It simply doesn't work folks. You can either believe the ways of the world or you can take a stand and believe what the Word of God says, but you can't do both and still get through the right gate of eternity.

The ergonomic fallacies put aside your still left with the very basis that in this verse, God is stating that He is making the sun to move and not the earth which refutes every tenant of a heliocentric system. Now if the sun is much smaller and roughly the same size as the moon and both are spinning slowly about a fixed and stationary earth in a rotating fashion, that accounts for where the Chinese got the idea of Ying and Yang from, it would make a lot more sense how the all-powerful Creator of everything gazing down into His snowglobe styled earth dome construct that He often uses for a footstool could flip a switch and make the fan (sun) spin counterclockwise for a few moments and then flip the switch for the fan to go back the other way.

Yes, I know it can be daunting to imagine just how large and powerful God truly is, but it's what the Word says so do you believe it or not or would you rather stick with something that's comfortable and societal based that a lot of people believe in and that won't get you in trouble with the authorities?

The latter is not a paying ticket in the end so cash in ahead of time and flip to the side of faith and be rewarded for it past any ability of your understanding to grasp a hold of it. A perspective to keep in mind about socially acceptable practices is, for instance, one day soon human cannibalism may well be deemed by society as acceptable.

The godless pendulum of societal acceptability is a doorway that only opens up to darker and darker things. Just because something becomes acceptable in the eyes of the broader public doesn't make it right, especially when the people are eager to believe a lie.

Scriptural Proof #28 – Isaiah 45:18

*“For this is what the Lord says—
God is the Creator of the heavens.
He formed the earth and made it.
He established it;
He did not create it to be empty,
but formed it to be inhabited—“I am Yahweh, and there is no other..”*

Personal Observation: Your existence on earth is not a fluke. You were created with a purpose and your life has meaning. In a random evolutionary matrix of belief as portrayed by all the space related academia, there is literally no specialness about the substance of you because they've made everything else so much more grandiose and you're nothing more than a tiny speck of magically composited mutations instead of a souled, eternal being that has the very breath of God actualized within the framework of your creation with a potential future that will go beyond every vestige of time itself in either of two places.

On a side note – does the above verse make it sound like God is for population control? Nah, I don't think so.

Who are the people who are for eliminating vast amounts of humanity via eugenics, wars, and famines, because after all, there's only so much room on this third rock from the sun that we can't even find out how to leave anymore. Aren't they often the people in charge of the governments and advanced learning institutions, who in turn fund the professors and ad campaigns that teach the masses that everyone is basically just a series of random mutagenic accidents?

Yeah, I'm not feeling very randomly pieced together today actually. I think I'll substitute their imposed reality for the one that my God gave me in that I have a purpose, that I was worth so much to Him that He sent His only begotten Son to die for me, and that He loves me so much that He intends to keep me around for forever in luxurious settings that I totally don't deserve and yet that's what He wants because He loves me like only a good Father can.

Don't sell yourself short because when it boils down to it – it really is a battle for your soul.

Scriptural Proof #29 – Jeremiah 49:36

"I will bring the four winds against Elam from the four corners of the heavens, and I will scatter them to all these winds.

There will not be a nation to which Elam's banished ones will not go."

Personal Observation: Exactly what would constitute a corner on a spinning globe that's already half tilted over on an axial spin? Here's another one – an east wind as long as it keeps blowing will eventually come around to where the west is located and the same way in regards to a southern wind that blows all the way back up only to come down from the north. What's this? East is West and South is North? Sounds like utter confusion to me.

Scriptural Proof #30 – Psalms 103:12

"As far as the east is from the west, so far has He removed our transgressions from us."

Personal Observation: What kind of a profound statement of forgiveness is this for an individual living on a spinning ball earth? Not a very good one I'd have to say because if my sin travels eastward, eventually it will catch up with the west.

So I'm only forgiven of my transgressions for however long it takes for this process to take place? Exactly at what speed is my sin traveling at?

Oh dear, it won't take very long at all for my sin to catch back up with me after God just removed it from me and I haven't done anything wrong!

Is this what you believe the author is meaning by his statements in this verse?

I hardly think so. Oh wait..... yes..... now it comes through.

This is either King David or a contemporary of his time speaking and the setting within this verse is being spoken within a culture that believes the earth is flat and enclosed by a dome, which is verified by many rabbinical teachings of the era and later ones. So the statement is a profound one because on a flat earth the direction of true West never meets up with true East and it's the same for North and South.

So on a flat earth my transgressions really are removed for forever when I ask God for forgiveness of them. Got it.

Very good to know, unless of course you believe you're living on a spinning ball, but I don't. Neither did King David either, apparently.

Pretty good company to be keeping don't you think. I mean, who wouldn't pick famous NASA spokesman Neil Degrasse Tyson over the Biblical King David?

Anyone?

Scriptural Proof #31 – Daniel 4:11

*“The tree grew large and strong;
its top reached to the sky,
and it was visible to the ends of the earth..”*

Personal Observation: It has recently become all the rage to talk about and watch videos all over the place of past ginormous trees that all we have left of today are their stumps, which can be as large as mountains and have been mistaken for being mountains for a very long time.

I mean people are really going to town on this topic and while some of what I’ve seen is a bit fanciful or sketchy on the details there are a few examples that really make one wonder like Devil’s Rock or a recently discovered 8 mile wide stump of what appears to be an ancient cedar tree that is located in Madagascar. I say cedar tree because several close by valleys instead of appearing to be strictly drainage basins actually appear from the air to be massive fossilized cedar branches of a scale that would have gone along with the size of a tree that has an eight mile wide stump.

It’s up to you to believe whether this is all fantasy or people’s best attempt to recreate a case story of the conspiracy that the earth was once like the world Pandora as portrayed in a recent Hollywood movie. You know an interesting thing about the movie Avatar is that when it first came out, some people after seeing it experienced intense depression and even suicidal thoughts.

Was it because the filmmakers tapped into the biogenetic memory of how ideal looking earth may have once been before the Flood of Noah's day and is the movie a good indicator of how all creation was corrupting itself by combining DNA across species, which apparently was even happening in the plant world to the point that God said everything would become corrupted if left unchecked.

In the movie we see the blue giant people uplinking biologically through sensory neuron pathways with some of the beasts via a fiber optic looking strand of cables located in the tip of their hair braids. The blue giants also connect with some of the trees in the same fashion and transport non-plant memories/spirits into the neural pathways of all the trees of the forest that are linked together like one big organism.

I know I'm getting off topic, but not really. Here is Hollywood coming up with a movie so very unlike any that came before it that actually ends up depressing a large number of people and even making them want to kill themselves over the "Avatar Blues" and yet the reality of the storyline could be very much the situation of what was going on before the Flood.

Did I forget to mention the part where a human possesses the body of a blue giant and mates with another giant. Usually it's the other way around and all, but hey, it's just a movie right?

Just a movie and yet in God's Word there is a tree so tall that it reaches into the heavens and every eye on earth can see it. Here's another reference to God's anger against some trees. – Psalm 29:4-5 “the voice of the Lord in power, the voice of the Lord in splendor.

5 The voice of the Lord breaks the cedars; the Lord shatters the cedars of Lebanon” Another one – Zechariah 11:2 “Wail, cypress, for the cedar has fallen; the glorious trees are destroyed! Wail, oaks of Bashan, for the stately forest has fallen!”

As I've said before, I believe God's Word and if He says there was a tree high enough that everyone on earth could see it, then I believe it and outside of faith, there seems to be increasing evidence that indeed there once were huge trees way beyond anything we have today that dotted the world.

A world that would have to be flat for anyone in China to catch a glimpse of a tree growing in Lebanon. Also, the only earth I know that has literal ends to it as the verse alludes to is a flat one.

Scriptural Proof #32 – Acts 10:11-12

“11 He saw heaven opened and an object that resembled a large sheet coming down, being lowered by its four corners to the earth. 12 In it were all the four-footed animals and reptiles of the earth, and the birds of the sky”

Personal Observation: Two Questions: 1) Did the earth stop spinning so the animals could have a few brief moments to ease onto the ground plain before it started spinning up again or did they just get dumped off the sheet and pop up all over the world as gross gigantic bug splatters? 2) So exactly where in outer space is heaven? I mean this verse says that it opened up like it was right on top of it, which would actually be where it would be on a flat earth.

The situation gets a bit murky on a spinning ball though. The Australians are already walking upside down while their buildings hold onto the ground surface aided by the tenacious and highly selective will power of the mysterious force known as gravity that while it has never been observed or even measured or for that matter even proven to exist there is the unquestionable reality that once upon a time Sir Isaac Newton, venerable masonic mason that he was, said that it did because one day he dropped an apple and it fell.

Don't question the logic – just believe it. Yep.

Every day someone in Australia is staring down and to the right at where heaven must be for them, while an Eskimo gazes upward at the northern lights and somewhere in Latin America men and women are walking around sideways in their daily struggle of living in the high spin zone on earth and have to crane their heads upward to look outward because well heavens up there or out there right?

What is upward when you're on the side of the world?

It's all about perspective isn't it?

It sure is.

It really isn't all that hard to believe in creation according to God's description of it, but when you go outside of the Word of God in search of the truth or more aptly put, 'The lie you want to settle down and be comfortable with.', you will encounter such gaps in logic and common sense as to be completely impossible to comprehend why anyone adhering to random accidents, primordial gene soups that just happened to come to be like BANG! Not to mention evolving from monkeys into humans.

How can they even rest at night under the load of everything they are taking faith in, or perhaps better put, the absence of everything they're taking faith in.

Truly a marvel how they believe all they do with nothing but one neck bone with which they construct an entire creature out of and upon doing so can even tell you what it ate and sounded like.

Reality BREAK - I know it sounds silly people, but this is many people's reality. It takes immense faith to not believe in God, because daily you have to deny the evidence of everything you see around you that testifies of its Heavenly Creator in order to believe in things that don't even exist and that you have to make up in order for things to work out.

Godless Fictious Narrative Following

"No, Frank, 20 million years simply isn't enough for this newt to morph into a boa constrictor."

"Yeah, you're right Celeste. Let's say 50 million years."

“Yeah, that should work. Wanna catch lunch with me? I have to leave early today for my yoga session. It’s all about getting in touch with my higher self.”

“You really believe in that stuff?”

“No, not really.... oh, I don’t know, it feels good anyway. I feel so.... so connected with..... with I don’t know. I just feel connected you know. Hey, watch out don’t walk under that ladder, Frank!”

“Thanks! That was a close one. I would have had bad luck for like a month!”

“You believe in luck too Frank?”

“No, not really..... oh, I don’t know, maybe, but nothing religious or anything like that. I make my own way through life. How about you?”

“The same.”

“You want to hook up some evening since we’re going the same way through life?”

“Sure! Wait, where are we going?”

“I don’t really know. Does it matter?”

“I guess not. See you later.”

Scriptural Proof #33 – Revelation 7:1

“1 After this I saw four angels standing at the four corners of the earth, restraining the four winds of the earth so that no wind could blow on the earth or on the sea or on any tree.”

Personal Observation: How does this work on a spinning globe? Do the 4 angels spin with the earth or remain stationary out in space from it and just trade off rounded corners with each other really fast?

No, that won't work either. I forgot that things are moving even faster out in space. Maybe they lock on with geocentric orbits. Yeah, that might be it.

Scriptural Proof #34 – Revelation 20:8

“and will go out to deceive the nations at the four corners of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them for battle. Their number is like the sand of the sea..”

Personal Observation: Warning DRAMATIZATION: “There we go with those corners again. Where do you find a corner on a ball? Maybe we could draw some imaginary lines to help us pinpoint where in the roundness a corner should metaphorically exist even though it doesn't actually exist. Admittedly, things would be just so much simpler if the earth was flat. Can't do that though. I'm not getting laughed at like those flatards. No, Sir! Well, let's see now..... like it or not Greenland I declare you as a corner of the earth. One problem though, I'll end up with eight corners if I do it that way. I just need four. I know! I'll just stick in four pins along the equator. They're not really corners points, but at least I can avoid representing the Biblical Flat Earth model.”

Scriptural Proof #35 – Ezekiel 1:22-26

“22 The shape of an expanse, with a gleam like awe-inspiring crystal, was spread out over the heads of the living creatures. 23 And under the expanse their wings extended one toward another. Each of them also had two wings covering their bodies. 24 When they moved, I heard the sound of their wings like the roar of mighty waters, like the voice of the Almighty, and a sound of commotion like the noise of an army. When they stood still, they lowered their wings.

25 A voice came from above the expanse over their heads; when they stood still, they lowered their wings. 26 The shape of a throne with the appearance of sapphire stone was above the expanse. There was a form with the appearance of a human on the throne high above.

Personal Observation: “Awe inspiring crystal, ” I want to see that one day.

Scriptural Proof #36 – Revelation 1:7

*“Look! He is coming with the clouds, and every eye will see Him,
including those who pierced Him.
And all the families of the earth will mourn over Him.
This is certain. Amen. ’*

Personal Observation: This event is most definitely certain and just as certain is the reality that the only reality that exists in which every eye on Earth will see Jesus coming in the clouds is a flat one. No “ifs” “ands” or “buts” about it.

Maybe as a Christian you’ve never realized simple geometric realities about the descriptions of Jesus’s return or for instance when Jesus was taken by the devil to a high mountain and shown all the kingdoms of the world, but just because you haven’t before doesn’t mean they don’t exist.

Even as they do exist and you have now read them now you will also be judged in regards to what you do know about them. Will you discount the Words of God and say it really doesn’t matter if you omit a few verses from the Bible so you don’t have to question your lied to reality about earth to deeply.

Or will you allow the questions raised to define you as you seek God like never before in pursuit of the truth. In pursuit of what’s real. What’s certain and can’t be changed.

I hope so for God’s sake, because whether you admit it or not He has personally invested so much in you, in everyone, already and it’s literally a criminal shame when we choose something else other than Him and that happens every time we don’t believe what He says because His Word is the very essence of who He is.

Scriptural Proof #36 – Joshua 10:12

“On the day the Lord gave the Amorites over to the Israelites, Joshua spoke to the Lord in the presence of Israel:

“Sun, stand still over Gibeon, and moon, over the Valley of Aijalon.”’

Personal Observation: How exactly do you tell a glowing orb in the sky that is 109 times the size of earth and located 93 million miles away to hold in position over a small area and in turn tell the moon to hold its position over a particular valley?

The only sensible answer is that both astral bodies are a lot smaller and a lot closer to earth, which is verified by so many proofs and I know the flat earth challenge rules of competition with the established ball earth theory seem to stipulate that I should dictate each and every one of them right here and now in order to continually prove myself above reproof, but I’m not going to.

By now in this book I have raised so many thought provoking questions that now it is your turn to go out and do your own research as to all the many proofs that show the earth is in possession of a sun and moon that are roughly the same in size and a lot closer to earth than you’ve been told.

There are so many flat earthers out there with so many unique and varied points of insight and it’s really something you need to discover for yourself at some point so you can adopt it as your own reality and not just rely on the hope that everything I’m telling you in this book is the truth.

Scriptural Proof #37 – Psalms 19:4-6

“4 Their message has gone out to all the earth, and their words to the ends of the world.

In the heavens He has pitched a tent for the sun.

*5 It is like a groom coming from the bridal chamber;
it rejoices like an athlete running a course.*

*6 It rises from one end of the heavens and circles to their other end;
nothing is hidden from its heat'*

Personal Observation:

“Houston, we have a problem! The Bible says the sun is moving!”

“This is Houston. So what. It’s just the Bible. How many people actually still believe everything it says?”

“You have a point Houston. What about the ones that still do, though?”

“Not our concern. Our concern is to continue fooling all the ones who believe everything we tell them contrary to what the Bible says.”

“Exactly, who do we work for Houston?”

“You ask too many questions. You want to get yourself in trouble? Over and out.”

Scriptural Proof #38 – Isaiah 14:13-14

“13 You said to yourself:

“I will ascend to the heavens;

I will set up my throne

above the stars of God.

I will sit on the mount of the gods’ assembly, in the remotest parts of the North.

*14 I will ascend above the highest clouds;
I will make myself like the Most High.”*

Personal Observation: These are the prideful ‘I will’ statements uttered by satan. This whole monolog by satan only works within the Hebrew construct of a flat earth. First off the heavens are upward. What is upwards on a ball earth? Everything is simply outwards.

Secondly, to set his throne above the stars of God would be to go way, way out into space according to NASA as they say stars go on for forever and they know this for a fact because once they let the Hubble telescope stair into a tiny portion of the cosmos for ten days straight.

In the flat earth model God said that He placed the stars within the firmament during creation. There’s also the quandary that satan has to go upward to get above the stars/firmament and on a side note, how exactly does God use earth for a footstool at times if it’s a madly spinning away ball?

Try to wrap your mind around that one for a moment, before settling on a nice stationary object resting on pillars, which is exactly what the Bible describes as well as most other ancient cultures.

Thirdly the quandary of what the high sides of the north could be in reference to. As you delve into the flat earth topic you will run across some very intriguing bits of information and sadly they are just that, bits of information, that the arctic ocean between Canada and Russia may not be what you’ve always been told it is at its center most point.

Admittedly information is sketchy and one is left with a lot of questions that are hard to verify. To put it briefly there is a rumor that there is land there, even perhaps an opening into an inner earth realm if you want to delve into things Jules Verne style.

Among the many speculations there is also supposedly a dark black magnetic mountain called Mt. Meru and that it is basically the land of Shangri-La.

All very speculative. But consider another story from the Bible. The story of the tower of Babel.

Everyone is told that the Tower of Babel existed somewhere in modern day Iraq. The only problem is that a structure of such monstrous size that they were literally going to be able to storm into the throne room of God in heaven would leave a pretty big debris pile and no such pile exists in Iraq.

The primary problem though with Iraq is quite simply put, it is not the center of the earth. The center of the earth is the only place that a tower could access the throne room of God because the Gateway of God is at the very center of the dome.

Consider, too how the Babel dispersion of peoples all over the earth would make more sense if it was taking place in the exact center of the earth, which, if you have questions about just take a gander at the UN Flag again. They've got the spot pinpointed for you, but just like Antarctica nobody can just up and go visit the North Pole supposedly located out in the middle of a frozen ocean that all of humanity is being hit with messages about the dire consequences should the northern polar ice cap ever melt.

Heck, if it did just about anybody could sail up there and check it out for themselves. I know, I know what about the poor polar bears.

On the flip side, bear habitat put aside, maybe we could grow grapes in Nova Scotia and trees on Greenland again just like the Vikings did a couple hundred years ago when things were a lot warmer than they are now.

Scriptural Proof #39 – Genesis 7:11

“In the six hundredth year of Noah’s life, in the second month, on the seventeenth day of the month, on that day all the sources of the watery depths burst open, the floodgates of the sky were opened,.”

Personal Observation: NASA tells us that there is very little to no moisture in space. The Bible says there’s an expanse of waters both beneath and above the firmament dome that God set in place during creation week and that it was some of these waters along with the fountains of the deep that completely flooded the earth in the greatest disaster in human history.

Which account are you going to believe? They both can’t be right.

The Word of God or the words of the world?

I’ve made my choice and I truly, sincerely hope that you find your own ways to the correct destinations of belief. If you’re left in doubt about anything, just ask God.

He really will talk to those who earnestly seek Him and keep His ways. It all starts with that of the belief in Jesus Christ as the ransom for all your sins, though and the only source of forgiveness for them.

You won't get anywhere good without first making that decision.

Chapter Eight

Do You Believe?

Do you believe everything you hear and are you being conditioned to react in a knee-jerk fashion as opposed to employing logical thought and deductive reasoning? Consider the theory of evolution for a moment.

It's taught as a law, but just one of many facts proving it wrong should mean that it should never be referenced scientifically ever again, because just one fact, proving it wrong is enough to ensure it can never be considered as a law. This is the basic scientific method of observation and analysis.

Of the many verifiable facts and experiments that have been listed to support a flat earth or at least something other than the popular globe model what substantive evidence can a globe believing individual present for a ball earth or a lop-sided spheroid shaped earth?

I've listed the incredible spin ratios NASA tells us that are going on constantly in terms of Earth's own axial rotation, its rotation around the sun, and the galaxy's rotation through the cosmos. What evidence does anyone believing in the ball earth theory of planetary motion have available to submit that they are actually able to prove in terms of what they believe without relying on a practice of theory that has already been scientifically proven wrong and is more of a belief system than anything else, and space agencies directly funded by governments that supposedly have in their employ the brightest minds that walk the earth?

Simply put, there are none. Everything to do with the ball earth has everything to do with a governmental series of agencies and other governmental authorities telling you this is the way that it is and you must believe it.

The belief that the earth is round and that earth is this tiny, insignificant spec lost in a great ocean of endless galaxies is nothing more than a belief system that has been pressed down upon you until it has become your religion. All your life growing up all you've seen are the pictures that they wanted you to see.

Pictures that are Photoshopped.

International space stations made of aluminum, with green screens, cable rigged zero gravity harnesses, along with women with too much hairspray in their hair to even begin to look like something natural was occurring as their hair remains ramrod straight up in the air.

You see what they were counting on was that you would look over these superficial errors and not dig too deeply. Once the lie has been sold though and the condition of the entities at play is such that their outlooks are always immoral in terms of abhorring the ways of God the only way forward is to keep lying.

To admit that the space landing and everything that goes with it, but most especially the huge reckoning over the budget that NASA has received through the years along with all the other agencies involved not to mention satellite programs is just too big of a mountain for a government to present to its people and ask for forgiveness over. This is what happens when there is a division made between church and state.

If the right people bring a strong moral compass to the job there is the greatest chance that the right thing will be done even if it's the hardest thing to be done. When the very people most qualified to make the hard decisions are the very ones excluded from the process, then the outcome can only be expected to be absolutely uncontained in terms of its excesses and disgusting lack of regard for its level of deception of those who were relying on it to speak the truth and nothing but the truth.

There have been enough Hollywood movies made where government officials whether it be the president or some CIA operative kills or allows to die a vast amount or even just a small amount of innocent people for the sake of some greater good. Tell me if you've ever watched a movie where there is this backhanded justification for why it is appropriate to do a lesser evil, to avoid a greater evil, has it ever left you satisfied.

Does it leave you at peace feeling like your best interests are being taken care of by those in power? No, it makes you feel like there's somebody out there with too much power only too willing to pull the trigger and shoot you if it's for the greater good of somebody's portfolio assets.

The stark reality of our times is this though. The mindset behind governments the world around now is to consider themselves godless and they are working hard, very hard to achieve this.

Long gone is the notion of a government for the people and run by the people. This utopia of self-rule only works as long as the moral focus of those making the decisions are rooted in a higher faith outside of their own base desires that if left unchecked will become the new moral focus so that everything is permissible as long as it justifies what is important to those who are in power.

The thing about power is that those who gain it often have no wish to lose it. Once power is gained there is then the struggle to retain it.

Everything that is not of immediate use to you quickly becomes your enemy so the very people who put you in this position of power are plotted against. They have to be because they are the number one threat to you losing your power.

On the one hand, you have to represent them and on the other you have to lie to them, but it's even more complicated than that. You have to recognize that one day they may see through all the lies.

Lies spoken so that you could retain the power and the privileges that you desire above all else. It is therefore then a race, a race to usurp enough power and resources that you can mobilize a system of governmental restriction that can incapacitate the average person from being able to even see or think straight until all of their reactions are easily monitored and altered remotely by any dozen of a handful of communication devices.

The one true error in this fallacy of believing that one can keep people to remain slaves for forever is the arrogance to underestimate the reality of purpose that differentiates humans from every other living breathing organism on the face of the earth.

People are not simply the top of the food chain. It's no random accident that we have subjugated our environments to suit our needs.

It was spoken by God over us for it to be so and so it has become so. This is the same God who spoke life into the first man and made the first woman out of that man.

A part of God remains locked forever within the domain of all men and women who are truly human. It is this divine spark that will not accept the status quo of monsters and thieves who wish to continue playing a game of forever living in luxury while the masses starve, and die slowly as they stumble about in confusion.

People ask why is this flat earth debate so important? So many Christians are yelling at other Christians for being so divisive minded and why it would just be best not to talk about it and just to go on like nothing has happened.

The reason why this debate is so important is because it is the single most direct evidential link to understanding the purpose of what it is to be truly human. Hollywood has everyone so conditioned to believe that there are any number of different species out there in the galaxies waiting to come cohabitate right alongside us or try to destroy us piecemeal.

There is the utter lie perpetrated that earth is a throwaway planet. We'll use it up and go find another one.

People have no idea about even the one we're living on let alone even the need or really the lack of need of needing anything else. Humans have been sold a lie and in this lie the most basic intrinsic part of its deception is this - that there is nothing truly exceptional about you.

The reality though is so incredibly different!

There is no other you anywhere!

There is nothing more important to the earth and its future than for you to be you!

This then brings out the question of what exactly is it that you are supposed to be doing on earth. The answer to that can only be found through becoming aware of a relationship with the One who made you to do whatever it is you were meant to do and you can only do that higher calling once you know to seek it.

Herein lies the need for a great deception.

Tell the people that they're meaningless happenstance accidents of a freak gene soup mistake, then convince them that they're nothing more than the carnal nature that lives within their flesh, and above all, do not let them know that they are living at the center of the universe and being directly gazed down upon by the Creator of everything. Because if people knew the reality of their created existence and how everything each of us does is being recorded in the ultimate Truman Show reality of consciousness, then how much would be different in terms of how we would treat our fellow humankind.

Would crime, even exist? Most definitely, but how much less of it, would there be, if there was the understanding in the minds of everyone that what you do actually does matter because you're locked away within a time matrix located within a fiery glass walled shielded dome and you quite simply put are not in existence to serve your own version of your best interests and desires.

You were created with a purpose and those few people who do find their purpose in life are completely changed forever and they would never go back to what they were before. All of this is facilitated greatly when you know the truth about the very ground that you're standing upon.

The problems with human nature begin to expand when you simply believe that no one is looking at you. That there is no higher power that is directly observing you.

That you're just one of a number of random and insignificant individuals and it really doesn't matter really whatever you do because there's really nothing special about you so why not just do whatever you want to do and forget about everything else.

That operating procedure works really well when you believe that there is an endless expanse beyond the bright lights you see in the night sky. It doesn't work well at all when you know how contained you are within a fixed point of existence that is directly administered by a divine hand that can crush and wipe away His own creation without a moment's notice whenever He sees fit and be entirely justified to do it just as a scientist in the lab can wipe the slate clean and start over a new experiment whenever he wants to.

It is this arrogance of human nature that wishes to rebel against this divine oversight of authority over the whole sphere of human habitation that led to the Tower of Babel and to every insurrection of rebellion against God ever since. Quite simply put the ancient world knew who God was.

That's why all the peoples of the lands were petrified of the Hebrews coming up out of Egypt. Because they knew that these were God's very own people.

They knew they didn't stand a chance and because they knew this they never had a chance in any battle they engaged in. The number one success of the demonic realm, in the current era, that is hell-bent on enslaving as many human souls as it can before time runs out is the complete twisting of reality within everyone's consciousness to believe that God doesn't exist.

And even if He does exist, then there is a scientific way of dealing with Him. A way of going on without Him.

A way for everyone to be their own god. When you have a limitless universe out there to explore and subjugate therein lies the arrogance of believing that you can do whatever you want to do with no consequences for it.

The problem is that in order to achieve these results most people have to be blind and not only blind, but easily manipulated to throw their weight to whatever new endeavor of scheme the plan forward calls for.

There is a very few and finite number of individuals at the top of this hellish hierarchal place of governments and they have no wish to be joined there by those they arrogantly see as beneath them and will forever remain so, because they themselves left the realms of glory far behind and yet they are dependent on the masses of humanity to achieve their goals and thus the lies roll out one after the other and they will be believed one after the other for however long people are willing to live, die, and starve within a confused paradigm of being a working slave with promised liberties that do nothing to sweeten the outcome of life.

This system of governance is a well-entrenched one within the minds of the common folk. We quite simply have all been conditioned to be slaves, to not go against the status quo, and especially not speak up against the conditioned mood of the crowd.

The problem though is that people are no longer getting what they need to be happy with what little they have. They're not getting by like they used to at all.

And more and more and more people want to know why exactly that is. And so more and more and more questions and accountability is required by them.

And when that is done, then more and more and more lies are spoken and engineered in order to satisfy them to keep them happily producing away for the benefit of the greater plan by the few in charge.

The problem with a lie though, is that it gets harder and harder and harder to prop up with life support to make it seem like it's the living breathing truth. Until in this modern era, when everyone is walking around with a cellular device that has more computing potential than the original NASA moon landing craft did, that we all begin to ask questions and wonder why it is that we keep working and working and working and yet we're not getting where we want to be.

Why is it that we try and try and try just like our founding fathers before us did and yet where they had success in being independent and seizing a life for themselves we on the other hand end up empty handed and taxed into poverty.

There are two results to come out of this. There are the people who simply give up and just try to hold on to what they have, along with the ones who take shorter routes out of life via drugs and other abusive substances and then there are those like me who say enough is enough.

I'm not happy with the fact that I know I've been lied to. Why have I been lied to?

What is the end goal? How does it affect my future, indeed more importantly the future of my children, which at present looks even bleaker than my own?

How can I just keep doing what I'm doing and not ask questions when that's not going to serve my children the best in the long run. How can I in good conscience remain quiet and just go on and let the future become even more degenerately worse than it is in the present?

Am I a coward or am I a man of purpose created to do amazing things by an all-powerful Creator, who gave me an eternal spirit and a promise that stretches beyond every bound of time.

If this is you then you will know it. If it's not you then quite simply close your eyes and go back to sleep and keep doing whatever it is you're doing for tomorrow you will die without ever knowing what it is to be truly alive.

A few good people can really change things and that is precisely the Achilles' heel presented by those in positions of power that do not wish to ever relinquish it. Despite generations of breeding down humanity, with diseases and chronic issues in which a mindset of belief is installed that is entirely predictable and controllable, there are a few individuals who as humans with God-given abilities and talents can and will completely overturn the whole system on its head and expose it for what it is.

These are the people who are driven to continually release more info - find more proofs - do whatever it takes to wake people up, when in reality they don't owe it to anyone. They do it out of love.

They do it out of anger.

They do it most importantly in the hope that one day people will be able to live freely to do as they were created to do and not be like mice caught in a laboratory experiment that are the subject to the whims of whatever the scientist in charge wants to do with them.

Some might refer to the reality of being on an enclosed flat earth directly managed by God Himself as being the same situation of that of the helpless lab rat, but it's not because God gave humans a choice that mice in a laboratory never got.

God doesn't make anybody do anything and yet God died in the form of His Son Jesus for everyone. What scientist in a lab coat have you ever known to die on behalf of the mice he was experimenting upon?

The situation of our existence on this flat earth underneath the vaulted dome above, with all the glory of the throne room of God resting above is no simple experiment carried out in a cold sterile environment. No, God surrounded us with the most beautiful, habitable land that can only be defined as good when viewed across all of its many extremes of environment and texture.

This reality we're faced with isn't a pretty cage. This existence within a word bound construct of time and prophecy is a chance to excel in simply well in doing small things in order to one day inherit the ability to go on further and do even larger things and not just for a short time but forever and ever and ever.

God isn't limiting how many people can join Him at the table, which is not the case at all with those seeking to limit the awareness of humans on earth as to what the deception is like that controls almost everyone. The doors are flung back wide to everyone who wants to enter into the truth and live accordingly and yet few will choose to do that.

Some of this is out of choice, but how much of it is simply due to pure ignorance brought on by the deceptions of a few who wish to remain in the control of short term positions of power they have which is all they will ever know.

This I hate!

I hate the ability of a few to destroy the lives of many for no other purpose other than to satisfy themselves with their ill-gotten gains in terms of lifestyle and privilege. This is why it is worth public scorn even ridicule in the labeling of being a ‘flatard’ to try and educate the few of you, who, like me, lived in ignorance for many years and yet have always been looking for a way out, but didn’t know there was one.

This is your chance. I sincerely hope you take it.

There is a bigger and far grander future than anything that you’ve ever been told before exists and it starts with realizing that you live on a flat earth and not just one made in a random fluke of a big bang moment, but one artfully crafted by the hand of God to sustain human life in its first creation of it, made into form after the image of the Almighty Himself.

You are special and you deserve to know the truth. What you do with the truth gained is entirely up to you and entirely upon your head.

I am satisfied if just only a few of you realize the truth and are set free, even as Jesus rejoiced over one new believer out of a crowd even so I have learned to see and experience joy in the same. It’s never about how many won’t listen, rather it’s about how through your efforts you were able to help one or more gain a new perspective that will result in new life and hope for a better future in that person's life.

This is survival of the truth. This is righteousness in action. This is finding your purpose to do what you were made to do.

Chapter Nine

My Personal Story

There are times in life that we get called upon to practice what we preach. It is these moments that truly define us.

Are we what we say we are or are we a fake.

A sham.

Recently I was put to the test. Without going into too much detail I will put it simply as this, I married the wrong woman or as irony would have it maybe I married the perfect woman.

At the time I got married 10 years ago I didn't have a close relationship with God. I had been raised as a Christian. I believed in God, but I had no real relationship with God.

Life was about me and what I wanted from it in order to feel good. It was enough for me to think God was satisfied with me, "as is" because I was a good person and I didn't do bad things.

Like I said, I married the wrong woman and yet the chaotic and oppressive hell that woman put me through and the situations forced upon me created in me the desire to know God out of the most basic need of a human to survive. It's often been noted that wars are a great catalyst for people to get in touch with God because the fear of death is its own driving force in terms of securing down what is needed to be eternally understood, in the same way going through emotional hell can work much the same result as I in many ways am living proof of that.

In my quest to survive and just keep breathing for the sake of my children I formed a deep relationship with my Heavenly Father. It wasn't a spontaneous love affair on my part, but rather it came out of the hard won experience of discovering just who it is that loves me the most and that hands down is God.

As I said I married the wrong woman, but the results of being exposed to her brand of hell tell me in some ways that I married the right one. So many things would never have come to be if I hadn't married the woman that I did.

I would not be the author of nearly 25 works of exciting Christian fiction that span a vast range of genres and who, according to many fans of mine are some of the best fictional writings that they have ever read, whether Christian or secular based.

Writing for me truly is one of the greatest passions of my life and the advent of its coming to be was because I needed a way of escape from the situation I was stuck in. In a way writing saved my life as it reminded me of my purpose and value as a person even as everything else about me was daily deconstructed by a woman who never had any good intentions towards me even though I tried to love her and make her happy over and over and over again.

Maybe if you're reading this you know from a similar experience what it's like to be joined with someone who can best be described as a pathological soul vampire. If you do identify with this then I hope that you are on the other side of that relationship now and healing.

For so much of my relationship with the woman it was my writing that helped to affirm for me that I truly was an exceptional person and one of great value in the Kingdom of God, even when I was often led to think something very different about myself and told that I wasn't very special at all and that the only good thing about me in my wife's opinion was my ability to consistently bring home a paycheck in order for her to live the life that she both desired and was never satisfied with.

My other great passion in life is everything to do with my children. They simply put are the biggest reason for why I see it as being vitally important for me to continue existing. As long as I can help them or even father new lives into existence, then I have a concrete reason for being in existence.

I am truly not a self-centered person. It's both a positive attribute and a character fallacy as I have a tendency to drain myself of energy on behalf of others and not care for my own needs as I should.

These primary passions and a few other secondary ones were all eventually put to the test as my marriage devolved into deeper chaos brought on by the reality that in order to continue surviving I finally learned to stop feeding the beast that was materialized into human flesh in the form of my wife.

She is a woman as scary as any monster out of a children's bedtime story could only be, perhaps even more so for her ability to appear as completely normal to the majority of mankind on a daily basis. This attribute of hers I find the creepiest of all, along with the reality of how many years it took me to see what I do now in relation to her constant emotional abuse of me.

Truly, I am blessed to be alive and that's as much as I'm willing to say about that. I do have the intent someday to write a book on passive aggressive covert female narcissism as I have certainly experienced my fair share of it up close and personal.

For now though I am simply focused on trying to heal and pick up the pieces of one woman's epic burnout that has destroyed a family and without God's intervention has the ability yet to ruin each of my children's lives and in turn even worse yet potentially make them into creatures such as her that feed on other people's life force of energy because they have none of their own and no ability to generate it for themselves. This anxious hell I experience on behalf of my children is what my life has devolved into on a daily basis.

That said, even in the midst of hell I can truly say to everyone that God will walk right alongside of you even in the midst of it, even if He won't remove you from the circumstances of having to go through it.

In terms of the positives of the situation I am living through there are many. I have learned so much both about myself and other people.

I have gained faith to a degree that I never had before and yet I'm personally weaker and yet reversely God is stronger in my life than ever. The reality of my new relationship with God has made me to be a more balanced person and far more self-aware than I ever was before.

One of the attributes of a narcissist is that literally everything and I mean everything they have ever told you, whether it was about their life, what they thought, or what they believed in, everything – was a lie.

I hate lies. It is this reality of having to rebuild life in the chaos resulting from 10 years spent living a lie that perhaps drives me more than anything else to expose the truth in whatever way I can in terms of whatever situation I find it being lied about and the flat earth debate controversy is one of them.

This journey of discovering these positives and contending for the truth has at times cost me the greatest passions of my life.

Out of fatigue and other strictures brought on by my wife, I gave up writing for a while. I died a little inside when that happened.

In many ways I felt like I had betrayed God, only to find out later that it was less a betrayal of God and more of an act of giving up on myself.

In some ways I thought my gift of writing would be removed from me for forever, only it doesn't work like that. A gift given by God once given is never taken away.

The journey to discover that though, was a very dark tunnel indeed and yet I am through with that leg of the journey and I writing again and loving it. Praise be to God!

The continuing hell of the moment for me though is that while I am finally separated from my worst predator I am now also after a lengthy legal battle not in full custody of my children. Simply put, I failed in court to unmask the dragon that my wife is on the inside and she it turn won an academy award for best actress.

The start of legal issues began when one day my wife simply left and took our four children with her. I didn't know where my kids were for over two weeks.

I had an emergency custody hearing granted to me by the court and it was by doing this that I was finally able to secure where my children were and have the ability to see them. Over the next six months and two custody hearings that followed my wife did her level best to invoke an image of me in the court's opinion as that of being a complete whack job.

One of the things she insisted upon at the first hearing was that I undergo psychological testing as it was her claiming that I was the crazy one. I consented to the testing and passed with flying colors of complete normality in terms of being a living, breathing human with a heart in his chest.

Sometimes it doesn't seem to matter if you do what's asked of you to show others who you are at heart, because, like checking off items on a list my wife one by one twisted out of perspective and used anything she could dredge up from our 10 years of being together to make me look like I was unfit to be a parent, while I in return lied about nothing and didn't respond with any of the same gutter tactics that were being employed against me.

I stuck to the facts and spoke the truth on every matter as it was brought up and truly within the courtroom setting it was a matter of “he said / she said” and though my lawyer was able to corner her on multiple occasions and point out how she had lied previously under testimony it seems in the grand scheme of things that it has done my case no good.

One of the items as might be imagined that I had leveled off against me like a loaded gun by her lawyer was, “So you believe that the earth is flat?”

Response, “Yes, I do.”

That may seem a simple enough answer in retrospect, but I assure you that when you’re in a courtroom setting fighting for the lives of your children that is no simple answer to give.

Why?

Because it makes you look crazy in the eyes of the broader public is why and in some degree questions like that and others attributed to a final ruling by the judge granting my wife with a greater amount of custody of the children than was afforded to me, along with a tiebreaker advantage in terms of health and education decisions in regards to the children.

I am not happy at all with the results of where telling the truth has got me. In fact, my guts are practically eaten out by it both literally and physically.

My children are in the hands of a demoness that views them more like ants meant to do her every bidding than children that I would gladly sacrifice my life for. Did I make the wrong decision in court to answer as I did?

The answer is no.

Lying is never permissible. If everything was to go down again I would still testify that, “Yes, I believe the Earth is flat.”

Why?

Because in the most literal sense of it, I have been tested by God to see where my allegiances are. When I gave up writing to suit the whims of my wife, I gave up on myself for a time.

When I testified to the truth as I’ve come to see it and have outlined previously in great detail in this book I actively chose my relationship with God over the love I have for my children. I fulfilled what Jesus said in Matthew 10:37 “..... The person who loves son or daughter more than Me is not worthy of Me.”

I neither lied in court nor did I forsake my faith, and yes, it is now a part of my faith in God in believing that the earth is flat, and this is primarily derived as such because the word of God simply says so if you read it and take it at face value, which is the only way God’s words were ever meant to be taken.

This is the simple truth of my reality and as a result, my answer in court had to be as simple as, “Yes, I believe the Earth is flat.”

Now to the judge’s credit, she actually spoke up and asked my wife’s lawyer, “You actually want to say that he’s unfit to be a parent because he believes the earth is flat?”

I don’t remember the exact response of my wife’s lawyer, but it could be summed up in one word, “Absolutely!”

So to the reader of this book, yes, believing that the earth is flat and then telling others about it can very well lead to you being called crazy. Worse yet seemingly is the potential to lose what you value most in life out of taking such a stance.

I take encouragement in and encourage others to as well in the promise made by Jesus Christ in Matthew 10:39, “anyone finding his life will lose it and anyone losing his life because of Me will find it.”

Another flat earth believer and author, Rob Skiba, who I don’t know personally, shared his own trials of waking up one day and gradually coming to the conclusion that almost everything he believed about the shape of the earth and the mechanics of its motion was a lie and that the Earth is flat or at least something very close to it and not going anywhere. He’s the author of several biblically-based books and makes a living off of his books along with guest presentations on various topics that pertain to his books.

He has his own YouTube channel and in one video he openly shared how Christians, many of them ones he considered to be his friends, literally turned their backs on him when he started talking about a flat earth. His book sales plummeted seemingly overnight.

The cost for pursuing the truth was very high for him, just as it has been for me and I don’t think we are just two isolated stories.

I don’t know what the background of the situation was, but one flat Earth YouTube channel, My Perspective, just disappeared overnight for months. The channel is back now, but without countless videos that one after the other proved through the use of perspective that a spinning ball simply doesn't have any basis in either reality or the geometric walls of perspective that every artist uses to invoke artistry and this earth that we live on is truly a work of artistry.

Many of this channel's former videos are in backup playlists made by fans of his work and I encourage you to seek them out. Many people talk a lot about the topic of a flat earth, but the number of those who conclusively prove a point with every video released by either mathematical principles, the use of the laws of perspective, or other discernible and reproducible principles is a bit more rare.

As I said I don't know why his channel went down without any explanation, but I can say that there is an incredible amount of heat even threats of severity of all kinds leveled against the flat earth believing community. One channel owner showed results of how YouTube itself deleted or lost 3 million flat earth search results in a 12 hour span in 2017.

The reality of this quest for the truth of what the earth is actually shaped like is no longer just a movement comprised of a few hundred or even thousands. Millions of people worldwide are waking up and throwing out old lies that simply won't do anymore and yes the cost of doing that can be very high.

Believing that the earth is flat can and indeed will make things difficult if not hellish for you, but if you are a lover of the truth, if you believe that the Word of God, the Bible, is true, then you have no other choice.

This book that I've written to help convince others of the truth that I have found has hopefully accomplished two things. I hope that it has eliminated ignorance.

Secondly, I hope it's made the case for why a Christian has no other choice but to believe a flat earth picture of our created construct because there is no other valid interpretation that differs from what the words of God say on the topic.

My duty as a believer in Jesus Christ is not to conform to the ways of the world, but rather it is my duty to shine the light of the truth that is alive in me with everyone who will listen. What you do with what you hear is on your head.

Ridicule me, belittle me, troll me with nasty insults, threaten me, or perhaps agree with me – regardless, your decision is on your head so make it good, because one way or another you're going to have to wear it. Whether it's a crown of disgusting refuse or a crown of honor the decision is in your hands and the journey to further discovery that now lies ahead of you is one best suited with a close relationship with God firmly in place first, because your chances of surviving without Him helping you are virtually none.

There are many deceptions that take place in this world and the deceptions about this world itself are no less varied, but there is one truth above all others and that is Jesus Christ and what He did for all of us who walk this earth.

In terms of the flat earth debate, I can think of no greater situational occurrence of a testimony for the need of faith than a flat world in line with God's own spoken word to testify as to how incredibly important it is to be made right with your

Creator through the redeeming blood of Jesus Christ and perhaps therein lies the reason for why the god of this world, Satan, has lied about the true realities of earth in a more grandiose fashion than seemingly everything else he lies about to humans.

My encouragement to all readers is to stop conforming to what others believe and seek out the reality of what it is it you should be believing and the way to do this is to get right with God today and when you lift that relationship with Him in terms of value higher than all others in your life then the path forward will become much more clearer to you. None of us that put all of our trust in God will be disappointed in the end, because my God is not a liar and while my day in an earthly court in contention for the livelihood and happiness of my children may be over, my case remains open in the courts of heaven, even as I have a faith in God that just won't die, even as I have a Savior in Jesus Christ in whom and through whom all things have been made possible to me.

The costs of having faith in God are high, but paid out only in a few brief mortal moments, while the realities of God's joy washing over you because of the righteous decisions you make in this physical life bound within a matrix of time will play out over all of eternity.

The big picture can be hard to see in the moment of turmoil's greatest angst, but God is faithful and able to deliver both them who put their trust and expectations in Him and I pray that He will help all of you who are seeking the truth

even as He has been my friend through the midst of choosing Him above all else.

Chapter Ten

A Song

Do you believe in Jesus Christ the Master of all life?

Do you know His Father's ways are the very best way to go?

Do you know that loving God will take everything?

Do you know that it is worth losing everything as long as you remain in Him?

I do, because His Words tell me so.

They tell me that I haven't lost anything.

They tell me that I have passed the test of all life's journeys.

What will you do if you don't choose the Way of the Most High?

Where will you go and what will you do without the Author of all life guiding you?

How will you hold yourself in the dark of the night and find comfort when He's not by your side?

What will you say when life is over and your days come up to speak against you?

Oh, don't be the one who perishes out on your own!

Be obedient and seek the light of Jesus Christ while it is still day.

The night is coming when all decisions are final.

There is no going back to the way things used to be.

Tomorrow can be an even better day, but it just might not be.

It's okay if you don't rely on yourself to get through whatever life may come to be.

It's part of faith to simply let go and say, "God have Your way with me!"

My days are Yours and I will seek no other, no, not even my own will.

I have forsaken all because of You!

Oh God, how can it be that just so recently, after so many years, I'm finally loving You just like You've always loved me?

Today, let it be said that there's no better way than to follow all of God's words to the end of life and into what lies beyond.

For His Words say how it should be and they are alive and all creation obeys.

So whatever my fate may be it will be spent in love with Thee.

Though I walk alone I am not without hope for You encourage me.

All You ask in return is everything and I say, "Yes, Lord."

Oh my God, finish Your work in me!

The End is just the Beginning

Some Notes by the Author

Worthwhile 'Links' to aid you in your discovery learning process.

Note: I do not support all ideas/notions presented by some of these individuals and so do be wise and practice caution, and above all, before accepting a new belief about anything please do pray about it. May your eyes be opened by God alone to the real truth that only His Spirit can reveal to you.

- Truth Center Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jSxsVicp5uM>
- My Perspective Channel:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IC4l0Sa_y7Q
- Mike Helmick Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AoS3pe94qMk>
- MrThriveAndSurvive Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VaUBrui9LI1>
- BIOlogicallyToXious Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=fF2ZCNKLjOg>
- ScrawnyToBrawny Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=bdxgIyEPCxk>
- Rob Skiba Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DfBRyQxW90E>
- Mark Sargent Channel: https://www.youtube.com/user/mark-ksargent/featured?disable_polymer=1
- The Truth is stranger than fiction Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=VcU1SmvSz9s>
- Jeranism Channel: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DgI5fnd-nBXA>
- ODD Reality Channel:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8udts8Un4m4&list=PLm6Vq0bTTCDj8fuDVfqcytiuxbVj_Lyq4
- Celebrate Truth Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=qpLXN93Qs1s>
- The Morgile Channel:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=60Du0G7FA_Y
- Waykiwayki Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5YQ0dMJEjsk>
- Bart Sibrel Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xciCJfbTvE4>
- Beyond the Imaginary Curve Channel:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ETSxR_gKOO

- Plane Ranger Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Hmtj1ow0ezg>
- Dan Dimension Channel:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=D0xIitl16oA>
- Planet Plane Eric Dubay Channel:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-Ax_YpQsy88

Flat Earth Fictionary Narratives by Guy S. Stanton, III

The books below are all mine and are written from the standpoint of a flat earth perspective as would be discerned from a Biblical point of view and a scientific one for that matter. I have written several previous series that all featured space travel and enormous amounts of sci-fi action, but these were all done before I came to an awakening consciousness as to the truth of the ground beneath me. Those books do not reflect the true reality that I have come to see as existing now, but they are still very good reads. The books listed below, however began being written as I made my transformation out of being a ball earth believer and as such they may well be the only fictional books on the market that showcase flat earth beliefs of an enclosed and domed world. I hope you find the time to enjoy them sometime and by all means let me know what you think about them, along with any suggestions you care to offer.

Prayers always greatly appreciated!

Reviews are Greatly Appreciated! I'm a self-published author and without you, the reader, letting others know what you think of what I have written I have very little chance of being discovered, so if you like my books please leave a review or at the very least tell someone positively about them. I thank you in advance to all those who faithfully do this. Sincerely, Guy Stanton III-

Contact Info: guysactionwords@gmail.com

Website: www.a-warriors-pen.com

Goodreads Page: Guy Stanton III

Facebook Page: <https://www.facebook.com/guysactionwords>

YouTube Channel: Words of Action - Christian Fiction at its Best! Make sure to check out my new video, Flat Earth = Ancient Common Knowledge. The first video of many I hope that will feature narrative by me on a variety of topics. While you're there you can check out my previously released book trailers. Enjoy!

Donation Opportunity: I have always looked at my writing as a ministry and at this point in time nothing has changed in this mission. I have graced the bestseller lists at Amazon a number of times, alas, only during free book promotions. I guess what I'm honestly trying to say is that at this point in time monetarily speaking, I have invested more capital in writing, book cover design, website production, and promotion than I have ever received in return through book sales. While it is regrettable in terms of my hopes of being able to support my family via this avenue of literary endeavors, I have never regretted any of the money I have spent to reach the lost or entertain the masses with something good and God honoring to read. This remains the case and moving forward I will continue to fight the good fight, whether I receive anything back in this lifetime as compensation for it or not. In my life I have often been a loner in terms of getting things done, but in the adversity I have experienced in the past two years I have come to realize the benefits of having friends directly involved in the battle trenches of life and how much better it is not to face life's issues alone. I see an opportunity to build a network of dedicated Christian men (no offense meant ladies) that are talented in different areas, but all have something meaningful to bring to the table. I have a work friend that was born to evangelize, but who's going to give an ex-convict a chance? I have my best friend who is the rock I've learned to lean on who is being called into podcasting and trust me he is good at it! I'm thinking of calling the web platform, A Few Good Men. In short, it will be a platform for us to all help and cross promote each other in our differing avenues, It is my hope that we can build a community of likeminded individuals that has a variety of content and that is an active visitor / listener / watcher / reader participatory space. This is my vision. I could work to front all the money for this endeavor and it would actually be easier for me than asking for it, but again, I've had it put on my heart to offer the opportunity to others to take part in financing this venture. I have no timetables of completion or anything like that. Everything is very organic at the moment and details are still being worked out, but if you feel led by God to donate money that will be spent to the accomplishment and upkeep of this endeavor I have outlined I would be very appreciative. Prayers also wonderfully appreciated and perhaps together we can build something motivational and entirely driven by having faith in God in the present.

Donation Details: The only means I have of currently accepting donations is via PayPal and if you feel inclined to give then get in contact with me and I will send you the email address needed in order to donate and at the same time it will allow me to build a contact list so that I can update you in the future as to advancements in achieving the stated goal of having a multiple platform witnessing outreach avenue to reach everyone with the Gospel of Jesus Christ via the best efforts of A Few Good Men.

Thank you for reading!

Guy S. Stanton, III

Mark 8:36, Version HCSB

“For what does it benefit a man to gain the whole world yet lose his life?”

I'm a redeemed ordinary person intent on bringing my Heavenly Father, pleasure and a return on the priceless investment that He has made into my life. I'll never be able to fully repay Him, but my goal is to try and when my time comes to go that I'll be caught away in the very act of still trying to do so.

Sincerely,

Guy S. Stanton III – Author of Christian Fiction with an Edge
HCSB